GERMAN ARMIES CRUSHED FROM ALBERT TO THE OISE.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The French, proceeding eastward after their capture of Montdidier at midday, have advanced their lines to an average depth of six miles on the front extending from Andechy, which is seven miles northeast of Montdidier, to Elincourt, lying ten miles southeast of the captured city, according to the war office statement issued tonight. Great numbers of prisoners and guns have been taken in the Allies' victorious onsweep.

BOPP CASE AND ROCHE

Bearing on Rolph's Campaign.

Mayor's Political Lieutenant Counsel for the Bopp Dynamiters.

Roche Acted for German Spies While He was Police Commissioner.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10.—In a labored article the San Francisco Bulletin attempts to justify the selection by Mayor Rolph of San Francisco of Theodore Roche, attorney of record for Franz Bopp and other alien enemies, as president of the San Francisco Police Commission and manager of Rolph's campaign for the Republican and Democratic nominations for Governor.

Bopp, Von Schack, Kaufmann, [illegible] and the other dynamiters and alien enemies defended by Mayor Rolph's lieutenant, Theodore Roche, while he was head of the Police Commission and could have access to the police records, plans and secrets concerning alien enemies. All these defendants were found guilty as charged and are now serving terms in a Federal penitentiary.

The Bulletin does not try to conceal the fact that Mr. Roche is personally interested in Mayor Rolph's gubernatorial campaign. In the opening paragraph of the article it refers to "Attorney Theodore Roche, president of the San Francisco Police Commission and one of Mayor Rolph's campaign managers." It then refers to "Roche's visit to Los Angeles recently in connection with Rolph's campaign for Governor." The Bulletin asserts that Mr. Roche's acceptance of the Bopp and Hindu cases was an act of loyalty, that they had a right to be defended and that it was a patriotic duty to represent them as counsel.

Yes, it was Roche's duty as a law-

SEMENOFF DEFEATS RED GUARD FORCES.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WILSON REFUSES TO INDORSE VARDAMAN.

RE-ELECTION OF SENATOR HELD CONDEMNATION OF PRESIDENT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

JACKSON (Miss.) Aug. 10.—President Wilson, through a letter to Myron O'Neil, an attorney of Hazelhurst, Miss., has declared that should the voters of Mississippi re-elect Senator James K. Vardaman to the United States Senate, he would regard "their action as a condemnation of my administration," as Senator Vardaman "has been conspicious among the Democrats in the Senate for his opposition to the administration."

The President's letter follows:

"Replying to your letter of the 23rd of July, let me say that it is always with the utmost hesitation that I venture to express an opinion about candidates for election, either to the Senate or the House because I feel that it is not from any point of view my privilege to suggest to the voters of a State what their action shall be.

"But upon questions of fact, I am at liberty to speak. You call my attention to certain statements made on behalf of Senator Vardaman, in which an effort is made to create the impression that I would not regard the return of Senator Vardaman to the Senate as a verdict against the present administration.

"Such statements are calculated to put a very false face upon Senator Vardaman's candidacy. Senator Vardaman has been conspicuous among the Democrats in the Senate for his opposition to the administration. If the voters of Mississippi should again choose him to represent them, I not only have no right to object; I would have no right in any way to criticise them.

"But I should be obliged to accept their action as a condemnation of my administration, and it is only right that they should know this before they act."

AMERICANS FOUND TO BE IN PICARDY FIGHT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The British War Office official statement today on the drive in Picardy reveals for the first time the fact that American troops are taking part in this smashing blow there against the enemy. The identity of the unit or units is not known.

The news that Americans actually are in the fighting and have won "a considerable success" was received here with gratification.

BERLIN GIVES CREDIT FOR ALLIES TO FOG.

ALSO SWITCHES MERITS OF BRITISH TO CANADIANS AND AUSTRALIANS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 10. — The Anglo-French successes are attributed to their surprise attacks and the presence of a thick fog over the battlefield, according to a Berlin telegram received here, quoting a semi-official German news agency.

"Notwithstanding the exceedingly favorable ground for the movement of great masses of troops and the operations of tanks, the initial success of the Anglo-French armies under Field Marshal Haig have not surpassed the limits which usually resulted from a first day's offensive," the agency declares.

"A certain loss in guns and prisoners in such circumstances is unavoidable, but the enemy has not reached any of his strategic goals. His gain of ground is the less important because it comprises no consolidated system of defense, but was maneuvering ground where the fighting which started March 21 has not yet come to a conclusion."

Another semiofficial utterance telegraphed from Berlin says Field Marshal Haig undertook the attack to restore the badly tarnished military prestige of Great Britain and asserts that "as usual" the brunt of the battle was not borne by the English, but by Canadians and Australians.

RIOTS IN DETROIT ON SIX-CENT FARES.

AMERICANS, BRITISH, FRENCH POUNDING HUNS FROM FRANCE BY VICTORIOUS ONSLAUGHTS.

Victorious Allied Forces Pressing Hard on Retreating Teutons Crush All Resistance; Thousands of Prisoners and Vast Amount of War Supplies are Captured; Every Objective Attained.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Montdidier fell to the French First Army, which had been operating south of Montdidier, according to the British War Office announcement tonight. Many prisoners and great quantities of material were taken by the French. The general line reached by the Allies in the Albert-Montdidier sector now runs from Lihons to Fresnoy-les-Roye, Lignieres and Conchy-les-Pots. The statement added that the number of prisoners was increased.

The text of the communication follows

"The attack launched yesterday evening in accordance with the Allied plan of operations on our right by the French First Army south of Montdidier was developed by our Allies this morning with complete success. Enveloped from the north and from the southeast Montdidier fell into the hands of the French before midday, together with many prisoners and great quantities of material.

"During the remainder of the day the advance of the French First Army continued with the co-operation of the French army on its right and the right wing of the British Fourth Army. Pressing hard upon the retreating German troops south of Lihons, the British troops have overcome the enemy's resistance and made substantial progress.

"The general line reached by the Allied troops now runs virtually north and south from Lihons to Fresnoy-les-Roye, Lignieres and Conchy-les-Pots. The number of prisoners was increased."

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 10.—North of the Ancre the British have firmly established their positions and are pushing out patrols toward Braye.

The Germans throughout the day were retiring all along the line, endeavoring to save whatever they could as the French launched their new attack against Montdidier.

The French attack resulting in the taking of Montdidier is considered as most significant, as the Allies have now penetrated far into the enemy lines in the Amiens district. The Germans are retreating rapidly out of the pocket of which Montdidier was the apex.

BOTH ARMIES BEYOND THEIR OBJECTIVES.

The Americans and British have now advanced beyond their objectives north of the Somme. The whole of the Chipilly spur is now in their possession after fighting of the most desperate character.

The casualties of the Americans were not more than was to be expected, considering the bitterness of the fighting.

Details of the brilliant battle which the Americans and British fought for the spur are now available. In order to go over the top at the appointed time yesterday afternoon Americans were forced to make a rapid march, in the last part of which they ran so as to be in the fight.

Hurried on their way by the advancing Allies on the Amiens-Somme battlefield, the Germans throughout the day retired all along the line, attempting to save whatever they could. The elements of the German divisions became badly confused in their operations through trying to hold up the Allies in their several attacks. It was a victorious day for the Allies who smashed all the German resistance.

GUNS OF GERMANS NO LONGER DOMINATE AMIENS RAILROAD.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON (via Montreal) Aug. 10.—Speaking at a luncheon today at Newport, Monmouthshire, Premier Lloyd George emphasized the importance of the pushing back of the Germans from within gun range of the Amiens railway.

"Hundreds of trains used to pass through Amiens daily," the Premier said, "but we were temporarily deprived of its use until recently when we were able to employ twenty trains daily. Amiens is now safe through the recent Allied triumphs on the Marne and the Somme, which were due to the unity of command.

"Those two great victories have resulted in the capture of between 50,000 and 60,000 prisoners and between 800 and 900 guns."

MILITARY SITUATION.

COMMENT BY NOTED EXPERT.

By Maj.-Gen. F. W. Maurice.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright.]

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The promise of yesterday's news has been more than fulfilled and it already is possible, without undue optimism, to say that we have gained a substantial success.

Amiens has been relieved from the menace which has threatened it for so many months, while the important junction at Longneau, just to the east of the town, and the Amiens-Clermont railroad have been freed. These results are of a very real value, for it is not possible to contemplate with equanimity the prospect of facing the winter without being able to make full use of the important communications passing through Amiens.

The feature of the battle so far has been the depth of the ground gained in the first days of the fighting. I do not think that in any battle in the west since trench warfare started, either we or our Allies or the Germans ever before succeeded in making a first advance of seven miles.

TANKS GREAT HELP.

It is evident that the tanks had a good deal to do with making this possible. They must now have definitely established their reputation in the army, which is a matter of the greatest importance. Soldiers are naturally conservative and slow to give their confidence to a new weapon or a new arm of service till it has proved its worth. Our first tanks were slow, frequently got into difficulties and often failed to fulfill the high expectations which had been formed of them, with the not unnatural result that both the commanders and

CROWN PRINCE HATED BY ARMY.

Kaiser's Hopeful Blamed by Soldiers for the Marne Disaster.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Reuter's Limited correspondent with the British army in France sends the following dispatch concerning the German Crown Prince:

"According to the statements of prisoners, the German Crown Prince appears to be the most unpopular leader in the German army. He is accused by it of being directly responsible for the Marne disaster. They say that the opinion is widely expressed by German soldiers that the Crown Prince's amateurish interference with the plans of their experienced generals was the starting point for the present crushing misfortunes of the German armies."

BATTLE SUMMARY

WHOLE HUN ARMY RETREATS.

[Undated War Resume by the Associated Press.]

The French have driven the Germans before them for an important gain east of Montdidier in Picardy. That city, which was the apex of a German salient that now has been wiped out, fell to the French First Army at mid-day Saturday. Before nightfall, according to the French War Office statement, the victorious French forces had carried the battle line onward to an average depth of six miles on a front of approximately twenty miles.

In the three days of engagements that culminated in the taking of Montdidier the French took 8000 prisoners. Their captures also included 200 guns and an enormous amount of material.

Crushed by the impact of the British, French and American offensive on the battle line from Albert, northeast of Amiens, to the Oise River, north of Compiegne, German forces are streaming back toward the Somme River and the Nesle-Noyon Canal. So far as can be determined, the enemy is in full retreat all along the front against which the Allies flung themselves on Thursday morning. It is reported from Paris that French patrols are in Chaulnes, the principal German center, west of the Somme.

Montididier, at the tip of the German salient in Picardy, has been taken by the Allies, who cut off large numbers of the enemy when they sought to beat a retreat from the city. Thousands of prisoners were taken there by the Allies, it is reported.

North of the Somme stubborn enemy resistance at Chipilly spur, a height which dominated the whole valley of the Somme in that region, has been broken and the Germans north of the river have joined their comrades in retiring.

FRENCH BREAK THROUGH.

South of Montdidier, the French have plunged through the German lines in the hills west of the Matz River and are reported to be in the valley of the stream at Marqueglise. When the situation is studied on a map it can be seen that the Germans are in a serious position east of Montdidier. The Allies have closed in on Chaulnes and have had their junction south of that town under artillery fire for two days. If Chaulnes is lost to the Germans they will be forced to make a long, perilous march eastward over country roads toward Noyon. The rapid progress of the French below Montdidier has placed even this road under fire and made it almost impossible as an avenue of escape.

In the center the Germans are reported to be in full retreat. Allied airmen have seen roads filled with German motor lorries and have been active in bombing these lines of transport. The bridges of the Somme River south of Peronne are under fire and the one at Peronne is reported to have been broken. This will throw new complications in the German high command's task of extricating its shattered armies from the field where they have been defeated.

It now appears that the Ger-

On the Vesle.

AMERICANS REPULSE THE FOE'S DESPERATE BLOWS.

Vicious German Attacks by Air and Land Fail Before Our Terrific Gunfire.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE VESLE FRONT, Aug. 10.—In attempting to dislodge the French and Americans from positions north of the Vesle River on both sides of Fismes, the Germans launched repeated counter-attacks, which began just before dark Friday night and continued until Saturday morning.

There was desperate fighting in the region of Fismette, where the German attacks were repulsed by the Americans, who were clinging to the outskirts of the village.

In the region of Bazoches the Germans made several vicious attacks, but the Allies successfully fought them off.

The Germans began with airplane attacks, the aviators attempting to bomb infantry men north of the Vesle and bridges over which other troops were passing. French and American anti-aircraft guns beat off the German flyers, however.

Just after dark the Germans launched an artillery attack which steadily increased in volume until nearly daylight, when the Franco-Americans counter-attacked with such force that the Germans were forced to lessen the volume of their fire.

During the night the Germans attacked Fismette three times and once after daylight Saturday.

From the region southeast of Braisne to Fismes, the Franco-Americans put down such a terrific barrage that the Germans were stopped.

Saturday morning the Teutons started another attack along the same line, but heavy artillery quickly checked this assault. The enemy used much gas in attempting to dislodge the Americans from Fismette. Infantrymen plentifully supplied with machine guns also made futile attacks.

The Americans discovered Saturday that the Germans in counter-attacking Friday night and Saturday morning used "glass ball" shrapnel containing stones of a marble shape, some of them a half-inch in diameter and others three-fifths of an inch. American officers said that this was their first acquaintance with shrapnel of this nature.

A peculiar wound inflicted on an American soldier led to the discovery that the Germans were using glass missiles. The French and the Americans made a search of the district along the Vesle and found one unexploded shell and it has been turned over to the ordnance experts for examination.

DOWN TWO HUN FLLERS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

German Armies, Cut to Pieces, Nowhere Able to Organize for Severe Counter Stroke.

Weakening.

CRUSHED ENEMY OFFERS BUT FEEBLE RESISTANCE.

Only Two Divisions of Reserves Are Identified—Montdidier Falls, Foe's Escape Difficult.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 10, 4:41 p.m.—The advance of the Allied armies on the Picardy front continued today, according to the latest dispatches reaching London this afternoon. Nowhere, it appears, have the Germans yet been able to organize for any severe counter-stroke.

The guns captured by the Allies are now nearly 400 in number.

No further count of prisoners had come in at this hour, but the total probably is mounting rapidly because of the disorganization of the enemy.

The Allied casualties including all the killed, wounded and missing are less than 6000 or not more than one-fourth of the number of prisoners counted. On the other hand the German casualties have been tremendously heavy.

Eleven German divisions have not only been defeated in the fighting of the last three days, but so utterly crushed that the German higher command has been unable to make any counter-stroke anywhere.

The German communications have been so disorganized that thus far only two divisions of reserves have been identified and these new troops have not been able to make any impression on the advancing Allies.

AMERICANS PUSH AHEAD.

No further definite news from the American forces on the northern flank of the fighting front has reached London since noon, when the accounts of their successes in the Morlancourt region were at hand. There is every indication, however, that they are pushing ahead steadily, according to the Allied plan.

The latest news from the French was that they had captured the towns of Saulchoy and Davenescourt. (Saulchoy is about five miles northeast of Montdidier.)

FOE TRYING TO ESCAPE.

The advices from the French around Montdidier stated that they were meeting no severe resistance and that the Germans undoubtedly were trying hard to escape from the nasty salient.

The eleven German divisions which the Allies have torn to pieces are already in such condition that they can be of little use to the German command for a long time to come, and probably some of them can never be reformed. The two new divisions which appeared on the front were rushed down the two principal arteries of communications. It is along these arteries, however, that the Allied forces are strongest, particularly in cavalry and tanks and two divisions were far too few in number to stem the onrushing tide.

SCREEN OF TANKS.

It is not easy to delineate the line as it stands this afternoon, for along the whole front the Allied forces have thrown screens of tanks.

Cavalry and infantry pickets in scattered localities a long distance in advance, preparing the way for further penetration. The actual line now solidly held may be conservatively described, however, as running as follows:

From Albert to Meracourt-sur-Somme to Proyart, west of Chaulnes and on to Rouvroy; thence east of Bouchoir east of Faverolles and Piennes, east of Mortimer and thence to Ricquebourg and Marqueglise.

The French are on the line from the Roye road southward, while the British line runs northward from this road. The Americans are on the narrow front north of the Somme.

FRENCH TAKE MONTDIDIER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The important town of Montdidier, which was approximately at the apex of the German salient south of the Somme, has been captured by the Allies.

French troops attacked at 4 o'clock this morning on the line between Montdidier and the River Oise on a front of approximately sixteen miles and at 10 a.m. had scored an advance of four miles, according to news received shortly after noon today.

The French line at that hour ran through Favrolles, Piennes, Rollet, Cuvilly, Ressons-sur-Metz and Vignemont. This line puts Montdidier behind the French line.

By 9 o'clock this morning Montdidier had been surrounded.

Only a small number of Germans with machine guns were then inside the town.

According to the latest advices, the front now runs through Dernancourt, on the Ancre south of Albert, through Tailles Wood, two miles east of Morlancourt; Chipilly on the Somme about two and one-half miles southeast of Morlancourt; Proyart, some three miles southeast of Chipilly; Lihons, about two miles west of Chaulnes, Meharicourt, two and one-half miles southwest of Lihons; Rouvroy, two miles southwest of Meharicourt; Bouchoir, two and one-half miles southwest of Rouvroy; Boussicourt, about four miles north of Montdidier and Gratibus, about two and one-half miles slightly to the northwest of Montdidier, on the Avre.

Gratibus was still in German hands at the last advices.

PICARDY BATTLE SPREADING.

The Picardy battle is spreading to the south of Arras, the Pall Mall Gazette says this afternoon. Heavy fighting occurred this morning in the battle area, with the Allies making satisfactory progress and taking large numbers of prisoners.

One hundred additional German guns have been taken by the Allies.

Canadian cavalry, which is operating close to Chaulnes, report that the enemy is fighting strong rear-guard actions in order to enable the stores of ammunition and guns to be removed from that town.

The new attack by the French has extended the battle line some sixteen miles further to the southeast in the Montdidier area. In this movement the French scored an advance of four miles in six hours.

CHAULNES UNDER FIRE.

To the north the important junction of Chaulnes is now quite untenable for the Germans, as it is well within the fire of the British field guns.

The 100 guns added to the 300 previously captured by the Allies were taken by the French in this morning's fighting.

The opinion in London today was that the enemy could not now possibly hold any sort of a line until he reached the Somme and the canal from Nesle to Noyon. That would make a maximum retreat of twenty miles.

Rouhly speaking, the Allied advance in two days on a front of twenty miles has been twelve miles.

ALLIES STILL ADVANCING.

On the British front, splendid progress is being made and the average twelve-mile progress forward was an infantry advance with the cavalry, tanks and armored cars well ahead of the infantry and pressing the retreating enemy.

Information received in London shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon was that the French line was still advancing on both sides of Montdidier.

One important result has already followed the Allied plunge in the Somme region east of Amiens. The important Paris-Amiens railway, by way of St. Just, use of which had been blocked by the proximity of the German line, was working again last night.

HUNS ESCAPE CUT-OFF.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 9 (British wireless service.) — It is reported that the bridge over the Somme near Peronne has been broken. This fact, when taken in conjunction with the congested condition of the German transport service, will cause much difficulty to the enemy, should he endeavor crossing the river.

The prisoners taken vary in quality, but usually are of fine physique. The gas masks used by the Germans were poor and many of the prisoners threw them away on arriving at the cages where they are temporarily detained.

Valor.

WONDERFUL STAFF WORK HAIG'S VICTORY SECRET

Sixteen Minutes After Canadians Go Over Top Prisoners Filter Back.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES ON THE BATTLE FRONT, Aug. 10.—(By the Canadian Press.)—The Canadians went over the top at twenty minutes past four on August 8, and sixteen minutes afterward the first prisoners began to come in. By 8 o'clock a large part of the initial objectives had been captured.

For the first time, the Canadian cavalry found itself on the same battlefield with the infantry. Also it was the first time that Canadians fought side by side with their brethren from Australia.

The victory, however, is notable chiefly for the wonderful staff work that alone made it possible. There was no artillery preparation in the usual sense of the word. The men went in immediately behind the barrage and kept up with it as it lifted. The Boche was taken completely by surprise and prisoners were astounded to find they were surrendering to the Canadians.

EAGER FOR FRAY.

The Canadian soldiers never went into action with more irrepressible eagerness and determination not to be refused than they did Thursday. Behind the rampart of valor they had builded at Vimy and Arras they have laid all this spring and summer chafing that they were denied their opportunity of taking part alongside their cavalry and machine-gun brigades in stemming the tide of Hun invasion.

On Thursday, though tired from a march that permitted little rest before the battle, they went over the top with the unbeatable spirit of the men who fought and died at Ypres, on the Somme and in a dozen glorious fields.

It was a clear, starry night, with the faint light of dawn touching the eastern sky. Of a sudden, with one deafening pulse, the roar of guns broke out.

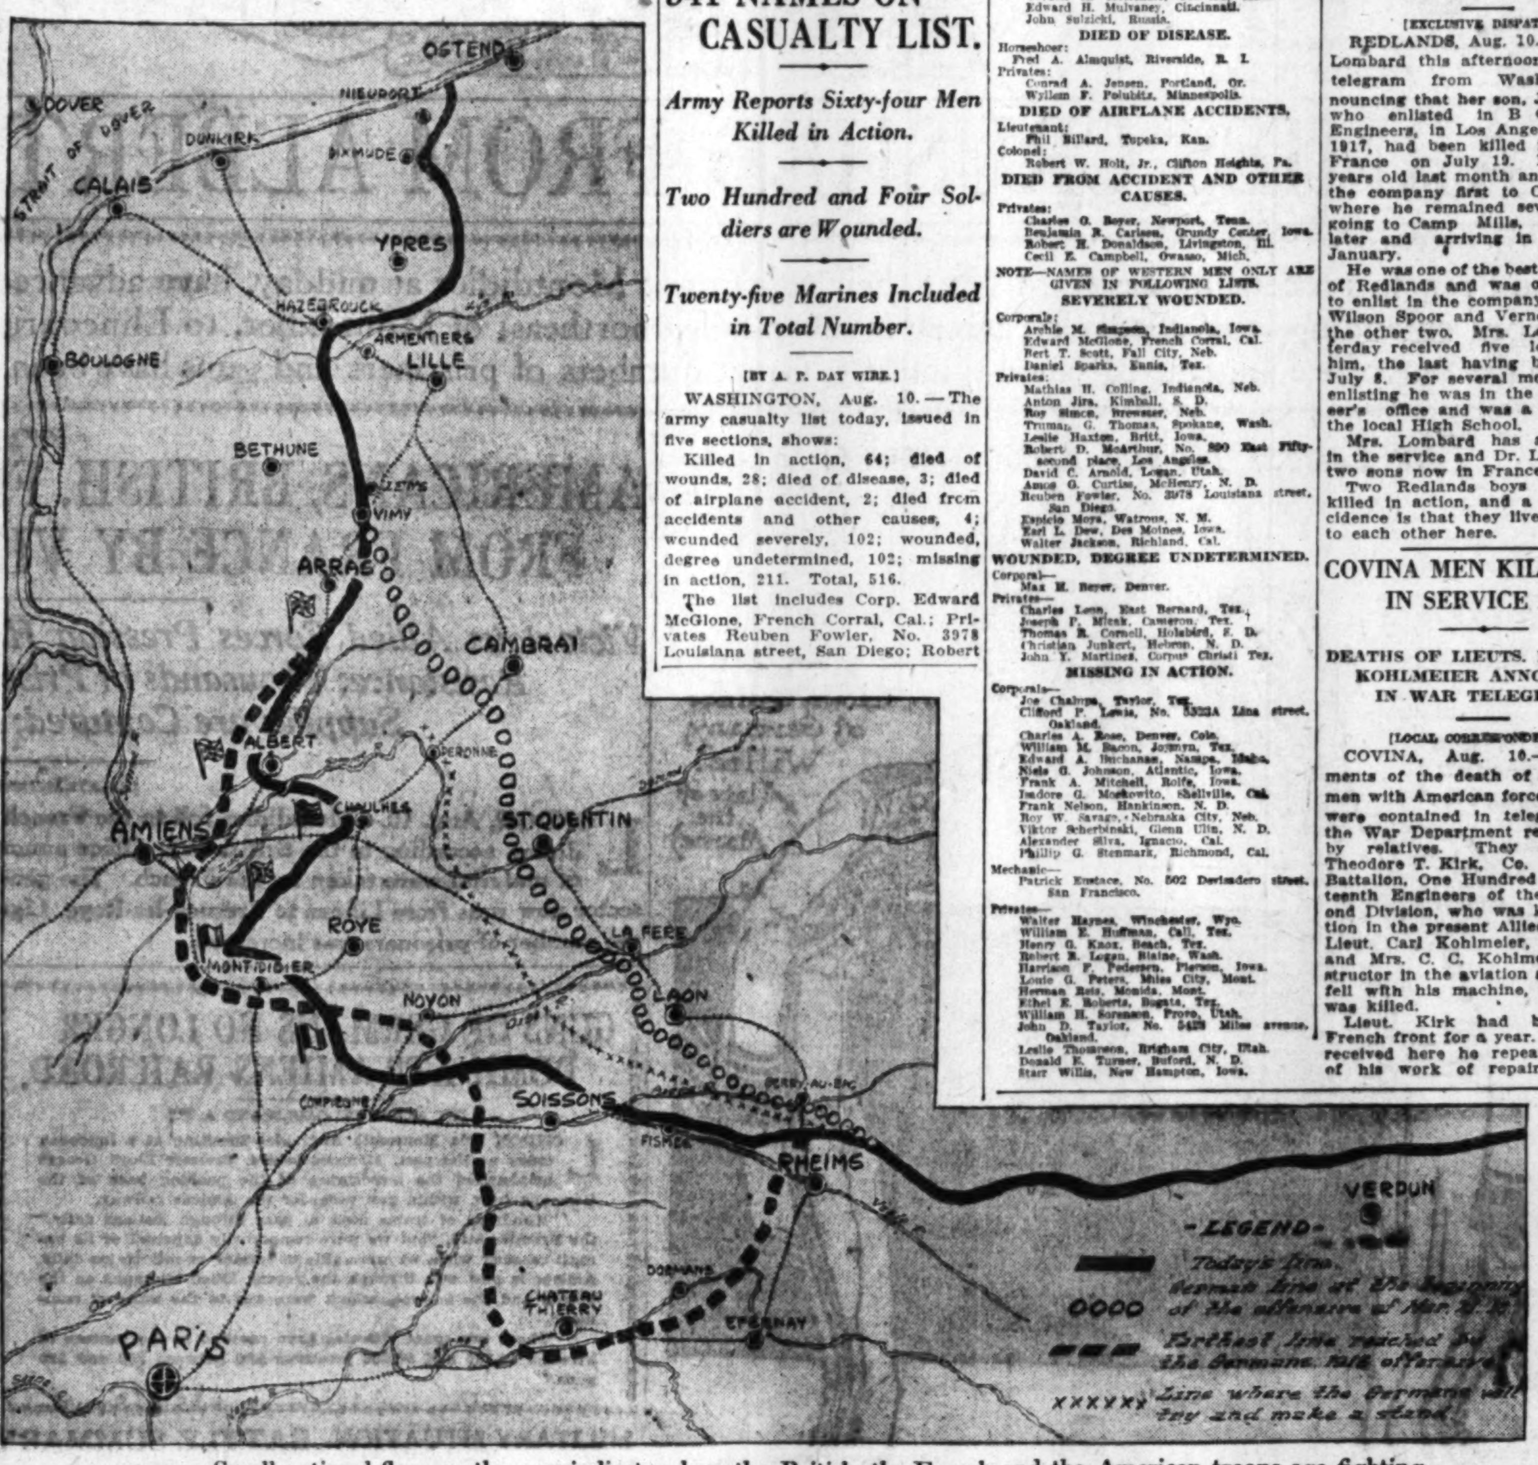
WHOLE FRONT WEAKENS.

Far to the right was the flicker of the French seventy-fives and the American field guns and heavies. Immediately on the Canadian flank the Australians put up a great show in a sector where they had fought for several days past. Beyond them the imperial troops were in action.

Unfortunately, on the first day's fighting as the dawn increased the visibility became poor. A dense fog swept down in the valleys. While this was protection against machine guns, it greatly increased the difficulty of the troops finding their way over unknown ground.

In the first day's fighting the Canadian losses were not unduly heavy. One unit had rather heavy casualties in its first attack, but succeeded in taking its objectives after the tanks had come to its reinforcement.

Showing Ground Retaken by Allies.



Small national flags on the map indicate where the British, the French and the American troops are fighting.

The battle lines as designated by the legend on the map indicate where the Germans were entrenched last March 21 when they began their great offensive between San Quentin and La Fere. This position is indicated by the line of circles; the heavy black line, broken, shows the position of the Germans at the point of their greatest gain this year. The heavy solid black line shows approximately the line of the Allied advance as indicated by the latest dispatches. The German retreat is so headlong that military experts believe they will not attempt to make a stand short of the line of the Aisne-Somme, as indicated on the map by the line of small crosses.

OTTAWA (Ont.) Aug. 10.—W. Elliott of San Francisco is listed among the wounded in today's overseas casualty list.

REDLANDS VOLUNTEER IS SLAIN IN FRANCE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, Aug. 10.—Mrs. C. S. Lombard this afternoon received a telegram from Washington announcing that her son, Joseph Pray, who enlisted in B Company of Engineers, in Los Angeles in April, 1917, had been killed in action in France on July 19. He was 21 years old last month and went with the company first to Camp Lewis, where he remained several weeks, going to Camp Mills, Long Island later and arriving in France in January.

He was one of the best-known boys of Redlands and was one of three to enlist in the company from here, Wilson Spoor and Verne Bay being the other two. Mrs. Lombard yesterday received five letters from him, the last having been written July 8. For several months before enlisting he was in the City Engineer's office and was a graduate of the local High School.

Mrs. Lombard has another son in the service and Dr. Lombard has two sons now in France.

Two Redlands boys have been killed in action, and a queer coincidence is that they lived next door to each other here.

COVINA MEN KILLED IN SERVICE A YEAR.

DEATHS OF LIEUTS. KIRK AND KOHLMEIER ANNOUNCED IN WAR TELEGRAMS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

COVINA, Aug. 10.—Announcements of the death of two Covina men with American forces in France were contained in telegrams from the War Department received here by relatives. They are, Lieut. Theodore T. Kirk, Co. F, Second Battalion, One Hundred and Seventeenth Engineers of the Forty-second Division, who was killed in action in the present Allied drive, and Lieut. Carl Kohlmeier, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Kohlmeier, an instructor in the aviation service, who fell with his machine, July 4 and was killed.

Lieut. Kirk had been on the French front for a year. In letters received here he repeatedly spoke of his work of repairing barbed wire entanglements and fortifications under fire. Many details of his platoon were at night in No Man's Land.

The lieutenant's wife, formerly Miss May Hull, arrived yesterday from Topeka, Kan., where she had been living with Mr. Kirk's parents since her husband went overseas. She did not know of her husband's death until she arrived here.

Lieut. Kohlmeier enlisted June 7, 1917, and went with a Los Angeles contingent to Allentown, Pa., for training in the Ambulance Corps. While there he transferred to the ground work of aviation and attended the school at Princeton University. He was sent to France, where he was detailed to a French school of aviation as an instructor. There he received his brevet. While in the air with a student on the Fourth of July he fell with the plane and was killed.

A brother officer at the school has forwarded an account of his death to his parents, formerly owners of the Mountainview ranch at Covina, and now living at No. 1054 Ingraham street, Los Angeles.

SOLID LINE OF INFANTRY CRUSHES HUN RESISTANCE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Anglo-French troops have gained the ascendancy. The line in Picardy is held solidly by infantry. Cavalry skirmishers are well in advance of it and preparing the way for further progress.

The Germans are relying on machine guns to stem the Allied tide, not wishing to risk capture of their artillery. The enemy is defending himself with desperate courage wherever the position affords means, and the officers are shooting down any soldiers who show symptoms of quitting.

The enemy is fighting against time—time for the German command to try to readjust itself and to limit the consequence of the blow.

Military observers here say the problem facing the rival commanders is easily defined. Marshal Foch struck at the point where the army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria and the German Crown Prince join, obliging the enemy hurriedly to reorganize the higher command and to place the armies of Gens. Von der Marwitz and Von Hutier under one chief. This operation has temporarily thrown the Germans off their balance and it is their object now to regain it.

That there must be a change in the German positions generally between the Somme and the Oise is evident. The German Eighteenth Army, which is commanded by Von Hutier, is deployed from Montdidier to the Oise. The country behind it is hilly and wooded, altogether unfavorable for the withdrawal of masses of men and material.

In a retreat Von Hutier would be obliged to use three highroads and two railroads, which converged on Roye like the spokes of a wheel. Beyond that town a retreat would be dependent upon the two roads toward Ham and the Somme, one direct and the other by way of Nesle.

From the geographical details it will be seen that Von Hutier in a retreat would be forced to squeeze his heavy artillery and convoys through Roye. It would be like putting them through a rolling mill, for the French advance troops are now six miles northwest of Roye, while the center of the German front is eleven miles south of that town.

BRITISH DOWN MANY GERMAN AIRPLANES.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Friday, Aug. 9.—Sixty-five German airplanes were destroyed by British aviators or driven down out of control in the fighting of August 8, when the Allied offensive in Picardy opened, tonight's official statement on aviation operations shows.

Fifty British machines are missing, the British losses being due chiefly to fire from the ground.

LOS ANGELES MAN IS WOUNDED IN FRANCE.

That Robert Duncan McArthur, who enlisted in Los Angeles a year ago in Co. F, One Hundred and Seventeen Regiment, Engineers, has been severely wounded in France, is the information received yesterday by the young soldier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McArthur, No. 890 East Fifty-second street. The government message, which is from Washington, simply read:

"Deeply regret to inform you that Robert McArthur, junior engineer, was severely wounded July 31. Department has no further information. Adjt.-Gen. McClain."

Mrs. McArthur immediately dispatched a cablegram to her son and expects to hear from him within a few days. Only the day before she received the sad message she had received a letter from her son, written July 3, in which he said: "All fine and dandy. Have been on the march and had no time to write. Love to you and father. Robert."

When McArthur enlisted he was first sent to Arcadia, thence to Palo Alto, from there went to New York and, after a few months, embarked for France, where he has been since November 1. The young man, who lived with his parents here, was formerly a mechanic with the Southern Gas Company and has many friends in Los Angeles.

MILITARY SITUATION.

troops were inclined to look upon them as broken reeds.

The new tank is in every way a very great advance upon its prototype, and it is quite clear from the reports we received that it not only had no difficulty in keeping pace with the infantry, but often left the footsore far behind. Foch's great counter-attack owes much of its success to the skillful employment of tanks in large numbers and now the tanks again have contributed largely to our success, and improved almost beyond recognition upon the first experiment at Cambrai.

This is a matter of the greatest consequence, for we quite clearly and definitely are ahead of the enemy in tanks, and need not fear he will be able to catch up with us.

SAVE BOMBARDMENT.

The barrier in the west was held to be impenetrable, because, for a time, we could find no other means of breaking through than a prolonged artillery bombardment. This advertised to the enemy the fact that we were about to attack, made surprise impossible and enabled him to hold his reserves in readiness to meet our onslaught.

Furthermore, the effect of a prolonged and intense bombardment was to destroy the surface of the ground to an extent which often made it a matter of the greatest difficulty for the infantry to go forward and to bring up supplies and ammunition when they had advanced. Recent experience has shown that with tanks a long bombardment is unnecessary, which in turn reintroduced surprise as a weapon of generalship, and made it possible to penetrate the barrier successfully. Therefore, the opening phase of these last two battles are full of promise for the future.

We must remember that Haig's blow is very different in its nature from Foch's. The latter attacked the Germans when they were deeply committed and so paralyzed their communications by his first advance that it was impossible for them to develop an organized counter attack. There is no parallel to this in the present battle, and Prince Rupprecht has considerable reserves at no great distance.

FOE BADLY CAUGHT.

It would therefore be not too much to expect that the first two days' progress could be continued at the same rate, and it would be no surprise if the enemy made a desperate effort to retrieve his position south of the Somme, where he is at present deeply compromised. As it is, it seems improbable that the enemy will be able to maintain himself in the salient between Roye and Montdidier, and if he can secure and hold the railway junction at Chaulnes, it is certain that the enemy must make a withdrawal, in some respects comparable with that which he has just carried out on the Marne front. The most the Germans can hope for at present is that their reserves will arrive in time to prevent such a disaster, and this must so weaken their offensive power as to throw them definitely on the defensive for some time to come.

The news that the enemy has mined roads and was making other preparation for a withdrawal is significant when taken in conjunction with other reports of his man-power difficulties consequent upon his losses on the Marne. It is impossible yet to say whether he was intending to economize his forces with a view to attacking in some other part of the line, but it is evident that whatever were his intentions, Sir Douglas Haig has struck in the nick of time, has upset his plans, and is on the way to shorten the front for him in a way which he will not like.

rman Position Declared to Be Very Awkward.

BY J. B. W. GARDNER,

Expert of New York "Times."

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Last Sunday's review closed just at the moment when the German retreat had reached its maximum speed. The attacks of the French and American forces had been incessant. The Germans had been struggling with every available strength, the men fighting with a determination never surpassed in the war—the Germans to hold, the Allies to advance.

It was beyond the bounds of human endurance that matters should continue. Someone had to yield. And it was the German who cracked first. When the break came it came suddenly, and the retreat, conducted nevertheless with consummate skill and with great success—witness the small losses in prisoners and in guns from the closing day of the great drive just south of Soissons—became, perforce, precipitate, and the Germans fell back all the way behind the Vesle. At several points they attempted to hold south of the river—notably at Fismes and at Braisne. They succeeded for one day. Then the American troops forced their way through the village, throwing the Germans back to the northern bank.

The Allies, however, were not content with this state of affairs, and they pressed the fighting in an endeavor to force the Germans back to the Aisne. They accordingly had to face the most stubborn opposition since the offensive started, and established bridgeheads on the northern bank of the Vesle at several points.

NORTH OF VESLE.

From this bridgehead they have been making strenuous efforts to develop. Some progress has been made, the heights north of the Vesle having been taken on a narrow front and at several points. It cannot be said yet, however, that the Allied position north of the Vesle is more thoroughly established. Either the German resistance has been too stiff to permit of an expansion northward, or Foch has not played his hand as strong as he was able to do. Whatever the reason may have been, however, it is a fact that the German positions behind the Vesle are still for the most part intact.

There is no reason to believe, however, that it is the German intention to make a permanent stand on the Vesle River. There appears no good reason why this should be so. The line of the Aisne—a line on which both the British and the French were so roughly handled after the first battle of the Marne—is a position of great strength defensively. Not only is that true, but behind this line there are other positions almost equally strong. Between the Vesle the country is generally low, with only occasional heights. Since Germany was falling back at all, and furthermore, as the Aisne is only a short distance from the Vesle, it would seem the better part of caution to fall back to the stronger barrier rather than to make a stand at the weaker.

VAIN ADVANTAGE.

There is only one advantage to the Germans in trying to hold to the northern bank of the Vesle, and that is the use of another offensive over the same ground. Obviously they have no desire to begin an offensive with the Aisne before them. It will be a much more difficult river to cross later than it was when the last offensive was made. If, therefore, the Germans consider making another such drive, now or in the future, they may try to hold onto what they have rather than to recross the much broader stream. German leaders know that there can never be such an offensive from that front. The Germans are now on the defensive, and must remain so. The last experiment was too disastrous a failure, and a military failure at such a ghastly expense in men and material, to leave any appetite for another such effort. There will never be a third battle of the Marne. The result of the Allied offensive has already be far-reaching. We have not take anything like the number of prisoners which certain reports indicated we would take. This was, after all, a gross error in judgment, brought about by sentimental causes. It had no basis in reason nor in fact. That was most disappointing to the American public, when they had every right to be elated over the truly great success we had won.

INITIATIVE IS OURS.

But the answer is to be found not in the number of prisoners we have or have not taken, nor even in the casualties we have inflicted, great as they undoubtedly are. The real victory lies in the complete overturning of the whole German plan for this year. Last week I stated that the retention by the Germans of the initiative will be a mere fiction. It is not even that now, it does not exist at all, as a fiction or otherwise. We have it and in all probability will continue to have it, until the German army surrenders or is destroyed. We have done more indeed to relieve the Aisne front of all danger of another offensive. We have performed the same function for the entire Champagne front as far as the heights of the Woevre.

The Germans had their chance when they were on the Marne with the Paris-Chalons railroad in their grasp. This line, the main means of supply to the army in the champagne, was definitely and positively cut. It has now been restored in full. The line then from Montdidier east would appear to be safe for the period of the war. That this is a fair presumption is evidenced by another great attack leveled against the German lines in Picardy on Thursday. Out of a perfectly clear sky, with no warning of any kind, the British and French began an attack early Thursday which promises even greater results than the attack against the Marne salient.

KNOW THEY'RE BEATEN.

As a matter of fact, as matters have since developed we are justified in the belief that no matter what the German General Staff may have to say to the public, in their own minds they know that Foch has beaten them, that he has wrested the initiative from them and that hereafter they must devote their powers to beating off his attacks. He can strike where he pleases and when he pleases and he proposes to make good use of the privilege.

Close on the heels of the German retirement came Thursday's attack. This attack may have had any one or all of several objects. I have said that along the Vesle the Allies found themselves held up. His attack might well be designed to force a let-up in the defense on this front. Germany would logically draw reinforcements for the Vesle fighting from the front from Albert south, it being the nearest point and most feasible. Similarly, if it were a question of reinforcement of the front between the Somme and the Avre, the reinforcements would probably come from the Aisne front, for the same reason. But this cannot be done when there is a simultaneous offensive on both fronts. We, therefore, find a second reason. Germany cannot reinforce the Vesle front. In fact, she may have to send troops from there back to Prince Rupprecht, where they came from. In that case the task of the Allies in driving the Germans back of the Vesle and of the Aisne would be made much easier.

Again, there is the question of Amiens. Foch was not afraid that the Germans might launch another drive at Amiens.

Again, the proximity of the German lines to the sea gave the Allies but little maneuvering room. This condition, a successful drive in Southern Picardy would do much to relieve. These, of course, were not necessarily the reasons for the attack.

THURSDAY'S TACTICS.

The attack was launched in somewhat like the German fashion, with no notice, no preliminary artillery bombardment. The British advanced behind a barrage fire which began with their advance and accompanied by a great number of tanks. The Germans were taken completely by surprise.

The British, who were operating between the southern bank of the Somme and Hangard, simply ran over the German lines, advancing more than seven miles in the first day's fighting. The French, whose attack was from Hangard to Hargicourt on the Avre, met with more resistance, but the British advance caught the German line to the south on the flank and uncovered the line while the continuing French pressure from in front forced the Germans backward.

As soon as the British had passed through the line they immediately threw into action large bodies of cavalry which, as this is being written (Friday) are operating deep into the German possions, having actually reached the outskirts of Chaulnes. The French, after the initial gain turned southward, advancing in this direction as far as Quesnel, which they captured. The Germans resistance at the present stage of the battle seems to be practically well shattered. Their troops were taken entirely by surprise.

FOE IN PICKLE.

The German position is already becoming excessively awkward. They have clung persistently to Montdidier and the lower reaches of the Avre, although to the north they have been pushed back over ten miles. The salient is constantly narrowing and with great speed, with which the entire face of a given situation can change in fighting of this character, disaster may come and may come quickly.

In a number of ways Germany has much to fear. Their entire salient is fed by a single railroad line with a single branch. This line runs to Amiens by way of Vesle and the branch leaves at Chaulnes. This branch turns southward, passes through Roye and then Curves over through Montdidier. If therefore the British reach Chaulnes the German plight as far as material is concerned will be desperate. Their only hope then will, be the highway from Amiens through Roye to Noyon. The country between the Somme and the southern side of the salient is peculiar in that these two roads—the railroad and the highway—are the only two means of egress from the salient towards the east.

Therefore the German predicament will be most serious if these two are cut. For this season it seems probable that the Germans will get out as soon as possible and will fall back at least to the Chaulnes-Roye line, and possibly back to the Somme through Peronne, which was the final position of the old Somme line at the end of 1916.

No Allied movement of the year or in fact of last year has been so full of promise.

SPONGE IS UP.

The retiring fever has struck the German lines also along the Lys Valley in Flanders. The German position here is absolutely untenable in case of an Allied attack. Knowing now that Foch has the strength with which to attack and the will to attack, the Germans are losing no opportunity to get back of some sort of barrier. The retirement seems to have been without any pressure from the British whatever.

Considering this in connection with the field as a whole, it appears that the Germans have thrown up the sponge for this year and are willing to call the game a stalemate.

AN EASY WAY TO GET RID OF WIND AND SUNBURN

People who enjoy outdoor pursuits yet dread the effect of sun and windburn, a tanned face, arms and neck, its soreness and discomfort, will find Santiseptic Lotion indispensable. You can stay out in the hot sun all day, drive your motor, drive, swim, camp or enjoy any other outdoor sport, without discomfort and without fear of the slightest injury to your skin or complexion if you will use Santiseptic as a protection to your skin. Sunburn and windburn are instantly relieved and the skin rapidly healed by a few applications of Santiseptic. Santiseptic also instantly relieves the itching and irritation of flea and other insect bites. Unlike any other preparation. Neither sticky nor greasy. Keeps skin cool, soft and clear. It is a remarkable soothing and healing lotion. Men use it after shaving and women for the complexion and for baby's skin.

Santiseptic is easily procured at the Owl, Sun and most other drug stores, a good-sized bottle costing but 50c. If your druggist cannot supply it, send his name and 25c to the manufacturers, the Esbencott Laboratories, Portland, Or., for large introductory bottle.—Advertisement.

Origin of Hair and Scalp Troubles Discovered

Up to 39 Years Ago Causes of Hair and Scalp Troubles Were Practically Unknown.

Then Prof. John H. Austin, bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of Chicago, discovered that with the aid of a powerful microscope the origin of the troubles could be traced and a cure effected.

Professor Austin says that using dandruff cures, mange cures, etc., without the proper advice is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. The particular trouble with which your hair or scalp is afflicted—and there are many of them—must be known before it can be intelligently treated. For example, one person may require an astringent, another a healing ointment, and another an antiseptic for an itching scalp (which is usually caused by vegetable parasites,) and still another something to relieve an excessively oily condition.

With the aid of a powerful compound microscope, Professor Austin is able to quickly determine the exact cause of the trouble, and will tell each one what is best to do in his or her particular case.

During the past three years Professor Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalp of our patrons—and they enthusiastically appreciate this free service.

Both men and women are invited to take advantage of Hamburger's liberal offer of a free microscopic examination by Professor Austin. Women need not take down their hair. His office hours are from 10 to 12 in the morning and 2 to 4 in the afternoon. Private office, Second Floor—Hamburger's.

GOVERNMENT TIES UP I.W.W. DEFENSE FUND?

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—William D. Haywood, general secretary-treasurer of the Industrial Workers of the World, charged on the witness stand at the I.W.W. conspiracy trial today that Federal operatives, through unfair and illegal tactics, have so tied up the organization defense fund that there is scarcely money enough available to continue the trial.

The defense money is obtained through assessments and donations, he said, and added that 300 sacks of mail was being held up in Chicago and the express packages had not been delivered.

"Five hundred members of our defense committees have been arrested. In Seattle alone $6000 of our defense money is being held from us. In the Northwest, where our contributions are largest, our committee members have been thrown into prisons."

Haywood vigorously denied that any member of the I.W.W. had been expelled for joining the army, and declared that the organization had gone through its many strikes without committing violence in one of them.

ADMITS $14,000 THEFT OF RAILWAY SUPPLIES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Annette A. Adams, temporary United States District Attorney, secured an admission in open court here today from Frank Preshaw, superintendent of the supply department of the Southern Pacific Company's electric railway system in Alameda county, that he had stolen $14,000 worth of supplies from the company in the last eighteen months. He was placed under $10,000 bonds and bound over to the Federal grand jury.

Preshaw was arrested after an investigation conducted by the United States Railroad Administration here. He has a wife and two children living in Oakland.

CONGRESSMAN BRANDED OPPONENT BY WILSON.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—President Wilson, in a telegram, characterized Congressman George Huddleston of Alabama as "in every way an opponent of the administration." The President's telegram, sent in answer to an inquiry from Frank P. Glass of Birmingham as to Congressman Huddleston's record.

"I do not feel at liberty to make any discrimination between candidates equally loyal, but I think I am justified in saying that Mr. Huddleston's record proved him in every way an opponent of the administration," the telegram said.

WAR OFFICE STATEMENTS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The number of prisoners taken from the Germans in the fighting in Picardy has increased to 24,000, today's earlier War Office statement announces.

American troops delivered an attack in the angle between the Somme and the Ancre and achieved a considerable success.

American and British troops captured the town of Morlancourt, between the Somme and the Ancre.

Canadian and Australian forces captured Bouchoir, Meharicourt and Lihons, and have entered Rainescourt and Proyart.

The French forces captured Le Tronquoy, Le Fretoy and Assainvillers.

Enemy counter-attacks in the Morlancourt sector which followed the Anglo-American success were beaten off in intensive fighting.

The statement says:

"On August 8 our airplane squadrons co-operated with other arms on the battle front throughout the day. The line reached by our attacking infantry was reported by our contact airplanes. The positions of the hostile artillery in action and columns of German infantry and transport on the march were signaled to our guns by our artillery machines. Other machines supplied our advance troops with ammunition from the air.

"Co-operation with the tanks was carried out systematically. Our machines assisted the tank crews with information, attacked strong points and other opposition with bombs and machine-gun fire and by dropping smoke bombs along the line of their advance assisted to conceal the approach of the tanks from the enemy.

"Our contact machines working with the cavalry rendered valuable services. Flying low in front of our advancing line our fighting squadrons shot at and bombed the enemy in his retreat, causing havoc among the masses of hostile troops and transport on roads congested with traffic. Our bombing squadrons flying a few hundred feet from the ground attacked trains, railway junctions and bridges.

"Forty-eight hostile machines are reported as destroyed by our airplanes and seventeen others were driven down out of control. Five hostile balloons were shot down in flames. Fifty of our own machines are missing, most of these casualties being due to fire from the ground. One of our night flying machines also failed to return.

"On August 9 our airmen continued the work of co-operating with the British infantry, artillery, cavalry and tanks on the battle front. German troops and transports were again attacked with bombs and machine-gun fire from a low height whenever a suitable target offered. The Somme bridges were heavily bombed by day and night.

"Elsewhere along the British front the activity in the air has been slight, but the ordinary work of photography reconnaissance and observation has been carried on."

FRENCH.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The text of the night statement, as issued by the War Office, reads:

"On the Avre battle front our attacks continued all day with increasing success. After the morning's operations Montdidier, outflanked on the east and the north, fell into our hands. Continuing our victorious advances on the right of the British forces, we carried our lines nearly seven miles to the east of Montdidier on a front running from Andechy to LaBoissiere and Fescamps.

"Still enlarging our action southeast, we have attacked German positions on the right and left of the road from St. Just-en-Chaussee to Roye on a front of more than thirteen miles. We conquered Rollot, Orvillers-Sorel, Ressons-Sur-Matz, Conchy-les-Pots, LaNeuville-sur-Ressons and Elincourt, realizing at some points an advance of nearly seven miles.

"In three days of battle French troops have progressed nearly fourteen miles along the Amiens-Roye road. The number of prisoners taken during the same period exceeds 8000. Among the enormous material abandoned by the enemy we have counted up to the present time 200 guns.

"Eastern front, Aug. 9.—In Albania there have been patrol encounters that yielded us some prisoners. Our aviators have bombarded enemy encampments on the region of Pogradek and British aviators have dropped bombs on the railroads in the region of Ceres."

BERLIN (via London) Aug. 10.—"In the center of the battle front the enemy has gained ground beyond Rosieres and Hangest," says the official communication from general headquarters tonight.

"Our counter-attacks brought him to a standstill west of Lihons and west of the Rosieres-Arvillers line.

"During the night we withdrew our troops fighting on the Avre and on Dom Brook to the rear lines east of Montdidier. Southeast of Montdidier we repulsed strong partial attacks of the French. We shot down thirty-two airplanes over the battlefield.

"There has been lively activity on the part of the enemy between the Yser and the Ancre. At many points on this front the enemy launched thrusts and partial attacks, which were repulsed before our lines in hand-to-hand fighting.

"Yesterday the British and French, bringing strong reserves into action, continued their attacks on the whole battle front between the Ancre and the Avre.

"On both sides of the Somme and astride the Foucaucourt-Villers-Bretonneux road we threw the enemy back by counter-attacks. He suffered heavy losses here."

ROME, Aug. 10.—French troops penetrated deep into the Austrian intrenchments on Monte Sisemol this morning, capturing 250 prisoners, according to an official statement issued by the War Office.

The official statement issued by the War Office today says:

"In the Giudicaria Valley and at Asiago the British and French have carried out raids. On Thursday in the Giudicaria region our parties forded the Chiese River. In the Daone Valley we surprised a party of the enemy on the southern slopes of the Dosso del Mortim and took twenty-one prisoners.

"This morning French troops penetrated deeply into the enemy's strong points on Monte Sisemol, destroying part of the garrison and forcing the remainder to surrender. Two hundred and fifty prisoners and eight machine guns were taken. From our positions on Monte di Val Bella, Col del Rosso and Col di Chele we succeeded at various points in passing the enemy lines and inflicting heavy losses. We took fifty-nine prisoners.

"Our losses were light."

Outnumber Injured Soldiers of Allies at Casualty Clearing Stations.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 10.—(Reuter's.)—The present battle has brought more German wounded to the Allied casualty clearing stations than there are wounded among the Allied soldiers. Many German doctors and hospital attendants have been captured, and they are doing good service in attending the wounded.

Since July 18 the Germans have lost almost as much material as they captured in their big offensives earlier in the year.

WOUNDED TROOPERS CRAVE HOME NEWS.

COL. ROOSEVELT URGES NEWSPAPERS BE SENT TO HOSPITALS IN FRANCE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, upon his return today from a vacation at Dark Harbor, Me., called upon the American people to send newspapers to the soldiers in France. His apepal was the result of a letter he received from a woman in France who has two sons in the military service. Writing of the American Red Cross hospital at Neuilly, "where the wards are already full and the halls are lined with men on stretchers waiting to have their wounds dressed," she added:

"The men are splendid, and not complaining. They are pathetically eager for home news, and there is nothing they wish for more than home papers. I wish you would suggest that more papers be sent them. They do not want old papers that have been read and thrown away, but daily papers regularly mailed to them."

"I very earnestly make an appeal not only for New York and Boston papers, but that all American papers be sent to the boys," said Col. Roosevelt in giving out the letter, "I hope the papers may feel inclined to do a part themselves. Of course, they should not be expected to bear all the expense, and outsiders should provide funds to send papers regularly to the hospitals where the boys from their districts are likely to go. This information can be procured from the Red Cross or the War Department. I wish it could be done generally."

413 LINE OFFICERS WILL BE PROMOTED.

REAR-ADMIRAL NIBLACK IS RECOMMENDED FOR THAT TITLE PERMANENTLY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Promotion of 413 line officers of the navy and sixteen officers of the Coast Guard was recommended to Secretary Daniels today by the naval board of selection, of which Admiral Mayo is president. The promotions, which in some cases are permanent and in others only temporary, range all the way from commanders to rear-admirals and are made necessary by the rapid expansion of the navy planned for the next year.

Approval of the recommendations by President Wilson is necessary before any of the promotions become effective, and only a comparatively few of the officers are needed at this time for the duties to which it is the intention to assign them.

Nine captains, now holding the temporary rank of rear-admiral, were recommended for promotion to that rank permanently.

Ninety-nine commanders were recommended for temporary captains; 33 permanent lieutenant-commanders for promotion to the permanent rank of commander and 236 lieutenant-commanders for temporary commanders.

Rear-Admiral Niblack, who is recommended for that permanent rank, is now on duty in European waters, being commander of the American naval forces operating in the Mediterranean Sea.

HOW OUR MEN QUASHED HUNS.

Story of Ferocious Battling Near Chateau Thierry.

German Masses Scattered by Amazing Blast of Fire.

Even French Astonished at Bravery of Our Men.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—An eyewitness story of the fighting near Chateau Thierry, in which American divisions, including the marine brigade, took part early in June, was made public today by the Navy Department. It is in the form of a letter from an officer of the marines to Maj.-Gen. Barnett, commandant of the corps. The name of the writer is not disclosed. The Americans were rushed to the line in motor trucks to support the hard-pressed French and on June 1 the marine brigade deployed on a support position, the battalion commanded by Maj. Thomas Holcomb hurrying into the line as the men climbed out of the trucks. The Germans were coming on, and on June 3 the French dropped back, passing through the American lines.

"We had installed ourselves in a house in La Voie Chattel, a little village between Champillon and Lucy Le Bocage," the letter says. "From one side we had observation of the north and when the Germans attacked at 5 p.m. we had a box seat.

IN GOOD ORDER TILL—

"They were driving at Hill 165 from the north and northeast and they came out on a wonderfully clear day in two columns, advancing in perfect order until two-thirds of the columns, we judged, were in view.

"The rifle and machine-gun fire were incessant and overhead shrapnel was bursting. Then the shrapnel came on the target at each shot. The white patches would roll away and we could see that some of the columns were still there, slowed up. It seemed perfect suicide for them to try. You couldn't begrudge a tribute to their pluck, at that.

"Then, under that deadly fire, and a barrage of rifle and machine-gun fire, the Boche stopped. It was too much for any men. They burrowed in or broke to the cover of the woods, and you could follow them by the ripples of the green white as they raced for cover."

FRENCH AMAZED.

The writer says the rifle fire of the marines amazed the French who saw it.

"That men should fire deliberately and use their sights and adjust their range," he says, "was beyond their experience. It must have had a telling effect on the morale of the Boche, for it was something they had not counted on. As a matter of fact, after pushing back the weakend French and then running up against a stone-wall defense, they were literally 'up in the air,' and more than stopped. We found that out later from prisoners, for the Germans never knew we were in the front line when they made that attack. They were absolutely mystified at the manner in which the defense stiffened up until they found that our troops were in line."

PERSONAL BRAVERY.

The letter describes a daylight charge against a machine-gun nest and of scouting raids up to June 6, when the whole brigade swung forward to straighten out the line. This action resulted in the capture of Belleau Wood.

Maj. Sibley's battalion of the Sixth Marine Regiment, led the way here with Holcomb in support. The woods were alive with enemy machine guns. That night word came back that Robertson, with twenty men of the Ninety-sixth Company, had taken Bouresches, breaking through a heavy machine-gun barrage to enter the town. Robertson, fighting with an automatic in either hand, was hit three times before he would allow himself to be taken to the rear.

Speaking of individual acts of bravery the writer says Duncan, a company commander, "before he was mowed down, had his pipe in his mouth and was carrying a stick." Later, he adds, Dental Surgeon Osborne picked up Duncan and, with a hospital corps man, had just gained some shelter when a shell wiped out all three.

ONE TAKES SEVENTEEN.

Private Dunlavy, killed later, captured an enemy machine gun in Bouresches, which he turned on the foe with great effect, while at another point, "Young Timmerman charged a machine gun at the point of the bayonet and sent in seventeen prisoners at a clip."

When the enemy made a stand at one point in the woods, Sibley's battalion was withdrawn and for an hour fifty Americans and French batteries hammered the wood. Hughes, with the Tenth Company, then went in and his first message was that the wood had been cut to mincemeat. Overton, head of the Seventy-sixth Company, finally charged Rock Plateau, killing or capturing gunners and all the guns, with few losses.

The Eighty-second Company lost all its officers and Maj. Sibley and his adjutant, Lieut. Bellamy, reorganized it under fire, and charged a machine-gun nest at the most critical time in all the fighting.

"I wonder if ever an outfit," the letter says, "went up against a more desperate job, stuck to it so gamely without sleep, at times on short rations, with men and officers going off like flies; and I wonder if in our long lists of gallant deeds there were ever two better stunts than the work of Sibley and Holcomb."

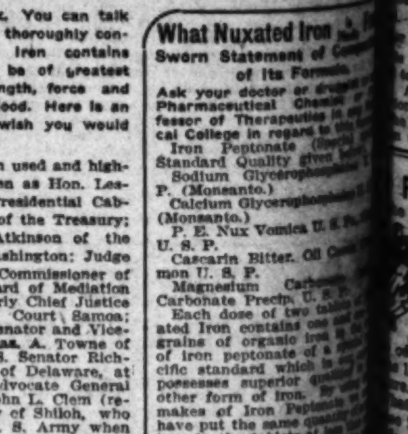
WHY DON'T YOU TAK NUXATED IRON, SA



"Two months ago I felt just about as you look, weak, nervous, and all run-down—I took Nuxated Iron for six weeks and—

To-day Look at Me—I Feel Strong as an

and ready for any task. You can talk as you please, but I am thoroughly convinced that Nuxated Iron contains something that must be of greatest value to help put strength, force and courage into a man's blood. Here is an extra package that I wish you would take home and try."

Nuxated Iron has been used and highly endorsed by such men as Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former Presidential Cabinet Official, Secretary of the Treasury; United States Judge Atkinson of the Court of Claims of Washington; Judge William E. Chambers, Commissioner of the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation, formerly Chief Justice of the International Court Samoa; former United States Senator and Vice-Presidential nominee Chas. A. Towne of Minnesota; former U. S. Senator Richard Rolland Kenney of Delaware, at present Asst. Judge Advocate General U. S. Army; General John L. Clem (retired) the drummer boy of Shiloh, who was Sergeant in the U. S. Army when only twelve years of age; General David Stuart Gordon (retired) hero of the Battle of Gettysburg; former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr of Chicago. When men like these endorse Nuxated Iron, there can certainly no longer be any doubt as to its efficacy. It is made by men who put their conscience into every package, and into every tablet in that package.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable and all "run down," while at 40 or 50 in the absence of any organic ailment and with plenty of iron in your blood, you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with energy and vital force.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital, (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, said: "I have taken Nuxated Iron myself and prescribed it for my patients, and I can truthfully say that it excels any preparation I have ever used for building up delicate, nervous, run-down folks and increasing the red blood corpuscles, thereby enriching and fortifying the blood against the ravages of disease. Contrary to general opinion, lack of iron in the blood does not necessarily mean you do not have enough blood, but it means your blood is not of the right kind."

CHECKERBOARD OF WAR ON CRUMPLED GERMANY.

Her Prestige Gone, War is Not Over But She Is Licked.

BY HARRY CARR.

THE extent of the German disaster will be in direct ratio to the speed with which the Allies are able to maintain their advance.

If the British tanks and cavalry can keep right on the heels of the German retreat as they are doing at last accounts, the effect may be a wholesale disaster for the Huns.

All the great victories of history have been brought about by relentlessly pursuing a broken line.

Every army in the position of the German tries to hold back the advance by rear guard actions while the main body retires in good order with the guns and supplies. The point of peril is when the rear guard is driven in upon the main body and the integrity of the battle is broken.

From the somewhat meager reports that are coming dribbling in over the wires, it is evident that the Germans are trying frantically to avoid such a contingency.

The German effort is now to retire to some point where they can make a stand.

The Allied effort, on the other hand, is to press in upon them with such impetuousity that they cannot turn and fight, but must keep on with their flight until the battle line breaks.

The lay of the land seems to suggest that the Germans will try to make their stand on the line of the Somme where the river bends down from Peronne to Ham. This would be a logical extension of the battle from where, on the Soissons sector, the German soldiers are digging in along the high lands of the Aisne.

The British advance is an action of especially brilliant strategy on the part of Gen. Foch—dashing and gallant tactics on the part of Gen. Haig.

The chief menace to the Allied line as it stood last week was the dangerous proximity of the Germans to Amiens and their hold on Montdidier.

FOR AMIENS.

Amiens is the most important strategic point in France being the railroad center which connects Paris with the British landing and supply station at Calais.

Gen. Foch wished to make more secure the Allied tenure of Amiens; at the same time get the Germans out of Montdidier, which was like a window looking into Paris.

By a brilliantly-planned oblique movement, he killed two birds with one stone; put a great pad of captured land in front of Amiens and compelled the Germans to take their choice between being caught like rats in a trap in Montdidier or of retiring from the place. They retired.

The attack was carried out with a fury that absolutely took away the breath of the Germans. The famous British cavalry are back on horseback again after living like moles in the trenches and they are justifying their fame.

The losses of the Germans must be in enormous disproportion to those of the Allies. The cavalry and tanks are cutting them up like pigs as they retreat. The losses of the Allies on the other hand are probably small.

It requires an enormous strength of men to stop a fight such as the Germans have started. It cannot be done by the initial power of the retreating army. Only reserves hurled in liberally can stem the outflowing tide.

It goes without saying that the Germans are now hurrying in reserves from some other place on the line. As an answer to this diversion it is quite on the cards that Foch will begin an attack at the place from which the reserves are stripped.

Foch is a master strategist. He knows German methods of warfare through and through.

As head of the Ecole de Guerre, he dug into the boasted victory of Germany over France in 1870. He showed that, instead of it being the work of military genius, the German commanders made about every mistake possible and were, in fact, "boobs," who won only because of the pitiable weakness of the French.

Foch's military creed is to first fix the enemy so that he cannot readily move; then maintain an offensive that continues without letup at any cost.

FOCH'S PLAN.

From which I think we can assume that the French generalissimo has doubtless figured out some plan whereby to make difficult the shifting back and forth of German reserves in this crisis.

In a general way, the present crisis would seem to be a contest of mobility and elasticity. It remains to be seen which commander is able to use his reserves to the best advantage and get them where they needed the quickest.

The British thrust forward at Amiens and the resultant German retirement from Montdidier would seem to have helped Foch in this regard.

The elasticity of his army has been seriously hampered for months past owing to the German proximity to certain vital points of the Allied line, such as Amiens, Ypres and Chateau Thierry.

The British forward thrust of the past week has resulted in the capture of certain areas and railroads and military turnpikes that were vital to the German advance upon Amiens. That solar plexus of the Allied line now has in front of it a safety pad that will very much lessen the embarrassment of Gen. Foch in the shifting back and forth of his reserves.

It is true that the chief objective of Foch is to kill Germans; not to take over areas of enemy soil. At the same time, the safety of the Allied army and its future freedom of action calls for the removal of the Germans from proximity to the network of railroads that connect the right and left wings of the Allied armies.

BEATEN AT THE GAME.

It is not too much to say that the Germans are licked.

By this I do not mean that the war is over, or that the end is even in sight; we are not yet near enough to the end to know exactly of what ailment the German military spirit is to die.

At the same time, the German empire is absolutely licked. The war is decided, if not ended.

Two practiced checker players seldom play a game through. When it looks to the inexpert eye of the layman as though the game had just begun, one of the players will give up and take his checkermen from the board.

It is in that sense that Germany is licked. Unless some unforeseen disaster should bring about inharmony and the dissolution of the Entente, the German army can never undertake another offensive of the dimensions of the March advance. An offensive of lesser proportions will be of no avail.

I take it that every reader fully grasps the fact that for Germany to lose the power of offensive is absolutely fatal.

Her strength lies (or has lain until now) in her ability to pick out the battlefield; to fight in areas so dangerous to vital points of the Allied line that the Foch army was crippled and pinned down like a man fighting with his coat-tails nailed to a board.

IN THE EAST.

If I may venture a very long-distance prophecy, I think the collapse of Germany's strength will not actually occur on the west front.

I think the whole Hohenzollern structure will crumple up in the east—not from direct military attacks, however.

Badly as they are pressed in France, the Germans are actually suffering at this very minute from a worse disease in the east.

The terrorities captured by Germany in Russia are seething in revolt. Turkey, Bulgaria and Austria are simply waiting for a chance to break away.

The tragic defeats in France must enormously weaken the prestige of Germany in these eastern areas.

A stern, hard master like Germany is strong only as long as he terrorizes his subjects. The first time he weakens they will fly at his throat.

Germany is like the leader of a wild dog pack. He is obeyed, but the first time he slips and falls, the whole pack is at his throat.

To some extent the situation must also be true within the German empire itself. Saxony, Bavaria and other German countries under the savage domination of Prussia are not strictly in sympathy with the Hohenzollern world aims, and never have been.

One of these days, while Germany is still fighting bravely in defense of the front door, she is going to be shocked to discover that trusted neighbors have sneaked in at the back door and set fire to the house.

Even in the face of the appalling losses of men, bearing in mind the Allied advance over hard-won German territory, I am firmly of the opinion that the most serious consequence of the German defeat is the effect upon Teutonic prestige in the new-caught, sullen German possessions in the near east and in the family circle of the Central Powers' Alliance.

SAY AUSTRIA MUST BECOME FEDERATED.

RESOLUTION IN PARLIAMENT DECLARES THE PRESENT CONDITION WRONG.

BY WARD PRICE.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright.]

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 10.—It would seem from a motion introduced in the Austrian Parliament by a group of Socialist Deputies that some of the more enlightened elements in Austria-Hungary are beginning to think on lines which bring them closer to the Allies' point of view.

The motion says:

"The present condition of Austria cannot last. Democracy is a modern necessity, but democracy is impossible in a state whose national life is paralyzed by the continual struggles of eight separate peoples composing it, and where national representation, divided by racial interest, falls prey to bureaucracy.

"Democracy will only be possible in Austria when the country is transformed into a confederation of free nations. In enemy countries, Austria, as at present constituted, is regarded as an eternal impediment to the liberty of the peoples of Europe, which must be destroyed. Austria should show that she is capable of reforming herself on a liberal basis. As a democratic confederation of peoples she could secure an economic peace more easily."

These details are given by the Arbeiter Zeitung of Vienna, but it is to be feared that these Socialists are no more than voices crying in the wilderness.

CHANGES HER HUN NAME.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN JOSE, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Alice Roedel von Brincken, divorced wife of Lieut. Wilhelm von Brincken, formerly naval attache to the German Consulate in San Francisco, was granted permission to change her name to Alice Morgan Roedel and that of her children to Roedel in an order signed by Superior Judge W. A. Beasly. Lieut. Von Brincken was convicted in the United States District Court of charges that were the outgrowth of pro-German plots and it was for this reason, Mrs. Von Brincken told Judge Beasly, that she sought permission to change her name.

KAISER'S YOKE IS TOO HEAVY.

Thatheim Residents Change Name of Town. Renounce German Allegiance.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MODESTO, Aug. 10.—Thatheim, a small town near here, whose inhabitants consist almost entirely of Germans and those of German descent, has held a mass meeting and unanimously changed the name of the town to Valley Horn, the English translation of Thatheim.

The meeting renounced all allegiance to Germany, declared its support of the American government, and sent an appeal to Washington to have the postoffice name changed.

A service flag for boys of the town who have been called to the colors has been provided.

BORDWELL WELCOMED IN ORANGE COUNTY.

REPUBLICAN GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE WARMLY RECEIVED YESTERDAY.

Hon. Walter Bordwell, Republican candidate for Governor, spent yesterday touring Orange county, talking personally with friends and supporters at each town. The undercurrent of friendliness to Mr. Bordwell and his policies encountered constantly during the trip was so noticeable as to be commended upon several times.

In Santa Ana at the end of the day he met a group of prominent men at dinner and discussed with them the necessity of lopping off those of the "forty fat commissions" that are but costly deadwood. He also declared that he believes sincerely in every man voting as his conscience directs, no matter what his party, but that he could not denounce strongly enough the practice of switching policy for political betterment. He also said that prohibition is not an issue in the present campaign, as it was an amelioration that would come about through the voice of the people, and not through the act of State executives.

Later in the evening he visited Huntington Beach, where the members of the G.A.R. of the southern part of the State are closing the first half of their annual encampment. He will speak there tomorrow evening.

At La Habra, Brea, Fullerton, Anaheim, Orange and Santa Ana Mr. Bordwell made stops to talk with his constituents. He was accompanied on the trip by Supervisor William Schumacher of Orange county, and H. O. Abbott, his manager.

Wood also direct the commandeering of supplies of raw materials, partly manufactured materials, and completed raincoats in the hands of all such persons.

Strategy.

FINAL VICTORY IS NOW ON WAY.

Foch's Offensive Crushing Enemy's Chances.

Frequent and Rapid Blows to Follow Each Other.

Germans' Plans to Capture Paris Forever Ended.

BY M. F. MURPHY.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright.]

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The revenge of the British, as the new Allied offensive east of Amiens is called here, simply confirms a little prophesy I indulged in in my cable last Sunday, when I asserted that Foch's next blow would come much sooner than most people expected.

Perhaps tomorrow's German communique will say the enemy is in the course of achieving before Amiens what Ludendorff will claim is another tactical victory in the form of a hasty withdrawal from another slice of French territory, but expert opinion sees in the British victory which is now in progress much more than the spectacular inauguration of Foch on his new career as Marshal of France.

It is realized here that Foch's latest blow has been struck at a point which he himself had chosen after a careful consideration of the whole strategic position. The new battle is one more proof of the immediate change that has come over the entire aspect of the war as a result of Foch's vitally important blow against the German right flank in the Aisne-Marne salient on July 18. As a result of that blow, Foch can now make the Germans dance to his piping. It is the Allies who now have the initiative, and whenever Foch decides to strike, there the German reserves will have to run to meet the blow. Indications are that Foch's blows from now on until at least the end of next month will be rapid and frequent.

The rapidity with which the Allied attack before Amiens has followed the second victory of the Marne amply confirms this view. Foch is worrying the German beast, and the satisfactory feature of the operation is that there is now no reason why he should not continue harrying him until the maddened foe is compelled to submit through sheer inability to continue the struggle.

All the trumps, present and future, are now in our hands, and there is no longer any need to talk about "if" we win and "when" we win. We are winning. The final victory has actually begun.

Most people here expected that Foch's next move would have come north of Soissons, with the double objective of threatening the German main positions on the Chemin-des-Dames and stamping out all possibility of further resistance by the Crown Prince's defeated forces south of the Aisne.

It is now realized that, in view of the satisfactory strategic position established by our great victory south of the Vesle, the situation between Soissons, Rheims and further east can safely be allowed to remain as it is, and that it is much more important to take in hand the possibilities that may arise elsewhere.

The key to the whole situation today may be found in the fact that the enemy is now faced with a greater necessity than ever before to speedily secure a victory that will enable him to wrest from the Allies a peace in any true compromise. Now that the German plans based on the capture of Paris, which undoubtedly had this end in view, have been forever upset, it is evident that the enemy will spare no effort to accomplish a similar object in another direction.

The most likely point to which he would direct his attention would be the channel ports, and doubt is felt there that it is for the safety of the channel ports, and incidentally the British coast opposite, that forms one of perhaps several underlying strategic reasons for the battle that Foch began yesterday.

The recent retreat of Rupprecht on the Ancre and the Avre may have been due to the realization of the Germans that it is politic to straighten out their front on that sector, but at the same time it may have been a preparatory step toward an attempted blow from the Arras-Ypres line in the direction of Hazebrouck and Calais. Such a blow, it is pointed out, would have the advantage of enabling the Kaiser to utilize his hitherto powerless fleet in combination with a tremendous effort on land. Color is given to this possibility by the recent replacement of Von Capelle as head of the German navy by the ambitious Von Scheer, who obviously will be anxious to curry favor with his all-highest war lord by some display that would enable the German navy to escape from its pitiful position in which the Allied fleet has held it down for the past four years.

Another hypothesis accounts for Rupprecht's withdrawal behind the marshes of the Ancre on the ground that the Boche may have expected Foch would attack them between Arras and Bethune as a threat against the German Flanders army on their left.

The battle today shows that Foch deliberately ignored the enemy's plans in this direction and attacked further south. The result, in so far as Calais is concerned, is the same. The new Allied offensive is an integral part of Foch's plan to protect Calais, and, at the same time, has the advantage of drawing a good many German reserves away from their striking point in the event of an enemy attack on the coast becoming an accomplished fact.

Moreover, by driving in the Germans before Amiens, the Allies are disengaging the Paris-Amiens-Calais railway, just as by their offensive between the Aisne and the Marne, they last week disengaged the Paris-Chalons-Nancy line. These two great lines form vitally important parts of the tremendous vise between the jaws of which the German wild beast is being slowly but surely crushed.

Attention is directed here to the fact that the immediate objective of the attack, begun yesterday, is to reduce the salient at the point of which is situated Montdidier. If the British advance continues as it has begun the position of Von Hutier's army, in the pocket between Rosieres and Lassigny, will soon become interesting. Paris hopes to see repeated here the slow, but resistless concentric pressure which squeezed the Crown Prince's armies out of the Tardenois country between the Marne and the Vesle.

More than ever the vital question has become one of reserves. It is realized here with pride and delight thta the present battle is one more confirmation of the wisdom of the unification of the Allied command. "With the nomination of Foch as generalissimo," says one critic, "the good times of the German generals passed away."

To emphasize this, it is pointed out that the German Crown Prince in order to get out of the hole in which the Allied armies surprised him between the Aisne and the Marne, had to appeal to Rupprecht to lend him his best divisions. When Foch decided that Rupprecht had been sufficiently weakened by being robbed of his reserves to help his brother Crown Prince, he gave the order for Rupprecht's own front to be attacked.

With French Army.

FOCH CLOSES JAWS OF GREAT VISE ON HUNS AT MONTDIDIER

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 10.—The Germans at Montdidier are between the jaws of a vise which are closing in this morning. Converging attacks north yesterday and from the south this morning had succeeded in virtually encircling the

They had also rendered useless to the Germans the Montdidier-Chaulnes railway, which there were in danger of not getting out without heavy losses.

The supplies taken during the past two days have been so large that it has not been to make an inventory of them as yet. It included an enormous number of shells of all arms of all descriptions.

The attack extended to the eastward this morning, giving an unexpected development in the ticipation in the battle.

The wounded men coming back from the front are radiant with enthusiasm, shouting to their
"The Boche is on the run!"

The French have captured twenty-one cannon since last night, including six eight-inch guns ville-sur-Ressons.

The Germans had moved the most of their heavy guns to the rear and defended their positions didier principally with machine guns.

In this new battle of the Somme the French are showing that after four years of war they none of their dash and courage.

They also have proved that the Germans are not always able to plead surprise as an excuse
The French successes north of Montdidier were partially due to surprise, but the Germans were impending attack south of the town. They were defeated just the same.

Attacking at 6 o'clock last evening, the French troops conquered the heights of Assainvillers court in two hours. This morning they struck along the line down the front through the region southeast of Montdidier, and moved their line ahead more than four miles.

The French attacked this morning in the sector of Montdidier, between Courcelles-Epayelles and the Matz. There was no artillery preparation before the attack.

The Germans were on the alert, but were completely overwhelmed by the suddenness of the attack. By 8 o'clock tanks were in Ressons-sur-Matz, and by 11 o'clock the French had taken Mortemer, Cuvilly and Marqueglise. At some points the advance was nearly five miles.

The dash of the French troops was splendid.

Their first objective was so quickly taken that the hour of attack on the second objective had to be advanced.

MANIFESTO FLIGHT IS TOLD BY D'ANNUNZIO.

RISKY TRIP TO VIENNA AND RETURN ACCOMPLISHED IN SIX HOURS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ROME, Aug. 10.—The feat of dropping manifestoes on Vienna Friday morning was accomplished by a patrol of eight Italian machines, and all returned safely except one. The airplanes were commanded by Capt. Gabriele d'Annunzio, and the patrol was comprised of one biplane and seven monoplanes. The total flight was about 1000 kilometers, of which 800 was over enemy territory.

Engine trouble forced the missing machine to land.

The flight over the Alps was made in a great windstorm and through strong mountain currents at a height of about 10,000 feet.

The manifestoes dropped on Vienna contained a warning of what the Italians might do if they saw fit to return on a bombing expedition.

Capt. D'Annunzio gave the following description of the flight of his squadron:

"When we left at 6 o'clock in the morning the weather was splendid, but we were soon enveloped in a thick mist. We kept at a height varying from 8000 feet to 11,000 feet.

"In crossing our former frontier I was deeply affected at looking down upon Cividale and the wide stretches of our country that have been held for the last nine months by the enemy.

"We reached Vienna about 9 o'clock in the morning and descended to within 1500 feet. The people in the streets were at first terrified and fled in panic until they saw that we were throwing out only manifestoes. Then crowds assembled and watched us with intense curiosity.

"I particularly wished to approach close to the museum that contains the authentic image of St. Catherine of Alexandria, and made a detour which permitted observation of this point.

"The weather became bad on our return trip, and we experienced dangerous air currents while crossing the Alps. We also were attacked by hostile artillery fire and a fleet of hydroplanes, but came through safely by noon of the same day."

WON'T BELIEVE "THAT 20,000-PLANE TALE."

AUSTRIAN AIRCRAFT HEAD DECLARES IT IS ALL HUMBUG STUFF.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 10.—Apprehension that there will be extensive bombardment of German cities by swarms of American airplanes has moved the Vienna correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt to seek the opinion of the chief commander of the Austro-Hungarian air forces. That official offered the following comfort to German city dwellers:

"The American idea of constructing a huge number of standard-type flying machines with standard motors is absurd. Even if the Americans succeeded in combining the best features of the newest existing type by twofold, it would not follow that such a composite machine would be most useful in the European war theater.

"As for the American threat that 20,000 machines are coming over, every practical airman knows that it is humbug. American machines appear only sporadically on the west front, and neither the men nor machines are equal to the Germans."

FIFTEEN THOUSAND AT ANNUAL IOWA OUTI

Great Outburst of Patriotism Feat Long Beach Gathering.

ESTABLISHMENT of ninety-nine county headquarters at 7 o'clock in the morning, forenoon registration of close to 15,000 former and visiting residents of Iowa, the customary exchange of greetings and renewal of old acquaintances, and the basket lunch with hot coffee at noon, and the execution of thrilling war aerial maneuvers by Aviator Earl Daugherty of the North Island Aviation Field were among the features of the eleventh annual summer picnic of Southern California Iowans held at Bixby Park at Long Beach yesterday.

With President Ed W. Hopkins presiding, the afternoon's programme was opened at 2 o'clock with the singing of "America" by the assembled thousands, led by Prof. Amon Dorsey Cain.

John G. Spielman, president of the Long Beach Iowa Association and second vice-president of the Southern California organization, delivered the address of welcome, extending a cordial greeting to the several thousand visitors to this city, the home of the largest number of former Iowans in Southern California outside of possibly Los Angeles.

Judge Frederick W. Houser responded, commenting on the hearty hospitality displayed by the residents of Long Beach fitness of the surroundings for the holding of such a large and successful gathering as that of the annual summer Iowa picnic.

"DEAR OLD IOWA."

The next number on the programme was a baritone solo, "Dear Old Iowa," written by Laura Allan Perdue, by Prof. Dorsey Cain, which was followed by an address entitled "California's Greatest Federation," by Col. Frank H. True, president of the Federated State Societies of Southern California.

Capt. Frank H. Nichols extended a greeting "from the boys," which was followed by the main address of the programme, "Our Boys in Training," by Maj. Harry A. Wishard.

Led by Prof. Cain, the assemblage then sang the "Star Spangled Banner." Next came the introduction of Iowans who are candidates for office at this time, but who were not allowed to speak. Among the candidates introduced were E. W. Hopkins, for County Assessor; J. A. Rominger, for Lieutenant-Governor; Frank F. Merriam, for the Legislature; L. C. Dale, for the Legislature; S. W. Odell, for Congress; F. W. Houser, for Superior Court, and Judge Curtis D. Wilbur and Orfa Jean Shontz, for Superior Court.

The singing of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" closed the programme, which was followed by Iowa college reunions in various parts of the park.

Officers of the Southern California Iowa Association present at the outing were E. W. Hopkins, president; Judge F. W. Houser, vice-president; J. G. Spielman, second vice-president; C. H. Parsons, secretary, and Col. H. M. Bigelow, treasurer.

The usual color scheme followed by all Iowa picnics in the issuance of badges prevailed, the red badge indicating a native Iowan, the blue a resident, the white a resident of Iowa fifty years ago and the yellow a friend.

DAUGHERTY APPEARS.

A sensational feature of the picnic was the arrival of Earl Daugherty from San Diego, carrying with him Maj. H. E. Sterre of the Flying Corps. Daugherty, who is a native of Iowa, flew up from San Diego through a heavy fog in the excellent time of one hour and twenty-five minutes. He executed a number of thrilling war maneuvers over the park and city, including the famous nose dive, tail spin, bumblebee and falling leaf. The stunts were performed at an altitude of 3000 feet, Long Beach being the first city on the Coast north of San Diego where weather condition permitted the holding of the maneuvers, the aviator stated.

Another feature of the picnic was the war food exhibit held by the volunteer student unit of Berkeley in the interest of the municipal cannery. Miss Mary Wasem is chairman of the unit, and Mrs. C. C.
Adams, chairman of the cannery.

WARNED NOT TO HIT MINERAL INDUSTRIES.

WESTERN POTASH AND PYRITES AFFECTED BY PROFITS TAXES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Declaring a serious situation exists because of "the effect of the excess profits taxes on the production of certain minerals essential for carrying on the war," Secretary Lane in a letter made public today urged Chairman Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee, in framing the coming revenue bill to use care in assessing taxes which might injure these industries.

"A number of typical cases," the letter said, "have come to my attention in which development is being prevented because of the fact that new mining enterprises of uncertain life are not allowed to amortize the actual investment before being subject to the excess profits tax."

It was indicated that among the industries especially affected were those in western States producing potash and pyrites.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Mrs. F. Sheehy Skeffington was deported from Kingstown, Ireland, Friday night. She was in charge of two prison wardresses.

Mrs. Skeffington visited the United States and was permitted to return to England on condition that she would not go to Ireland. She arrived in Dublin, however, on August 3, having eluded the authorities, and she was arrested there Thursday. Her husband was killed during the Dublin revolt in 1916.

Chief of Staff.

GOT ENEMY GOING, KEEP HIM GOING, SAYS MARCH.

This is Time for Greatest Efforts Is the Advice of Staff Chief—Sees Further German Retreat.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—"This is the time for the greatest efforts; keep the enemy running."

Gen. March, Chief of Staff, summarized thus today to newspaper men the situation in France. Standing before the great military maps of the War Department that show clearly just where the German is being beaten back, he pointed out that the great battle front was rapidly being straightened out from Rheims to the sea.

"They have not yet," he said, "gotten back to the original Hindenburg line, where the German began his advances this year. We still have some territory to gain, so when statements appear that indicate the war is over at this point, discourage it.

"This is the time for the greatest effort; keep the enemy running. That is the reason the United States is being called on for increased man power; that is the reason we want the age limits for the draft both lowered and raised, to get more men.

TIME TO HIT HARD.

"It is no time now to talk about the war being over. It is the time to hit hard.

"The greatest advantage of the whole thing has been the change of the Allies from the defense to the offensive, which is a great military asset. We have the enemy guessing now, instead of guessing ourselves."

From a confidential report, Gen. March read the following account of the situation on the British front south of Albert: "All our troops found little opposition and have captured more prisoners than it is possible for them to handle, including a German general and his staff, showing elements of surprise attack. British report their prison camps back of Amiens so full that it is impossible to hold more. We have captured all the artillery in this sector."

ALLIED OPERATIONS.

Describing the effect of the Allied operations, Gen. March said: "Bringing the battle line broadside you see that there have been a number of places where we have been nibbling along the Vesle River and acquiring a foothold on the northern bank, but have not yet attempted to go up the slopes on the north side, where German intrenchments are supposed to be. That part of the line has remained stationary.

"As the line has become stationary Foch has kept up his pressure on the enemy working on the perfectly sound principle that when you get an enemy going, you keep him going; never give him a chance to recuperate or think it over; keep on hitting him.

"On August 8 a combined British and French force, commanded by Field Marshal Haig, attacked on a front of twenty miles east of Amiens. The terrain is flat, almost level, and while some time ago there were small clumps of woods, all of those undoubtedly had been levelled long ago by artillery fire, so we can count that country as practically level with very little natural impediment to an advance. There are a few valleys perpendicular to the front of our advancing armies instead of parallel to it, so that the advancing troops can go right through the valleys.

SURPRISE ENEMY.

"The enemy were apparently taken by surprise and made no essential resistance in the center, confining their strong resistance to the flanks. Hitting the big salient on a thirteen-mile front, we pushed it in an average of eight miles, and reduced it from an outer salient to an inner salient. That gives us a salient somewhat corresponding to the Marne salient and places the enemy again in a bad position. The advance of the British and French at this point comes up so that they are getting into control, or threatening, the railroad lines of communications which, at that point run up from the Montdidier sector to Chaulnes.

"On the Flanders salient the enemy on last August 9 was withdrawing on the southern sector of the salient, south of Merville and British occupied that territory. The general effect of these movements is straightening out the line everywhere."

RAINBOW DIVISION.

Answering a question as to the Forty-second Division's record, Gen. March said:

"The Rainbow Division had its combat training in the Lorraine sector north of Luneville. It left that position to arrive east of Rheims, where, on July 15, it helped break the main German attack. When the French-American counter-offensive was launched on the Marne salient the division appeared there shortly in relief of other units.

"Our reports indicate the following:

"In eight days of battle the Forty-second Division has forced the passage of the Ourcq, taking prisoners from six enemy divisions, met, routed, decimated a crack division of the Prussian Guards, a Bavarian division, and one other division, and driven back the enemy's lines for sixteen kilometers."

The Twenty-ninth Division is still in Alsace, southeast of Epinal; the Seventy-ninth is still in the American training areas, and the Eighty-fifth is now arriving in France, its infantry having landed and its artillery being about to land. The Twenty-seventh Division, under Maj.-Gen. O'Ryan, and composed of New York National Guard, was last reported with the British in Flanders.

Gen. March made no reference to the number of American troops now overseas or on the way.

APARTMENTS IN TRADE.

Arthur W. Gowen reports among recent exchanges made through his office, one for J. S. Stotter of a 100-foot corner lot on Vermont avenue opposite the Manual Arts High School, improved with a two-story brick building, known as the Stoner apartments, for a fifty-acre improved ranch, part of which is planted to Valencia oranges, three miles west of Anaheim, owned by J. Sharp. A valuation of $40,000 was placed on each of the properties. Gowen, who has been in the real estate business, on Broadway for fourteen years, has moved his office to 701 Haas Building.

BOPP CASE AND ROCHE'S PART.

yer to stand by his clients, the German dynamiters, after he had taken their case; but what of his duty to the public whom he was serving as Police Commissioner at the same time? He was at the head of the police department, an organization ENGAGED, SUPPOSEDLY, IN RUNNING DOWN CROOKS, WHILE HE WAS DEFENDING CROOKS IN COURT, with the police department secrets at his command. Can a man serve two masters?

Attorney John W. Preston who prosecuted the Bopp case is quoted to sustain the loyalty defense. But a perusal of the statement made by Attorney Preston reveals that he wrote "You served your clients loyally," and again "In the defense of your clients you rendered that loyal service to them which you were compelled to render in accordance with your oath as an attorney." It is not of record, however, that any one has attempted to impugn Mr. Roche's loyalty to his German and Hindu clients.

Mr. Roche seems to have grown extremely sensitive of late about any reference to his official relations with alien enemies during the time that our country is at war. Mayor Rolph, who is running for Governor, and Mr. Roche, his political lieutenant and chairman of his police commission, do not take such references kindly. Mr. Roche is so exercised against The Times for printing articles in which reference was made to his appearing as counsel for Franz Bopp and other alien enemies that he has filed suits for libel, asking for $200,000 damages.

Yet similar references were made during the trials four months ago by San Francisco papers and Mayor Rolph was urged editorially to remove Mr. Roche from his place as head of the Police Commission because he was attorney and adviser for alien enemies. Mr. Rolph at that time said that if Roche tendered his resignation he would not accept it.

MAYOR ROLPH'S LETTER.

On Monday, April 1, 1918, the Daily News of this city printed a letter signed "James Rolph, Jr., Mayor of San Francisco," which began: "I have been reading your published demands that I remove Theodore Roche from the Police Commission, for the reason, asserted by you, that he cannot perform his full duty as a police commissioner while acting as attorney for certain men now on trial for offenses against the neutrality laws of the United States."

In the letter the following appears: "I am informed that in July, 1916, long before the United States entered the existing war, the firm of which Mr. Roche is a member was employed to represent Messrs. Bopp and Von Schack in certain criminal proceedings pending before the Federal court, in which they were accused of having committed offenses occurring in 1914 and 1915. None of the clients defended by Mr. Roche is a member of the German government. Months before the declaration of war by the United States, Messrs. Bopp and Von Schack, who had been Consul and Vice-Consul, respectively, of Germany, were removed from office and a successor to Mr. Bopp had been appointed. . . . Mr. Roche assures me that when his firm accepted employment in the case on trial, it was expressly agreed that the defendants personally, and not the German government, would pay the attorney's fee."

DAILY NEWS' REPLY.

In the same issue of the Daily News there appears an open letter to Mayor Rolph signed "Eugene MacLean, editor-in-chief and president The Daily News." The following extracts reveal the tenor of that letter:

"Your letter, boiled down, is a blunt refusal to discharge Theodore Roche as commissioner of police. . . . With America's troops just entering into a desperate and bloody war, it is not fitting that the confidential adviser of the enemy's agents should also be the head of the police system of an American city. If the situation existed in Chicago or Milwaukee you would join with the rest of us, Mayor Rolph, in expressions of disgust. . . . Your friendship for Roche and the political considerations involved have hidden from your eyes the great question of Americanism that lies beyond. It is not worth your while, Mayor, to say that Bopp and his associate Von Schack had been 'removed from office' months before the United States declared war. They were removed from office by being put in jail. But every move they made against America was made by them as the agents of Germany, financed by Germany, and as far as possible directed by Germany.

"The notorious Von Papen, one of the three chiefs of German criminal conspiracy in America, came here openly to confer with them just before he was ordered to leave the United States. These men were not prosecuted for what they did as 'private individuals,' Mayor Rolph. The crimes of which they have been convicted and the crimes for which they are hereafter to be tried were committed as open representatives of the government of Germany.

"It is indeed possible that when Roche accepted the task of defending them, he insisted that the 'defendants personally and not the German government should pay the attorneys' fees.'

"It was only due and fitting that a thrifty lawyer should insist on having the money in sight before starting the case. . . . It is admitted we believe that this payment represents a very large sum and it is reported that on Roche's demand it was deposited in bank in full in advance. . . .

"Here we have Mr. Roche, reassured as to his fee, and bound to protect his client and keep his secrets. . . . Bopp was in constant touch with a certain number of German spies, only a few of whom have been detected and placed under arrest.

"Whatever Bopp tells Roche, his attorney, of the offenses against Americans committed by himself and his confederates who are not yet under arrest must be retained in sacred confidence by Roche. Yet Roche is head of the police department, bound by public duty to expose and cause the arrest of these very German agents who are associated with Bopp!

"It is an impossible situation, Mayor Rolph. No man on earth can do both duties. Confronted by such a condition, he must either violate his obligation as a lawyer or his obligation as a public official. And to do either is disgraceful. . . . It is beyond human possibility that any result but humiliation and distress can come from such an attempt to serve two hostile masters. . . . No matter if he were the best man on earth today he could not serve the Germans and the Americans in war matters at the same time. The public knows the Daily News is right in its contention, Mayor; Roche knows it; you know it. It has never been suggested that he give up his rich employment as attorney for the Germans. It has been suggested very emphatically that he give up his place as Police Commissioner. The Daily News has done its patriotic duty in calling your attention to the situation, and has asked you to do yours."

Mayor Rolph made no reply to this letter; neither did Mr. Roche, who continued to serve in the dual capacity as counsel for German agents and chairman of the Police Commission.

POLITICS AND THE CHARTER.

On July 25 C. J. Adams of San Francisco wrote an open letter to the San Francisco Chronicle calling attention to the fact that Mr. Roche's activity in behalf of Mayor Rolph's candidacy for Governor was a violation of the provisions of the city charter. Mr. Adams quotes the following extracts from that document: "No member of the Board of Police Commissioners shall directly or indirectly electioneer, by soliciting votes or otherwise for or against any candidate for office at any election, or for or against any candidate for nomination . . . nor shall any of them be a member of any committee, club, or organization the purpose of which is to nominate or indorse candidates for office at any election. . . . Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be forthwith removed from office or employment. If the violation by a member of either of said boards, the Mayor must remove such member."

Commenting on this section Mr. Adams adds: "Of course it would be expecting too much even from such an independent and high-minded gentleman as the present Mayor to presume that he will honestly enforce this law and remove from office any of his commissioners for their political activity. However, this may serve as a notice to him and his commissioners that this matter is not going to rest as they would like it to remain. The grand jury's attention has been directed to it and a full and fair investigation of this subject will prove interesting to our citizens and enlightening to the voters of our interior counties." Mr. Adams specifically mentions "Mr. Roche of the Police Commission," as one of the worst offenders.

As the integrity of The Times has been called into question concerning the official association of Mr. Roche with alien enemies it is fitting that reference should be made to the official records of the Federal courts here.

THE COURT RECORDS.

Case No. 6133 in the Federal court is that of the United States vs. Franz Bopp, et al, charging them with violating Section 37 of the Criminal Code of the United States. The specific violation was to prepare military enterprises to be carried on from within territory of the United States against India and inciting mutiny and armed rebellion in India. This indictment was filed on July 7, 1917, three months after the United States had entered the war. A verdict of guilty was returned against Franz Bopp and the others on April 23, 1918.

In this case the record attorneys for George Rodiek, Walther Sauerbeck, H. A. Schroeder, Franz Bopp, Eckart Von Schack, Henry Kaufman, Joseph L. Bley and Robert Capelle were SULLIVAN & SULLIVAN AND THEODORE ROCHE. The indictment was not returned "months before the war," but months after the war was in progress, after Pershing and his divisions were actually on French soil.

H. A. Schroeder appeared in court on February 18, 1918, with his attorney, Theodore Roche, and entered a plea of guilty.

Case No. 5885 is that of the United States against Bopp, et al, including Von Schack and Von Brincken, charging them with military enterprise from the United States against Canada. They were charged with (1) blowing up tunnel at Port Huron, Mich.; (2) blowing up Canadian Pacific Railway tunnels in Canada; (3) blowing up railways in Canada; (4) blowing up vessels of England, France, Japan and Russia in Canadian waters. The record attorneys for Bopp and Von Schack are SULLIVAN & SULLIVAN AND THEODORE ROCHE.

Case No. 5870 is that of the United States against Bopp, et al, charging them with blowing up factories and munition plants. Again the attorneys for Bopp and Von Schack were SULLIVAN & SULLIVAN AND THEODORE ROCHE.

Case No. 6131 is that of the United States against C. D. Bunker, et al, charging them with violation of Section 37 of the Criminal Code of the United States. This was known as the Sacramento case. Bopp was not a party. The indictment was filed on July 17, 1917, three months after this country entered the war. The attorneys of record for E. H. Von Schack, Henry W. Kaufman and Robert Capelle were SULLIVAN & SULLIVAN AND THEODORE ROCHE.

man lines in Picardy must have been stripped when Crown Prince Rupprecht sent troops to the rescue of the German Crown Prince's armies south of the Aisne, three weeks ago. Paris newspapers remark on the fact that the captives taken are, for the most part, rather old, and it is said that they are members of reserve divisions.

Crown Prince Rupprecht is known to have a large number of splendid troops which will probably be thrown into battle at once. So far, only two of these divisions have come in contact with the Allies, but they have been unable to check the onward rush of the victorious armies of Haig and Debenry.

The number of prisoners captured during the first three days of the offensive is very large. It is hinted at Paris that it exceeds by far the figure given out in the official statements.

HUN LOSS HEAVY.

Two divisional headquarters, with their staffs, are said to have been taken. The guns and war materials lost by the enemy constitute a very heavy loss.

Since the American forces occupied Fismette, the northern suburb of Fismes, on the Vesle, there have been no reports of further attacks in that region. It is believed, however, that the Allies there are gathering themselves for a new assault which may have its effect on the great battle going on farther north. Although there have been rumors of heavy fighting south of Arras, there has been no confirmation yet. Nothing is known of the situation in Flanders, where, on Friday, the Germans were reported to be withdrawing from their advanced position.

The French early this morning smashed through the enemy's lines and encircled Montdidier, cutting off the enemy's retreat.

TAKE OFFENSIVE.

Between Montdidier and the Oise, the French have taken the offensive over a sixteen-mile front and have swept the Germans out of the western side of the salient.

Further north the Germans are resisting desperately, but the village of Morlancourt has been taken. American troops are operating in this sector and had a hand in taking this savagely-defended position.

London reports that the fighting has spread northward and that a battle is being fought south of Arras. This, if true, is a new menace to the whole German position north of the Somme.

The most important development in the news today is the French attack along the line from Montdidier to the Oise and the fall of Montdidier.

The Germans placed a high value on Montdidier during their offensive in March and the fighting south of the Montdidier-Noyon line early in June was of a character that evidences the intention of the enemy to tear through the Allies toward Compiegne.

North of Montdidier the situation appears to be very dangerous to the Germans. The rapid advance of the British and French has virtually cut off the troops further south who must retire eastward toward Noyon over open roads which are under fire for long distances. If Chaulnes is captured the German position further south is precarious in the extreme.

Nothing is said in dispatches this morning of the situation in Flanders, where it was reported yesterday that the Germans were retiring from the extreme side of the Lys salient. There are no new reports of events along the Vesle and Aisne.

The enemy resistance on the extremities of the attacking front has been broken. Aerial observers say the Germans are in full retreat eastward across the Picardy plains toward the old Hindenburg line.

North of the Somme the British have been meeting with bitter resistance, but they have captured Morlancourt, the axis of the German line between the Somme and Albert. On the northern bank of the Somme, however, they lost Chipilly to the Germans, while moving forward on the southern bank of Morcourt.

Allied capitals look for further withdrawals on other parts of the line as a result of the thrust in Picardy and a continuation of the retirement in Flanders which possibly may wipe out the salient there. It is believed that the enemy must send in all available reserves or admit defeat and withdraw to the lines he held on March 21, or still further.

British and French diplomatic agents are reported arrested in Moscow by the Bolsheviki, and Great Britain has demanded the release of R. H. B. Lockhart, the leader of the British contingent. Premier Lenine is reported unofficially to have sent an ultimatum to Japan regarding Siberia.

Just Once! Try Dodson's Liver Tone! Take No Calomel! Listen To Me!

If bilious, constipated, headachy or sick, I guarantee relief without taking dangerous calomel which sickens and salivates.

Stop using calomel! It makes you sick. Don't lose a day's work. If you feel lazy, sluggish, bilious or constipated, listen to me!

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful tonight, and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous by morning, I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep the entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless,) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silk, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

How You Can Make Hairs Quickly Disappear.

(Helps to Beauty)

Even a stubborn growth of hair will quickly vanish from the face, neck or arms after a single treatment with delatone. To remove the hairs, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be quite certain you get real delatone.

Girlish, Wrinkle-Free Skin Easy to Have

Since its remarkable astringent and tonic properties became known, clever women all over the world have been using the saxolite face bath to "tone up" their faces, remove wrinkles and draw flabby cheeks and neck back to normal. After using the solution, the face immediately feels much firmer. The skin tightens evenly over the face, thus reducing lines and sagginess. The formula is: Powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint.

This simple and harmless face bath is a splendid thing for the outdoor girl, since sun, wind and flying dust are so provocative of squinting and other contortions which cause wrinkles and crow's-feet. Also it is fine to freshen up a tired face in hot, depressing weather.

The More We Have of BETTER Homes, the Surer, Easier, Quicker Will We WIN THE WAR!

Home—the Great "Essential"!

After all is said and done, a HOME is the great Essential.

If people did not care where they lived or how they lived, we would not be fighting this war.

But for the privilege of having HOMES of our own choice and fitted up in a way to suit our artistic development and financial ability—for the FREEDOM, which alone can assure us of the possession of such HOMES—we are willing to stake our all.

Having known and become accustomed to this better mode of living, life would not be worth while to any of us without the possibility of the "pursuit" of happiness guaranteed to us by the very Constitution of the United States.

Every victory the Allied armies attain "over there" is one more assurance of the permanency of our HOMES.

As we read the news we can't fail to be happy at the prospects.

"Victory Day."

ALLIED WAR EXPOSITION CLOSES HERE TONIGHT.

Great Sham Battle Will Be Given Four Times—Many Notables Will Be at the Park.

AN APPEAL was made yesterday to the thousands who attended the great Allied War Exposition to make today the record one for attendance in the whole United States. Announcement informed the spectators that already Los Angeles has surpassed San Francisco by 75,000 for a like number of days. The programme tonight will end the exposition, the finale being a victory tableau to be presented by Ardine Cowlishaw, an artist from Boston. It is expected to be one of the most spectacular bits of the entire exposition, giving the final touch to a series of wonderful programmes.

One hundred thousand persons are expected at the Victory Day celebration today at the Allied War Exposition at Exposition Park. The exposition closes its gates to Los Angeles at 11 o'clock tonight and will proceed at once to points in the [illegible].

The great sham battle, under the direction of Lieut. R. H. Shaw of the Canadian army, will be staged in No Man's Land four times today instead of twice, as has been the programme. The spectacles are to commence at 11 a.m., 2, 4:15 and 10 p.m., and will show maneuvers by the tank Britannia, which is under the command of Capt. Richard Haigh, and is manned by the crew that took it through the battle of [illegible].

Victory day, under the chairmanship of Bernal H. Dyas, Southern California director of the exposition, will have perhaps the greatest programme of the season. The representative Allied officers will occupy the platform at the Liberty Forum. In the afternoon Capt. H. E. Osborne and Dr. Silas Evans, president of Occidental College, will deliver addresses. In the evening, Jiuji G. Kasai, the noted Japanese orator, will again speak on "Our Allies." Sergt. Blunt, the engineer of the Britannia, who has been over the top seventeen times, will speak on "Over the Top," and the president of the University of Arizona will speak. The farewell address will be given by Chester I. Campbell, director-general of the exhibit, and the Shrine Chanters are to sing at 8:25 o'clock.

GLAD THEY CAME.

Director Campbell yesterday expressed extreme gratification at the reception given by the people of the Southland to the exposition.

"It was doubtful," said Mr. Campbell, "when we were in San Francisco whether we would come to Southern California or go to the Pacific Northwest, where Portland, Seattle and other cities had put in a strong bid for the government exhibit before we went East to open in Chicago. But, through Bernal H. Dyas, representing the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and other local organizations, the bid of Los Angeles was too strong to resist.

"Now we are glad that we have come here, because the results in public interest have been worth while. All of the war activities of Southern California have become fused in this great enterprise, and the local people have contributed magnificently toward making possible the realization in the minds of the people of Southern California the facts of the war. This is the primary object of the Committee on Public Information in organizing this exposition. It is not a money-making affair. We shall probably break even financially. But what we do want to do is to give the people of America the facts of the war in concrete form. And we feel that we have done that in Los Angeles.

CO-OPERATION HERE.

"Due to the excellent co-operation of a number of Los Angeles people, we of the exposition have been able to conduct our enterprise in this city with excellent results. Bernal H. Dyas, Harry R. Minor, who has ably worked with Wendell McMahill in directing the programmes; Motley H. Flint, Champ Vance, Douglas Fairbanks, R. A. Heffner, John J. Jenkins, Bennie Zeidman, who directed the publicity campaign; D. W. Griffith, L. N. Brunswig, Mrs. Anita Baldwin, W. M. Bowen, D. A. Munger, John C. Cline, Edward D. Lyman, E. B. Rivers, L. D. Sale, Leo V. Starr, Walter R. Wheat and others of the local general committee have done noble work in making the exposition a tremendous success. San Francisco gave us a start in this project. With our success in this city, and the enthusiasm which has been shown, we are assured of a national triumph."

Chester I. Campbell and Bernal H. Dyas yesterday received telegrams from Secretary of War Baker, George Creel, chairman of the Committee on Public Information, and Charles S. Hart, director of the division of films, after hearing of the attendance figures in Los Angeles, congratulating them on the achievement here.

Mr. Creel's telegram to Mr. Dyas is expressive of the sentiment of the men in Washington. It is as follows:

"Accept my congratulations upon the success which you have made of the Allied War Exposition in Los Angeles, as indicated by the record attendance figures which we have just received. Allow me to thank you and the men of Los Angeles for the noble work which you have done to assist Mr. Campbell and our committee in this enterprise. From reports of the exposition in Los Angeles, we are assured of national success for this work, which is designed to give to the public of the United States an intimate view of the facts of the world war."

YESTERDAY'S EVENTS.

"Over the Top," which represents an exact reproduction of a battle scene in France, was particularly thrilling yesterday. A gas attack was simulated by the attacking "Huns" and an unusually heavy artillery duel, a heavy barrage, with the crack of the rifles of the Sammies and the "Boche" forces, gave the spectators an idea of how the Germans conduct warfare against civilization.

The realism of the "battle" was all the more evident when the whistle of the "Huns" started the "fight," and two war dogs, which have seen service at Camp Kearny under the instruction of the Grizzlies, went on the field as couriers. They carried messages from the front line trenches to Lieut. R. A. Shaw of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, who directed the battle. In actual battle these dogs carry messages while rifle bullets and shrapnel pass overhead and one part of their instruction is to become used to shellfire. These dogs and one other, all of which have been presented to the Allied War Exposition by Col. Anita M. Baldwin, will accompany the exposition when it leaves here and will be used to portray the use of these animals in war. The three are Medusa, Thor and Vulcan, and are the result of crossing the Airedale and Old English Sheep dog. They have had six months training in message carrying under direction of the Grizzlies. They will leave this week with the exposition.

Referring to the appearance of the dogs, Mrs. Baldwin said:

"I want to thank Col. Henseley of the Balloon School for his courtesy in loaning the services of J. E. Davidson, J. E. Rainsberger, H. F. Ohlrich and Fred Rones of the Sixty-fourth Balloon Company. I also want to thank the men for their interest in the work. Bernal Dyas and Mr. Campbell have been more than kind and it is gratifying to know that the dogs have worked well enough to earn commendation at the Allied War Exposition."

ARMY AIRPLANE STUNTS.

Lieuts. Chaffee and Wells thrilled the crowd in the afternoon with daredevil stunts close to the ground in an army airplane.

Private ("Bob") Dwight Howard Robinson, who has won an uphill fight to get into the army, talked from the reviewing stand in the afternoon. He tried to enlist several times before being accepted. Then he was detailed for domestic duty. In order to get overseas duty he underwent several operations, one a serious one. He said:

"I am going over as a salesman to deliver a 16-inch shell to the Kaiser's palace in Berlin."

This drew continued applause. He praised the work of the Y.M.C.A., K. of C. and Jewish board, which he said are not teaching creed in the trenches, but tending the bodily needs of the men.

James A. Wakefield gave a stirring address on "France," telling of his experiences there. He told of one French mother who thought herself poor until the war broke out, when she was able to give nine sons to the cause of France."

"They may butcher all the French people," he said, "but they will never conquer France."

CONCERTS BY BANDS.

The Fort MacArthur and Submarine Base bands gave a concert in the afternoon and the sailors' quartette, Sailor Stout, baritone, and the Sammies' Sisters, Alberta and Lorene Davis, furnished some delightful numbers.

In the evening the two military bands were supplemented by the band of Elks Lodge, No. 99. Community singing was led by Frank Bristol and the uplifters' quartette and Fred Stone, comedian, were added to the regular programme. Capt. R. Haigh, commanding the tank Britannia, gave an address on "Life in a Tank."

Miss Helen Slaughter is the hostess at the Hostess Home of the Y.W.C.A. at the exposition, having been sent here by the national board of the association. She tells many who ask of the work at hostess houses, work among the women in France and recreation centers at munitions factories here.

Dr. R. S. Von Kleinschmidt, president of the University of Arizona, will speak tonight on "German Pacifism, or the Devil, a Saint."

When the junior dancing class was started some months ago by Mr. Kramer he announced that a certain percentage, above expenses, would be turned over to the Needlework Guild war work. Thus the junior dancing class has been the means of enriching the war fund by $175, and Mrs. Kramer wishing to make it even $200, added $25 more. This money will be used to purchase supplies for war relief.

The last two or three months the guild has worked mostly on foreign refugee work on request from Washington. Finished garments have been coming in to the guild at the rate of 2000 a week.

Bids on tea (black and green,) asparagus, cherries, peaches, pears and sardines are wanted by the government for delivery of samples at the warehouse in Los Angeles, bids to be opened August 19; also on potatoes (Irish, fresh) and fresh onions, bids to be opened August 17. TO GET AFTER RAIL THIEVES.

Government Forms Body to Make Traffic Safe.

Relentless Prosecution will be the Programme.

Board Organized Here for Southwest District.

The first official step here toward a vigorous prosecution by the government of all persons guilty of stealing railroad property or freight in transit on the government lines was taken yesterday when the Los Angeles board of the property protection section of the United States Railroad Administration was formed at a meeting in the offices of S. Selvy, superintendent of special service of the Santa Fe lines.

Practically every branch of the Federal government, the city and county officials and railroad men and departments of the territory extending from El Paso to Fresno and Santa Barbara, and from Salt Lake and Albuquerque, N. M., to Los Angeles, were represented at the meeting. Mr. Selvy was elected chairman of the board.

The new policy, formulated and directed by Philip J. Doherty, manager of the property protection section of the Railroad Administration, when put into effect, will mean that the same relentless prosecution of crimes against the postal service and other Federal departments will be applied to the class of criminals who loot railroad properties and freight in transit, it was announced.

BIG TOTAL OF THEFTS.

That the aggregate volume of thefts of this sort, when tabulated, would reach a staggering total was the statement made in the message sent by Mr. Doherty to Mr. Selvy.

The new plan, embracing the active co-operation of every Federal and civil department in any given locality, will be far-reaching in its results because it will permit the authorities to take every case, no matter how small, into the Federal courts, as an offense against the United States.

"We shall be able to bring witnesses from any State, employ the entire resources of the country, and not be limited by the expenses. The same policy that in the past operated in spending thousands of dollars in convicting a person for stealing one postage stamp will be applied for the protection of millions and millions of railroad property. It is to be a war measure, as well as a measure of efficiency and protection of business," Mr. Selvy explained.

MATTER IMPORTANT.

That the Washington officials regard the situation as important was indicated in the telegram sent by Mr. Doherty to Mr. Selvy. It said, in part:

"Your local Sheriff and police department should be invited to participate in your conference. Let it be known generally that it is the purpose of the government to make freight in transit as immune from interference as the mail; that car thefts will be prosecuted as relentlessly as mail or bank thefts; that, while the country is at war, no impairment of its resources is defensible or excusable, nor is it any palliation that such offenses are committed by men who have families dependent on them.

"You will have co-operation from the legal forces of carriers, and I am hoping that a measure prepared for submission to Congress will give to the railroad police such Federal authority for making arrests, carrying arms and the like as will greatly strengthen the hands of the men who are leaders in your territory in this patriotic work. Stimulate your men all along the lines of efficiency and vigor in safeguarding property in custody of the government. It is work of great public importance, and I am sure that your efficient forces will continue upon it in true, patriotic spirit."

SOME AT MEETING.

Among those present at yesterday's meeting were Chief of Police Butler, Sheriff Cline, officials representing the United States Attorney's office, the District Attorney's office, the United States Marshal, C. L. Keep (agent in charge of the Department of Justice,) army intelligence officers, representatives of the Postoffice Inspector's office, of the Los Angeles Retail Merchants' Association, the Associated Jobbers and Produce Exchange, and E. W. Camp, general attorney for the Santa Fe lines.

The railroad interests were represented by the divisional special agents of the Salt Lake, Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe railroads west of Albuquerque and Salt Lake and east of Santa Barbara to El Paso, the chief special agents of these divisions and the chief special agent of the Pacific Electric Railway.

POUNDING HUN FROM FRANCE.

man infantry held for a while and then broke and the Americans kept going, at some places without the assistance of the tanks. The ground, pitted with deep gullies, was unsuited for tank warfare.

There were no trenches, but a thick smoke screen blowing across the ground indicated where the enemy's positions lay. At the same time the German artillery became active and dropped shells in the direction of the American troops which inflicted a few casualties. The Americans ran on and reached the smoke line just as it lifted. There they found themselves at grips with the enemy.

Meanwhile certain American units had reached positions in front of a wood when the Germans opened fire with machine guns. Many of the enemy machine gunners came up from deep dugouts after the Americans barrage had ceased and they placed their guns in prepared pits. The Americans faced a hail of bullets.

SPEED UP RETREAT.

The Germans continued to fire until the Americans and English put them out of action.

North of the Somme and also south of it the Germans are showing every sign of a rapid retreat.

The enemy continues to destroy his stores of munitions in various localities along the battle front, as is the practice of a beaten army.

Further successes east of Montdidier would iron out of the whole sector north of Libons and result in the freeing of a grea territory from the Germans and wresting from them much of the gains that resulted from the enemy's spring offensive. In addition, a forward movement would take from the invaders the bountiful crops that they have been cultivating inside their lines and which now are ready to harvest.

Many more prisoners have been taken during the operations of the last twenty-four hours, among them troops from at least four new divisions that were hurled in north of the Somme. Apparently the enemy has rushed in new troops from wherever they could be obtained, for among the prisoners are some from reserve battalions of divisions located far to the north.

This would indicate that considerable confusion prevails among Crown Prince Rupprecht's forces as a result of the unexpected Allied assault and their continued success.

CHIPILLY CAPTURED.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 10.—(Reter's 3:15 p.m.)—Chipilly spur, north of the Somme, was captured by the American and British troops at 6 o'clock last night. The attack began at 5 o'clock when the Allies moved forward between the Ancre and the Somme. They were supported by tanks and were preceded by a heavy barrage fire. The enemy was driven toward Bray, northeast of Chipilly.

ENEMY RETREATING.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 10, 10:40 a.m.—The enemy seems to be retreating today all along the battle line in Picardy, especially in the center, where he is being heavily attacked by the British.

In their advance the British have captured Warvillers, Vrely, Folies, Rosieres and Vauvillers.

In the course of the fighting a German divisional headquarters and its staff were captured.

British tanks have been seen well to the east of Meharicourt. Streams of German transports are still going eastward. Two new German divisions have been engaged by the advancing Allies. Information received from prisoners indicates that the fighting may soon become heavier.

Because the Allies gained all their objectives it is possible the enemy does not know where he was beaten. It is, therefore, inadvisable to disclose exactly where the Allies are operating. It may be said, however, that the British infantry and tanks reached the points they intended to attain, and this morning they are holding consolidated lines along the front.

The Allied forces captured many towns, a large quantity of material and a complete German divisional headquarters and staff. This headquarters was captured at Lihons. The number of prisoners this morning is close to 25,000.

North of the Somme the Allies, after taking Chipilly spur, have gone on, driving the enemy before them. Numerous tanks and "whippets" assisted the advancing infantry.

Farther south the French advanced rapidly and increased their number of prisoners as they pushed their line forward.

The Germans are now well back toward the Somme, south of Peronne. With this stream at their back and the Allied guns and airplanes pouring shells into the crossing over the Somme, the position of the enemy is serious.

AMERICANS IN FIGHT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, August 10.—American troops have been thrown into the fighting in the great battle on the Amiens-Somme district. They succeeded in overcoming a stiff resistance and helped the British capture important positions in an attack launched yesterday between the Ancre and the Somme.

The machine gunners and infantry went into battle with their traditional enthusiasm. They met the Germans and defeated them here just as they did along the Marne. At places stiff resistance developed, but all along the line the Americans, British and French smashed through the harassed enemy, who was trying to hold up their advance.

SALVATION ARMY'S WAR DRIVE ORGANIZED HERE.

A LUNCHEON was given yesterday noon by the National War Service Fund of the Salvation Army in the assembly-room of the Alexandria Hotel, to fifty business and professional men.

L. R. Wharton, chairman of the committee on organization, explained that the purpose of the meeting was to perfect arrangements for the local Salvation Army War Fund campaign from August 18 to 28. It is to be a county drive for $100,000, $75,000 of which is Los Angeles' share.

Dr. Robert G. Moore, the official representative of the Salvation Army war work, told of the war activities of the Salvation Army. "The Salvation Army has been in active war service on the western front since August 4, 1914," he said. "Up to date they have forty-eight motor ambulances manned by Salvationists, seventy-nine hotels for use of soldiers and sailors, 190 huts for religious and social gatherings, 300 restrooms equipped with stationery, literature, games, etc., 800 Salvation Army officers, 600 of which are women; 265,000 Salvation Army members are fighting with the Allied armies, and every penny of the money raised will be spent in carrying on and extending this work."

Carl Bronson offered to equip a wagon float for the accommodation of the Billy Sunday chorus, of which he was director, so that they may drive through the streets of Los Angeles announcing the Salvation Army war drive in song.

E. G. Judah said: "The Salvation Army is the organization that does things while others are talking about it and I am going to get behind them in their local drive for funds to the fullest extent possible."

It was announced that the local Elks will supply at least five teams of six men each for the campaign. The Ad Club is also preparing to strongly support the drive.

The following Executive Committee has been appointed and will have charge of the campaign in this city: Harry McComb, W. H. Clune, Henry O'Melveny, R. W. Poindexter, Nathan Newby, William E. McVay, Frank E. Trask, Seth R. Brown, R. W. Burnham, Walter G. Lincoln, F. J. Heusman, Glen W. Lull, E. D. Roberts, C. G. Pyle, Albert Stephens, Harold Janss, Rev. Charles E. Locke, Rev. J. W. Brougher, J. C. DeCoo, A. B. Cass, Mrs. Ralph E. Starkweather, N. H. Barragar, Carl Bronson, Arthur Stepper, M. H. Berne, E. G. Judah.

OFFICER WITNESSES HOLD-UP, TAKES MEN.

CAPTURE ALLEGED THIEVES IS MADE AFTER WATCHING STREET STRUGGLE.

As a witness of an alleged hold-up, Patrolman Sydney Sweetnam, a veteran officer of the police department, yesterday made a good record for himself when he arrested two alleged highwaymen. Sweetnam was near Seventh and San Pedro streets when he heard a call for help. A few hundred yards away he saw the figures of two men struggling with a third. Then the two ran.

As the fleeing figures neared him, Sweetnam stopped the progress of the first one by blocking his way with a gun. The second man also came to a stop, with his hands up. After handcuffing his prisoners, Sweetnam located Frederick Erheart, the alleged victim, who said he was held up and robbed by the two men, who obtained his watch.

The prisoners gave the names of James Burns and Beltram Salazar. They were booked on the charge of suspicion of robbery. Erheart was detained as a witness and the watch booked for evidence.

BRINGS BEER, JAILED.

Hotel Porter Given Ninety Days for Violating the Gandier Ordinance.

Violations of the Gandier liquor law, even if they are covered up by subterfuge and legal complications, should be discouraged by stiff jail sentences, Police Judge White declared yesterday in sentencing John D. Jackson, a negro porter in the Nadeau Hotel, No. 105 South Spring street, to serve ninety days in the City Jail.

Jackson was arrested by Officers Oliver, Longuevan and Wells of the metropolitan squad, at the time they arrested Marie Edwards, recently the center of the sensational Lyons murder case, and another woman and two men. He was charged with bringing two bottles of beer into the room where the officers and the prisoners were at the time.

Jackson pleaded guilty to the charge of violating the liquor ordinance. The police testified the officer called the clerk and asked for a bell-hop, and that Jackson arrived with the beer. Jackson, in explanation, said he was taking the beer to its owner, in another room.

W.C.T.U. CONFERENCE.

Mrs Stella B. Irvine, president; Mrs. Eva C. Wheeler, vice-president; Mrs. Kara S. Root, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Hattie C. Young, recording secretary; Mrs. Jennie R. Thompson, assistant recording secretary, and Mrs. Belle Mulford, treasurer of the Southern California W.C.T.U. left Los Angeles yesterday for Pacific Grove, where they will meet the officers of the W.C.T.U. of Northern California and arrange for a campaign for "dry" legislation and against the Rominger Bill.

San Francisco, July 31.—Clara Kimball Young, film actress, was the envy of all San Francisco women who saw her last week when she came up from Los Angeles to do campaigning for local war work, wearing her wonderful ermine coat. Miss Young has a reputation for good dressing and there is always much interest in what noted women of the stage are wearing, but this wonderful coat appearing at the beginning of the fall fur season has been more talked about than is usual with one individual garment.

When Christ Stood On American

His Personal Ministry Among Ancient Americans

By Dr. James E. Talmage,
Of the Council of the Twelve, Church of Jesus of Latter-day Saints; Salt Lake City, Utah

THE Church of Jesus Christ was established on the American continent through the personal ministry of the Risen Lord soon after His ascension from Mount Olivet. The Book of Mormon contains a circumstantial account of this marvelous theophany.

From the time of the migration of Lehi and his people from Palestine to America, six centuries before the Christian era, Nephite prophets had testified of the future birth, earthly life, sacrificial death, and resurrection of the Savior of mankind. It was specifically foretold that the time of the Lord's birth in the flesh would be marked by unusual signs on this continent; a new star would appear; while two days and the night between would be as a continuous day since no darkness would intervene. The prophecies were fulfilled; and from that illumined night the Nephites reckoned their time, the older chronology being superseded by the new.

Then, in the spring of the thirty-fourth year following, the land was swept by a holocaust of fury; dense darkness prevailed, linking the nights together with no light of day between; tempests raged; the sea rolled inland; there were thunders and lightnings, and both elevations and subsidences of the earth's surface whereby the topography of the land was greatly changed. Thus was the greatest tragedy of history, the crucifixion of the Lord Jesus Christ, proclaimed in the West; and every feature of the awful cataclysm had been foretold by the prophets.

About six weeks later many Nephites were assembled, earnestly discoursing with one another over the great changes that had been wrought in the land, and particularly concerning Jesus Christ, of whose atoning death the predicted signs had been witnessed in all their tragic details. While thus congregated they heard a voice from above saying: "Behold my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, in whom I have glorified my name: Hear ye Him." (See Book of Mormon, 3 Nephi 11:7.) While gazing upward in reverent expectation, the people beheld a Man clothed in a white robe, who descended and stood among them. He spake, saying: "Behold, I am Jesus Christ, whom the prophets testified shall come into the world; and, behold, I am the light and the life of the world; and I have drunk out of that bitter cup which the Father hath given me, and have glorified the Father in taking upon sins of the world, in the have suffered the will of the in all things from the (3 Nephi 11:10-11.)

As the Lord directed, rose from their posture and one by one came did see and feel the nails in His hands and spear wound in His side among the multitude twelve, whom He ordained thority to baptize the His departure. Besides nance of water baptism sion and the laying for the gift of the Holy Lord established the bread and wine, and the Nephite Twelve minister in all these He instructed the principles of the Gospel them many of the which, prior to His death taught the Jews. He in Him the Law of filled, and that instead higher law of the Gospel in force among men.

It will be remembered impressive sermon of Shepherd and the sheep at Jerusalem, Christ other sheep I have, of this fold; them also I and they shall hear my there shall be one shepherd." (John that has pondered not yearned for its deeper meaning try among the Nephite continued His discourse verily, I say unto they of whom I said have which are them also I must shall hear my voice; be one fold, and Nephi 15:21.)

Thus was the established in America years later it the overwhelming had swept the New Old World, and by the Nephites fell hereditary foes.

RAIN, DELUGE AT NEEDLES.

Freak Storm Does Much Damage in River Town; Estimated at $10,000.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Aug. 10.—The eastern half of Needles was under water today as a result of a violent rain storm which flooded houses and basement, filled streets with debris and wrought damage estimated at $10,000.

In several stores the storm water passed through the front door and out the rear entrance. One concrete business block was condemned as a result of storm damage. Large boulders were washed down the streets in some places.

Inhabitants in the eastern part of the city were rescued from their homes, many of which stood in six to eight feet of water and several had close calls from drowning. There is no report from Needles in regard to danger from floods in the Colorado River.

BIG REGISTRATION IN IMPERIAL COUNTY.

THREE THOUSAND MORE THAN LAST YEAR—JUDGE COLE STIRS POLITICS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EL CENTRO, Aug. 9.—Nine thousand, five hundred and thirty-seven voters are eligible to cast their ballots at the primaries, August 27, according to official announcement by County Clerk M. S. Cock today. This total is nearly 3000 higher than the number registered in time for voting at the last August primary election two years ago, and is taken here as an indication of a decided increase in population in Imperial county. Political experts predict a vote of about 25 per cent. of the registration at the primaries.

Local interest centers particularly in the contest for District Attorney, for which office there are three aspirants—Charles L. Childers, J. F. Seymour, Jr., and Bert D. Noel. Until a few days ago the race was being quietly run by all three candidates. Then one of the newspapers published a letter from Superior Judge Franklin J. Cole, in which he expressed preference for Childers as the candidate of the "best people" for the office. This publicity was followed by considerable editorial comment as to the right of a Superior judge to take sides in a political contest and to choose between attorneys who have practiced in his court.

Judge Cole defends his action in a statement, which says:

"I am always for the best available man for office. I have just as good a right to an opinion as any other citizen, and any time that my official position prevents me from expressing it, I shall resign my office."

"DR. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is just what I need. It is a splendid laxative, mild and pleasant and acts so quickly and easily. I wouldn't be without it, and keep it in our home all the time."

ARMY BALLOON SCHOOL TO GRADUATE STUDENTS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ARMY BALLOON SCHOOL (Arcadia) Aug. 10.—The first class of students at the Army Balloon School is preparing for graduation. Several of the cadets, who had received their theoretical training at Fort Omaha, began their flying course when the Arcadia school first opened. These men are near their commissions, and exercises will be held in the near future.

Students in this branch of the service are given a severe mental and physical test by the examining board and then sent to the ground school at Fort Omaha. There they study gasses, cordage, telephony, meteorology, air currents, etc. Those who complete that course satisfactorily come to the Arcadia school for their balloon work. The training here takes about three months.

HIGH-CLASS MEN.

The mental and physical standard of the enlisted men, as well as cadets and officers at Arcadia, is very high. A majority of the men have a high school education. Within the last few days five enlisted men were sent to the Central Field Artillery Officers' Training School at Camp Taylor, Ky.; fourteen will leave in a short time for the Infantry Officers' Training School at Camp Pike, Ark., and twenty men are being examined here for commissions.

Lieut. Geiger has been transferred here as an instructor in the balloon work. He comes from Fort Omaha.

NEW STEEL HANGAR.

The post's first steel hangar has been completed. Built entirely of steel, it is 40x145 feet, ground area, and will be used as a tool school. The structure was erected by enlisted men at the school. It was completed within two weeks of the time the first bolt was started, and men and officers are boasting of their accomplishment, asserting that the government never received equal return from civilian contractors.

LOCATE K. OF C. HOUSE.

The Knights of Columbus committee, in conference with Lieut.-Col. Hensley, have decided upon a location for their proposed $10,000 club building. The building will be erected on the north side of the ground and directly east of the main entrance. The entrance of the building will be inside the grounds.

Keen rivalry is manifested among the various companies at the school, and there is some talk of arranging intercompany contests in the balloon work. The Fifty-first Company was the first to arrive at this field, and that company has the honor of being the first to handle an observation balloon in this district. Company members claim the school championship.

The company declares its balloon is first to "rise majestically into the cool morning air and the last to be hauled down and fastened securely into its bed at night." The balloons are sent up each morning at 7 o'clock, and each morning there is a race to see which crew gets its balloon up first. According to members of the Fifty-first, no other company has beaten them yet.

BEAN THRESHERS AT WORK NEAR SAWTELLE

ABSENCE OF LATE RAINS RESPONSIBLE FOR SHORTAGE OF CROP, IS REPORT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAWTELLE, Aug. 10.—The threshers have started work on the blue-pod beans, and the first sacks of the harvested crop are arriving at the warehouse. Owing to the absence of late spring rains, the yield will be short, and the quality, as indicated by first threshings, will not measure up to the standard.

The cutting of early lima beans has been started on several ranches near here, as well as on the Rodeo property at Beverly. It will be at least two weeks before threshing is commenced.

The cannery received its first shipments of tomatoes yesterday and made a successful trial run, but heavy shipments are not expected before the middle of next week, as ripening is slow on account of foggy weather.

Sawtelle again realizes that she is a part of Los Angeles. This time evidence comes in the form of notice from the municipal department intrusted with the handling of garbage of all kinds. According to this notice, all tin cans, rubbish, etc., must be placed at the front curb, and will be removed the first Monday of each month.

The new fire bell, purchased and hung by the women of the Christian Church, is rung at noon each day to call the citizens to prayer for the success of Allied arms. The expenses were defrayed by giving entertainments and fetes.

MEXICANS RETURN TO WORK.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ALPAUGH, Aug. 10.—"Work or go to jail" was the choice given by Sheriff Farmer to a number of Mexicans who had left their jobs in the beet fields on the Kerchoff ranch, north of here, after they had been harangued by a man who spoke broken Spanish and who is believed to be a professional agitator.

Sheriff Farmer was sent for while a dispute was in progress between J. W. Mays, foreman on the property, and a number of the workmen, who demanded an immediate increase in wages. When the Sheriff arrived he said the strikers could go to work for Mays or go to breaking rocks on the road until the Federal government could act in their cases. They chose the beet fields.

Half a dozen automobiles were driven off the pavement while trying to travel during the overflow.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

UPLAND, Aug. 10.—By reason of the activities of a committee from the Upland Chamber of Commerce, it is said this city stands a fair chance of securing one of the Crawford marmalade factories. Various other sites have been offered, but it is said, by reason of the advantageous location of Upland, in the very heart of such a large and splendid citrus center, the managers of the enterprise are showing a considerable interest in the proposals made them by the men from the local chamber.

MARY PICKFORD'S BIG CAKE SELLS AT $18.40.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA BEACH, Aug. 10.—An enormous cake, presented to Miss Mary Pickford, godmother and honorary colonel of the One Hundred and Forty-third Regiment, Field Artillery, by that organization, shortly before their departure from Camp Kearny, was today presented to the Santa Monica Bay Cities Red Cross chapter by the little colonel. The cake was put up at the open market at the chapter house garden and it realized $18.40 for the Red Cross. It was acquired by Mrs. E. E. Campbell of No. 1002 California avenue.

HUNDREDS ATTEND ITALIAN DAY FETE.

BAND CONCERTS AND PATRIOTIC ADDRESSES FEATURE BAY CITY EVENT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA BEACH, Aug. 10.—Hundreds of visitors, including Italian officers and sailors, and leading members of the Southern California Italian colony, visited this city today to participate in the Italian day fete planned and carried out by Mrs. C. C. Waring, for the benefit of the Italian relief fund, which surpassed all expectations in its success.

A feature of the day was the Italian dinner at noon at which Leo Carillo, famous actor, and son of the late Judge Carillo, for many years Mayor, was the guest of honor. Mr. Carillo declared that the actors of America were doing their bit in this war, not only by actual army service, but in many other ways, including being responsible, through their efforts, in raising more than 25 per cent. of the Liberty Loans. Guy Manners, British poet, read two original poems in praise of Italy.

All day there were band concerts by the three famous Italian bands of the bay district, the Santa Monica Beach Marine Band, the Santa Monica Municipal Band, and the Venice-of-America Band.

The grounds adjoining the Santa Monica Bay Cities Red Cross Chapter House, where the fete centered, were transformed into a typically beautiful Italian garden, decked with Italian flags and colors, which, in the evening was illuminated with hundreds of lights. The gardens were a kaleidoscope of color with the varied and bright Italian peasant costumes of the young women who waited on the booths, sold flowers and served at the dinner. The day was the most successful one in the history of the chapter.

A dance in the evening was preceded by a grand concert, at which a number of Italian grand opera stars from La Scala at Milan were featured, as well as Miss Cordelia Dana Jannaris of the Chicago Grand Opera Company. Refreshments were served throughout the evening in the garden.

Signor Giovanni Andreini, editor of La Patria, the Los Angeles Italian newspaper, made a stirring address during the afternoon. "Italy," he declared, "had everything to lose and nothing to gain by casting in her lot with the Allies, but her people saw the great patriotic principles at stake and put their country on the side of freedom and liberty, in whose behalf the brave soldiers of Italy have held the hordes of both Austria and Germany at bay."

JUDGE CONVINCED.

Reads Transcript and Orders "Walking" Elliott's Bond Raised to $5000.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, Aug. 10.—"I have read the transcript and I am convinced that the bail should be raised," said Judge W. H. Thomas today, when he ordered the cash bail of Benjamin W. (Walking) Elliott raised from $1000 to $5000. Elliott is the man who shot Eugene Young at La Habra, and fired at Constable H. F. Ashley when Ashley went to arrest him for the Young shooting. Elliott, who is now awaiting trial on a charge of assaulting Ashley with intent to kill, is worth in property several times $5000, and expected to raise the bail money very shortly.

"The constable went to Elliott's room on perfectly legitimate business," said Judge Thomas, "and Elliott called out to him that he would kill Ashley if he stuck his head inside the door. In the Federal court at Los Angeles a man's bail was fixed at $5000 when disloyal remarks only were involved. In this case threats and shots are involved."

Judge Thomas continued the case to next Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock, when witnesses will be summoned by both the prosecution, opposing probation, and the defense, asking for probation.

The body was taken in charge by his countrymen and at a suitable time will be sent to China for interment in his native soil, as is the custom with his people. [LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ALHAMBRA, Aug. 10.—Chief of Police Parker has completed and sent to Washington the complete records, with photographs, of twenty-one women listed as alien enemy residents of Alhambra. A considerable number of them are good Americans, the presence of whose names on such a list is accounted for by the fact that they married unnaturalized German men.

Modern Painless Dentistry

As the Highest Perfected Specialty of All Science

The charm of a pleasant smile may be killed by an ill-kept set of teeth. Clean, sound teeth indicate a large measure of self-respect.

NATURAL PLATES

Metal Plate
Rubber

The advantage of the Foster thin metal plates over the old thick rubber plates.

The old-style rubber plate is unsanitary and uncomfortable. My new thin metal plates will give a lifetime of satisfactory service and are absolutely no impediment to speech. They can be made, as shown above, to build out the hollows of the face and to eliminate lines and wrinkles. They are one of the big forward steps of modern dentistry.

It is quite true that the public is imposed upon by many 'practicing' the profession who have inferior ability, unskilled and careless, caring little for the health or comfort of their patient.

Dentistry is an exacting specialty, being of the most delicate nature, the work is almost entirely upon live tissue, treating diseases, correcting deformities and reproducing nature. To do this successfully, we must have a complete understanding of the bony structure of the head and face, as each canal, prominence and opening has a specific importance and carries or protects some vital organ.

We must be familiar with all the important muscles, their location, attachments and offices, for interfering with the free use of a muscle impairs the power of mastication and probably changes the entire expression.

We must know the exact location of arteries, veins or the parts supplied by them, we having probably more to do with the nerves than any other tissue of the body, for through a thorough knowledge of the nervous system, their exact location and the parts that they supply we are able to desensitize at any point, enabling us to extract teeth, remove nerves or perform any of the operations pertaining to dentistry absolutely without pain or discomfort to the patient. To do all of this we have accomplished only a small part of our obligation.

DIAGNOSIS is probably the most perplexing and difficult problem of any profession, and any degree of accuracy is only acquired by a thorough knowledge of his Profession and close observation of causes and results, long experience, honesty, and good, sound judgment. Without any one of these qualifications, disaster and failure will result.

PYORRHOEA is one of the most common, dreaded and uncleanly diseases with which the Dental Profession has to contend, and if not treated soon reaches a cronic stage, giving off a constant flow of pus, which is taken into the system. This disease also causes the loosening and final loss of the teeth, a general debility from toxic infection, resulting in many systemic disorders and often complete disability. Pyorrhoea in its early stages is successfully treated, and if the patient is properly instructed as to the care of the teeth thereafter, permanent relief or cure may result.

REPRODUCTION of nature to the extent of doing nature's work, together with the blending of the features so that the work cannot be detected from nature's own, in such a manner that it is clean and congenial to the tissues, at the same time perfectly comfortable to the individual, is a science not surpassed by the greatest artist or the most skilled Swiss mechanic. This work is being done without pain by our modern dentists of today. Ill-fitting dental work is not only unsightly but is unclean, giving cause to unhealthy conditions and disease, a loss of vitality and efficiency.

We, as a people of California, should not vote for, or cause in any way the lowering of the standard of efficiency that is so important to health and the welfare of the people.

MARIE EDWARDS TO HAVE MEDICAL TEST.

ARRESTED AS VAGRANT, SLAYER OF SENATOR SAYS CASE IS A "FRAME-UP."

Marie Pinzon Edwards, the young woman who recently was tried for her life on the charge of shooting State Senator Henry Lyon, and later released following a disagreement of the jury, would rather go through the entire trial over again than face the charges on which she now is being held by the police, she declared yesterday. Her statement was made in the woman's department of the City Jail, where, with Josephine Williams, a companion, she spent her first day behind the bars following her release from the County Jail months ago.

Miss Edwards and Josephine Williams are charged with vagrancy. They were arrested in company with two men in the Nadeau Hotel, No. 105 South Spring street, by the Metropolitan Squad early yesterday morning.

Marie Edwards asserts the arrest is a "frame-up." The arresting officers, Patrolmen Longuevan, Oliver and Wells, who took her into custody, say they have a complete case against both prisoners. John D. Jackson, the colored porter arrested with the party and charged with a violation of the liquor law, was convicted in Police Judge White's court yesterday. He pleaded guilty.

"There is one man, however," Marie Edwards declared, "who is still faithful to me. He is the man who wants to marry me, who is willing to put up my bail money. He is a lieutenant in the aviation service, but I will not disclose his name."

The young woman is being held without bail. She will be subjected to a medical test, and later, unless ordered to the detention hospital, will be arraigned in the women's court.

MUST HELP MOTHER.

Man Ordered to Pay Ten Dollars Monthly Toward Support of Parent of Seventy-two.

Seward W. Johnston was ordered yesterday by Judge Taft to continue to pay $10 monthly for the support of his aged mother, Mary M. Johnston. The mother, who is past 72, had brought an action for support against her son.

Johnston asserted he was unable to pay more than that as he was making payments on Liberty Bonds and giving money to the Red Cross.

ROBINSON'S HOLDS BIG RED CROSS DAY.

OVER SIX THOUSAND DOLLARS RAISED AT CARNIVAL AT THE SHOP.

By Olive Gray.

Everything conspired to make Robinson's Red Cross Carnival yesterday at the Red Cross Shop an unqualified success. The finest of weather put people in a good mood for enjoyment; everything was arranged with the utmost good taste; the programme was high class; the merchandise offered was such as folks truly want; the refreshments, both at the booths and tables, and the dinner later in the day, were of the best, and, in short, the fete was perfection in every detail.

The canopies spread over the lawn were much appreciated, making the place most comfortable, and the booths were tastefully arranged. There were "paddling," "chance" sales and drawings in various ways, but all was conducted in a dignified and restrained manner, although there was no lack of enthusiasm.

Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond was welcomed enthusiastically when she appeared on the platform to sing and to present her autographed songs for the benefit of the Red Cross funds. When the Naval Reserve Band came marching up the sidewalk there were cheers and much crowding to greet the "boys." The band was entertained at dinner by the coterie in charge of the carnival.

Mrs. J. M. Schneider, wife of the president of the J. W. Robinson Company, personally entertained at afternoon tea and at dinner those giving of their talent or genius for the benefit of the affair.

The day was a success from a social point of view, from the standpoint of happy and refined entertainment, and certainly so financially. Although the exact total of the receipts cannot be known for several days, it was understood early in the afternoon that the amount had touched the $6000 mark and there was much more to follow. Certainly the Robinson staff, and the firm which were at work arranging for the affair, have every reason to be proud of their Red Cross Day.

GROOM SIXTY-SEVEN, BRIDE FORTY-THREE; ANOTHER GROOM IS SEVENTY.

Business acquaintances of Clarence H. Blake, a furniture dealer, 67 years old, and Miss Mattie B. Canning, 43 years old, were surprised yesterday when they found that the jokes they had intended to play at the wedding of the couple would come too late. Realizing that "something was brewing," Mr. Blake and Miss Canning went quietly before Cupid Sparks on Friday, obtained a marriage license and, crossing the street to the residence of Rev. James I. Myers, were quietly married. They will reside at No. 1952 Lovelace avenue, Mr. Blake's residence, where he also has a furniture store. His bride was formerly with the information bureau of the Pacific Electric.

FICKERT FLAYS I.W.W. CODDLERS

Also Attacks Extravagance of State Government.

Promises to Eliminate All Unnecessary Bureaus.

Farmers Greet the Candidate Enthusiastically.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MARTINEZ, Aug. 10.—Charles M. Fickert went ahead in whirlwind fashion today, moving through four northern counties and making a score of stops. His receptions were eager and enthusiastic.

He flayed the I.W.W., denounced the seditious and was bitter in his condemnation of the American Bolsheviki, a term he employs to express his detestation of the coddlers of the anarchists and the gentle sympathizers with dynamiters.

"Why," he cried, "only last week I received an anonymous communication threatening that if Mooney was hanged I would be shot, but I am willing to bet that if I were permitted to tie the noose about Mooney's neck the coward would confess before the trap was sprung."

He attacked the extravagance of State government, which has made of this commonwealth the most costly to the taxpayer of any State. He pledged to outroot all unnecessary commissions and to consolidate those performing similar functions.

In the last week he has received great encouragement in his campaigning. Practically at all times he has addressed himself to the farmer, who has suffered much from terror and incendiarism. They are in just the frame of mind to listen to a man they know has given proof of his determination to rid the State of this blight.

Falls Down.

"UNIONIZING" OF YELLOW CAR LINES HEAVY FROST.

THE 2500 motormen and conductors of the Los Angeles Railway (yellow cars) turned out to the number of forty-five to attend a "monster mass meeting" to organize a local branch of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America last night at Burbank Hall. The all-night meeting was called for 8 o'clock, but it was 9:30 o'clock before B. F. Bowbeer, fourth international vice-president of the association, felt there was an attendance enough to warrant calling the meeting to order. There were then sixty-seven in the hall, of whom twelve were Pacific Electric employees who still cherish ideas of trying to repeat their late strike, and ten labor leaders headed by J. B. Dale, and known in labor circles as the "Labor Temple gang" of organizers.

The attendance was in spite of the fact that thirty organizers waited at the ends of all the yellow car lines yesterday asking the men to attend the meeting. It also developed last night that the road recently raised the pay of all employees, the raise ranging from one-quarter of a cent an hour for new men to 2 cents an hour for older men, making their pay 44½ cents an hour.

Organizer Bowbeer said that the association is patriotic and would permit no strike or talk of strikes; that the men could easily adjust their difficulties with the company, or failing could appeal to the United States War Labor Board.

J. B. Dale, local organizer for the American Federation of Labor, who has been active in trying to organize everything in sight in Los Angeles lately from the school teachers to the city's taxi drivers, said:

"We are not looking for trouble. We don't want it, but if the company goes looking for it, why they can get it and we shall say then, 'Who started it?' We are not pro-German and this is not a pro-German move."

Organizer Bowbeer said that many Los Angeles people do not seem to like labor unions, that the labor movement here had been unfortunate and the Labor Temple was somewhat in disrepute, so he had called the first meeting at Burbank Hall instead of the Temple. He asked all who wanted to join to come forward, but none came and the speeches continued during the night. But $14 in memberships had passed over the table up to midnight.

WE CURE

Piles, Fistula

And All Rectal Diseases

Without an Operation

For twenty-five years we have been curing diseases of the rectum and lower bowel. During that time our experience has enabled us to develop a method that is superior to others. We cure without surgery, and our patients are not confined in bed and seldom lose a moment's time from their business.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 24, 1918.

Drs. WHITE AND WAINWRIGHT:

Dear Sirs—While you have not asked me for a testimonial, possibly you will give a short one from me space, should you get up a new pamphlet. Also that these few lines may be read by some one or more of my many friends and former customers in the Mississippi Valley (Quincy Territory) or in the Inland Empire (Spokane Territory,) I wish to say: I had inward piles for thirty-five years and for the last ten a "full crop." So much so for the last three years, I have had no time to attend to anything else. I hope that none of my friends that may chance to read this will so foolishly procrastinate in taking treatment as I did. The total pain of becoming completely cured in my case amounted to less than the pulling of a small tooth. Had I a business to attend to, I would not have lost three days' time. Doctors White and Wainwright, you are "master mechanics" in the treatment of piles. Not for $2000 would I have mine back. I thank you. Yours Truly, J. W. HELME,

The plans and report filed with Robert S. Lovett, director of division of capital expenditures the Railroad Administration, by Barnard, were originally as a supplement for oral which Mr. Barnard gave the State Railroad Commission a hearing here a few months to investigate various union ter- propositions. WHY THE PLAZA.

ments regarding the necessity a union depot here have presented heretofore in great Some of the leading points of the Plaza site are that located near the Hall of Rec- and the Federal Building; that abundant opportunity for the Pacific Electric trains a subway; that it would eliminate grade crossings Alameda street and elsewhere, that it would keep the railroad and industrial district down the river front, where they logically belong.

Engineer Barnard says there is no probability of anything more pretentious than a temporary union depot being established here during the period of the war, but he believes that the plan which he worked out after months of careful study will appeal to the Railroad Administration so strongly that the idea of making the Arcade Depot a union station, which was discussed here a few weeks ago by a former Southern Pacific official, will be dismissed.

It is the impression of Mr. Barnard, as well as of F. W. Blanchard, who has spent years in committee work on union depot propositions, that the Plaza site is the most logical of all for an after-the-war building proposition, and that as a temporary measure the old River Station or the Santa Fe depot could be made to serve as a terminal for all the local steam lines.

GENERAL PLAN.

A characteristic feature of Mr. Barnard's plan for the Plaza terminal is that it takes advantage of the fact that Main street at the west side of the Plaza is approximately fifteen feet higher than Alameda street at the opposite side of Plaza Park. He would have the train floor at the level of Alameda street at Aliso street. On the main floor, on a level with Main street, would be the lobbies, ticket offices, waiting-rooms, dining-rooms, checkrooms and other appurtenances.

The plan contemplates a terminal building erected over a large part of the train platform, and in the general form of an open square surrounding the old Plaza and facing Main street. The driveway around the Plaza would provide an excellent entrance for vehicles and their passengers, and people alighting from city cars would step directly to entrances and exits through collonades surrounding the court.

In the event that such a building as Engineer Barnard has designed should be erected, there would be abundant accommodations for all railroad and express offices, and these with the allied facilities could easily be housed under one roof. Such a system would be in accord with Director-General McAdoo's policy of eliminating duplication of facilities in the management of railroads.

FOR SUBWAY.

Owing to the fact that Main street at Arcadia is considerably higher than Aliso street at Alameda, an ideal opportunity is afforded to pass the interurban traffic from surface tracks on Alameda street into a subway at a point between Alameda and Main street, says Mr. Barnard's report. This point can be so determined that as long as traffic conditions permit, the Pacific Electric interurban business can be handled as it now is on Aliso street, Los Angeles street and San Pedro street. At such time as it shall be determined that a subway is necessary to relieve congestion in the business district by removing from the streets the interurban cars, the subway system can be constructed without interferance with the operated lines in the neighborhood of the Plaza. This will be of immense advantage in avoiding serious confusion of traffic exchange between the terminal and the local carriers, when such subway construction shall be necessary.

Mr. Barnard has undertaken to work out a plan which, while causing little interference with existing trackage arrangements, will, he says in the following outline, provide for bringing all present and future railroads into a joint union passenger and freight terminal, and handling all through passenger and freight and principal switching movement along or adjacent to the river bed under viaducts. This would eliminate dangerous grade crossings on the main thoroughfares and the railroad trunk lines, provide an adequate passenger terminal and conveniently distributed local freight terminals.

The entrance to the proposed Plaza terminal would be the same distance from the corner of Fifth and Spring streets as is the Arcade Depot of the Southern Pacific company.

The corner of Fifth and Spring streets is about the center of the retail business and hotel life of the city, though the claim of some is that the center is farther south and west than this point. Any point which could conceivably be determined to be the center of business would be reached on the shortest route from both the Arcade Depot and the Plaza Terminal by passing through Fifth and Spring streets and thence south and west by the same route or routes of equal length on account of the rectangular blocks of the city.

The Plaza site is the point at which the three existing railroads and the interurban system could be most easily brought together, and is nearest to the Los Angeles riverbed, which is the natural railroad entrance to the city. By the construction of comparatively simple and inexpensive connections and without the building of any expensive bridges across the river all of the railroads could be brought into the terminal at a minimum of expense.

FOR THE FUTURE.

The Plaza plan provides for the progressive development of the idea, and only such construction, at the terminal site and at the several connecting points, need be undertaken as the volume of business to be handled proves from time to time to be necessary. Little work would be necessary to get the full benefit of the completed scheme in proportion to the necessities at any given time. The several railroads and the interurban railways could be brought into complete co-ordination so that they might be operated as provided for in the fully developed scheme.

The number of tracks necessary at the various connections would vary according to the nature and volume of the business to be handled.

Music a Real Necessity in Time of War.

This is what the President of the Symphony Society of New York said:

"Music has justified itself as a factor of real service in this hour of trial. The government recognizes its value by encouraging singing in the camps. It is no longer considered a non-essential luxury."

Not only to the man at camp, on the ship, at the front, come times of loneliness. Those who must remain at home to go about the daily task, have their share of the world burden. And to them must we bring constantly the refreshment of soul and the inspiration which come from the contact with the highest forms of music.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PLANS BIG BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION.

FOLLOWING are a few of the big achievements of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce:

Initiated and pushed to completion great project of $10,000,000 harbor for Los Angeles, giving it one of the finest deep-water ports in the world.

Conducted community advertising campaign for thirty years, which has brought Los Angeles' population from 50,000 to 607,000.

Stabilized citrus industry when it was threatened with ruin.

Fostered the $23,000,000 aqueduct project that provides pure mountain water enough for 2,000,000 population, irrigates 131,000 acres and develops electric power along its 250 miles of line.

Initiated and pushed to completion county good roads system, which has made this section lead the world in fine boulevards.

Since the United States entered the war has devoted 90 per cent. of its activities to government work, resulting in bringing to Southern California a great balloon training school, a big aviation camp, naval reserves, submarine base, coast artillery, summer training schools for soldiers, obtaining millions of dollars' worth of contracts for merchants and manufacturers, supplying offices and equipment for government representatives and patriotic societies. Also established a branch bureau in national capital to facilitate co-operation with government in war work.

A BIRTHDAY celebration for the leading commercial organization of Southern California was announced yesterday, following a reminder by a number of pioneers that the Chamber of Commerce is about to reach the dignified age of thirty years. Calling attention to the three decades of existence of the organization started something, and immediately the board of directors decided not only to observe the anniversary in a big way, but to invite every business man in the city to become a part of it.

It was definitely decided to have a "Chamber of Commerce Week"—August 26 to 31, during which there will be appropriate ceremonies programmed and the usual activities of the chamber will be intensified by the co-operation of citizens generally. The literal birthday is October 11, but the celebration is set a few weeks ahead.

Reminder that the chamber had been busy on the job of community building since 1888 led several of the younger directors to consult the archives to familiarize themselves with what the organization had been doing before their advent. According to their confession, they were astonished to find that in years gone by the chamber had been working as intensively and successfully in community building as they are now to win the war.

HISTORY OF CHAMBER.

It was back in the late summer of 1888 that a few leading business men began to see that the city needed an organization that would represent every ambitious resident of the city. They discussed the plan among themselves, finally agreeing that two things must be avoided—that the organization must not get into politics nor exploit individual enterprises. The first of several preliminary meetings to organize was held in a small building at the corner of Broadway and First street. In the history of the organization it is specifically stated that no one man may take the credit for consummation of the plan, although Maj. E. W. Jones, the first president, is named with S. B. Lewis and W. E. Hughes. Incidentially, the first president is still an active member and is among the most faithful of the Old Guard who for nearly a generation have gone to the bat for every sound community proposition that has developed.

Some of the first meetings may well bring a smile today. When the lack of fuel for manufacturing was mentioned, it was suggested that oil might be found in Los Angeles county, which then took in a large part of Southern California. It was also suggested that the people should be taught the fertility of the soil in order that vegetables, butter, cheese and eggs might be produced at home instead of being brought in carloads from the East.

BY GEN. OTIS.

It was the late Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, owner of The Times, who made the motion that brought the chamber into formal existence, with an initial membership of twenty-five. He remained a staunch supporter of the chamber throughout his busy life. The first officers elected were: E. W. Jones, president; W. H. Workman, first vice-president; John L. Redick, treasurer; Thomas A. Lewis, secretary.

It is interesting to note that in the month after formal organization the chamber started the movement that resulted in the fine harbor Los Angeles owns today. One of the first acts was to invite Senators Hearst and Stanford of California to the city to investigate the possibilities of a deep-water port for the budding Southern California metropolis.

WHAT IT HAS DONE.

Although the early days of the chamber were not without difficulties and discouragements, after thirty years the organization may point proudly to its record of achievement. The first community advertising was started within two months after the organization of the chamber, when 10,000 pamphlets, descriptive of this section, were printed for distribution. These proved so popular that within a few years more than 1,000,000 pamphlets of various sorts were sent to all interested in all parts of the country. This beginning in community advertising was followed by more pretentious efforts, including the first exhibition train ever sent over the country, exhibits at all world's fairs and other avenues of exploitation, all directly resulting in bringing the population of 50,000, when the chamber was organized, to more than 600,000 today. Incidentally, the sort of population brought are the people who pay more per capita for education than any city in the country, stand high in thrift, lead in percentage of home owners and are in the front rank of constructive activity in all lines.

Practically every Los Angeles municipal institution was initiated, fostered and brought to a successful conclusion by the chamber. This applies to the $10,000,000 harbor, the $23,000,000 aqueduct, the $5,000,000 good roads system, in addition to the State work in this section, the stabilization of the citrus industry, the tourist business, the industrial development, the agricultural expansion and the march of municipal progress generally. A city of superlatives has resulted from the loyal co-operation of its citizenry, led for thirty years by the Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber has had four homes in its thirty years of existence. It was first established in 1888 near the corner of First and Broadway. Two years later the second floor of the Mott Market on Main street, between Third and Fourth, was occupied by the chamber. As the organization grew, better quarters were secured, and in 1895 the chamber occupied the second floor of the Mason Building at Fourth and Broadway—which was then a two-story structure. In 1903 the present six-story office building at No. 128-130 South Broadway was begun and the ceremony of laying the cornerstone was one of the most elaborate ever held. The ceremonies were under the auspices of the Masons, and a big parade was a feature of the exercises. The chamber now occupies the second and third floors—the offices being on the third floor and the exhibit on the second.

TO WIN THE WAR.

And now, entering the thirty-first year of its existence, the chamber has become a vital part of the great national war organization. It was the first to wire President Wilson that it stood ready and eager for any call from the nation and it has made good on that proffer. Its every energy has been devoted to helping win the war. Since the fateful declaration against Germany, the organization has acted as a clearing-house for government activities in Southern California. Its general offices and rooms in its building were tendered freely to government representatives in Los Angeles on war work; the increase of food production was initiated and fostered; a campaign for the use of home prod-

Girl Catches Minnows at Bear Lake to Garner Cash for Red Cross.

Sixty miles from the nearest railroad in the heart of Big Bear Valley, Ruth Estes, deprived of other means of doing her bit, has evolved a novel scheme by which she garners daily a tidy sum for "the greatest mother" and has gained for herself the sobriquet of "Red Cross Girl."

Recognizing the difficulty with which fishermen have to contend in securing live bait for black bass fishing on the lake, the young woman placed a trap to catch minnows. She sells them to the fishermen at 25 cents a dozen, while others charge $1 for the same number. On account of her cut rates and the fact that her patrons are patriotic, she does a thriving business.

Since July 4, the young woman has secured $94.45 for the cause, her sales averaging $6 a day.

Views of Virile Candidate for Governor; Tyrrell's Comments.

[By Former State Senator John R. Tyrrell in Sacramento Bee.]

RAMPANT in the land is the spirit of revolt against all constituted authority, against all law, against all social restraints, against all religious influences, against all civilization itself.

Its protests take the form of force and violence and its crimes embrace the destruction of buildings, railroads, shipbuilding and munition plants, the dynamiting of newspaper establishments, the burning of farms and homes, and the ruin of crops, orchards, vineyards and live stock.

Wholesale murder accompanies these outrages. In our State we may follow its diabolical activities in the Los Angeles Times massacre by the McNamaras, by the murder of Dist.-Atty. Manwell and Deputy Sheriff Riordan in the hop fields near Wheatland by Ford and Suhr, and by the bomb outrage of Preparedness Day in San Francisco, when ten innocent bystanders were killed and fifty others injured by the Tom Mooney gang.

THE I.W.W.

Generally we classify these fiends as I.W.W., and the vileness of that stigma suits the rascals, although they themselves employ such terms as "reds," "sabcats," the "T.N.T.S." and the "Cat's Claw Club of California." They are believers in direct action, the virtue of an ounce of dynamite, and are, if you please, "yours for the revolution."

$2,000,000 SABOTAGE A YEAR.

The Federal department has in its possession letters written by I.W.W. boasting that the wanton destruction of property in California in recent years by arson and sabotage amounted to $2,000,000 annually.

Fickert has first-hand knowledge of the principles and activities of these well-organized bandits and it is in no small part due to his efforts that these I.W.W. have been brought to the bar of justice throughout the United States.

FINANCED BY GERMANY.

That they were financed by German money there is little doubt. Recent investigations have uncovered the hideous hand of the pro-German.

Fickert, in opposing the clemency plea of Tom Mooney, has charged that the bomb was paid for by German gold. The press of the country has voiced the same theory, and Senator James D. Phelan declared "that Mooney and his associates were victims of their own cupidity, and that they were bribed by German money to perpetrate this crime."

LOLLYPOP LUCUBRATIONS.

Fickert has become the fear and hate of these anarchists. A propaganda that has flooded the country, yea, has reached into Bolshevik Russia, has attacked him with every form of malice and calumny. Dangerous sentimentalists have aided the vicious onslaught, and were we to listen to their lollypop lucubrations we would be forced to the conclusion that society itself is the criminal and that the arch fiends of the I.W.W. are much-maligned martyrs, whose heads should be haloed instead of stuck in the hangman's noose. It is the kind of pity that would weep for a Booth, a Guiteau and a Czolgosz and deride the law which destroys such monsters.

BOODLE COLLECTED.

Largely through the efforts of Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, before they were placed in a Federal penitentiary for obstructing the draft, over $500,000 was collected for the defense of Mooney and his gang, and collections are still going on.

"The mob spirit seizes me," cries Eugene V. Debs, and he would "rather have mob law by outraged people than submission to thief law and crook law in San Francisco." And back in Russia Lenine and his mob storm the United States Embassy, demanding that their Barabtas in America be freed.

LAW'S STANDARD.

Men who meet an invasion of public order as their own personal concern will stand by Fickert in this struggle; at the call of the law they will fly to the standards of the law.

Other matters, of course, must engage the attention of a candidate for high office. There are constructive measures of government demanding thought, such as increased food production, the development of commerce and manufactures, and a judicious economy in administering public affairs, that the people may not be unduly burdened.

PLATFORM.

I find these paragraphs in the Fickert platform:

"Budget estimates of the Federal government for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1919, total $24,000,000,000. About one-thirtieth of this amount, or $800,000,000, must be raised in California.

In order that such an enormous sum may be withdrawn from the State without seriously crippling labor and industry it will be necessary not only to encourage production, to the end that the greater part of this sum may be earned, but to practice the most rigid economy in both public and private life. Whatever sacrifices we endure at home, our Liberty Army must not be stinted abroad.

COST OF GOVERNMENT.

"In this connection, I desire to call attention to the appalling increase in the cost of government in California. The ratio of increase is more than twice that of our population. The State must be set an example of retrenchment to our counties and municipalities.

"In order that this may be effected, I shall urge upon the Legislature the necessity of reducing the number of commissions by a process of elimination and consolidation, and a reduction in the cost of operation of the few necessary commissions and departments until the per capita cost of State government in California (now the second highest in the United States) shall be reduced to the general average of other States."

This we know: That in 1911 fourteen commissions cost the people $16,000,000, and in 1917 forty commissions ran the expense up to $38,000,000.

CONSOLIDATING COMMISSIONS.

Actual experience in government well demonstrate which commissions are needless and which ones can be co-ordinated and consolidated. For instance, Fickert casually refers to humanitarian activities, and suggests that workmen's compensation, social insurance, immigration and housing, and State employment bureaus might be placed under one commission, so, too, agriculture, horticulture, viticulture, land, irrigation, drainage and farm advisers.

WORK OR FIGHT.

He applauds the action of the State Council of Defense in extending the work or fight rule to those outside of the draft age limits. The farmers are in distress because of lack of labor, and will be forced to leave uncultivated many tillable acres unless assurance is given that they will be given aid in harvesting the crops. The ultimate fate of democracy will be fought on the home fronts, and, as we encourage our children to buy Thrift Stamps, we must set the example of economy in our State institutions.

AS TO PROHIBITION.

Fickert is generally classed as a wet, but on the liquor question he says: "It will come fairly and unequivocally before the electorate of the State in the November election. I pledge myself to enforce without favor or stint whatever the people of the State of California enact in this regard."

FICKERT CONGRATULATED.

In this connection, let me quote what Senator Rominger, author of the bill bearing his name, wired to Fickert after reading his platform announcement:

"I hasten to congratulate you on your straightforward American platform as appearing in morning papers. In my humble judgment, the people of California are demanding a Governor not only proclaiming himself genuinely American and patriotic, but a man who backs it up by standing unequivocally for retrenchment of State expenses and for bodily exportation of men with I.W.W. and anarchistic tendencies. Here's my hand in support of those same principles."

SAFE TO BE RIGHT.

Fickert is a man of proved courage, loyalty, intelligence and fitness. His election would be the surest bulwark against anti-republican tendencies. He will stand by his duty fearlessly and effectively. He rightly holds that the people have no interest in disorder and that liberty means obedience to law.

He is not groping for some middle ground between right and wrong. He holds that it is always safe to be right. The steel helmet has replaced at the front the familiar stetson of the ante-bellum days, and the weak and ineffectual at home must make way for the resolute and strong.

Every "Red," every inciter to public disorder, every patron of anarchy is fighting against him. He deserves the support of all men and women who love liberty and order and law, equal and exact justice.

NOW MASTER GUNNER.

Corp. Stanwood Nickerson Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. William I. Rogers of No. 1221 North New Hampshire avenue, has been transferred to Fortress Monroe, his parents were informed yesterday. He is now a master gunner of coast defense on Chesapeake Bay, having passed following a stiff course. He was graduated from Hollywood High School and Junior College and volunteered at the age of 18 years. He was with Co. Eight at Los Angeles Harbor, and enlisted in the specialists' school.

WINS WAR CROSS.

Word that Walter J. Gores, a Los Angeles High School graduate, who is with the Stanford Ambulance Corps in France, has been awarded the Croix de Guerre for courageous work and presence of mind "in advanced posts in the rapid evacuation of the wounded," was received here yesterday. Mr. Gores is now a sergeant of the first class with the Ambulance Corps.

Prominent Democrats Turn Toward Woolwine.

Speakers Named Who will Talk for Stephens.

The Republican Loyalty League has busted. As a result, the campaign of S. W. Odell for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Ninth District has dwindled to little or nothing. Leading Republicans throughout the district have indorsed the candidacy of Montaville Flowers, the eloquent author-orator of Monrovia.

Two weeks ago the league appointed someone to take the place of Chairman Shreve, who essayed to lead the fight for Odell. He was repudiated because of his ungentlemanly attack upon Mr. Flowers at the "packed" convention held in Burbank Hall. Now comes Richmond P. Benton, a stalwart Republican, with his resignation. He was secretary of the league.

In tendering his resignation, Mr. Benton said the league no longer has any valid or proper function to perform. He addressed the following letter to former Chairman Shreve:

"Dear Sir: I wish to tender my resignation as Secretary of the Republican Loyalty League.

"The league was formed for the purpose of eliminating all Republican candidates for Congress except one, this one candidate to represent the full Republican strength of the district. Since this purpose has not been achieved, it seems to me that the league no longer has any valid or proper function to perform until after the primaries.

"I will say further that I have made a careful canvass of the Ninth Congressional District and find that the sentiment everywhere is concentrating on Mr. Montaville Flowers, who is recognized as the only Republican candidate who can win.

"I feel it my duty as a loyal Republican and for the best interests of the Ninth Congressional District to resign as secretary of the league and join with leading Republicans in giving my undivided support to Mr. Flowers.

"Respectfully yours,
[Signed] "R. P. BENTON."

Confidence in Woolwine.

Leading Democrats throughout California express the opinion that Thomas Lee Woolwine will easily win the Democratic nomination. Here is what Robert H. de Witt, former chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee for two terms, who has been chosen State manager for Mr. Woolwine, says:

"I want the Democrats of Southern California to know that the Democrats of Centsal and Northern California are going to vote for Thomas Lee Woolwine for Governor. He is distinguished from his opponents by the important fact that he is a real Democrat. Mr. Woolwine has made a most excellent impression through Central and Northern California in his recent speaking tour, and has removed, in my judgment, all possibility of the Democrats nominating any candidate whose political stability can be questioned."

The local campaign on behalf of Mr. Woolwine is being directed by Capt. C. H. Hance and Harry W. Elliott. Women's organizations are being directed by Mrs. W. S. Davis, president of the Women's Democratic League of Los Angeles County, and Mrs. W. C. Tyler, former Presidential elector.

Enormous.

STATE GOVERNMENT'S GREAT COST IS SHOWN.

SUPPORTING his contention that State expenses are far higher than either necessity or reason requires for the maintenance of the government, Judge Walter Bordwell, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, gives figures in a statement showing that extravagance in State affairs has been not only uncurbed but increasing steadily in the last few years.

The commissions created since 1918 have been a source of great expense, according to Judge Bordwell, much of which might have been saved by a judicious efficiency system of combining commissions and duties.

"The last Legislature assembled in 1917," says the Bordwell statement, "by general and special appropriations passed by it and signed by the Governor, appropriated the great sum of $4,214,457 for the support and maintenance of twenty-nine of the State commissions appointed since 1910, averaging an annual expenditure of $2,106,728.50.

"This extravagant expenditure of State money for commissions exceeds all records and is more money voted in one year for the support of said commissions than was expended in the combined administrations of Pardee and Gillette, covering eight years. Neither does the amount include money used by the commissions from assessments, fines, fees and other collections.

"The commissions, boards and departments created since 1910, which are supported by direct legislative appropriations have cost the State $7,822,446.65. This does not include commissions and bureaus that are self-supporting and maintain a revolving fund from fees, licenses and assessments.

"The direct legislative appropriations since 1910 for the support of commissions other than those created since 1910 totalled $2,352,670. This makes a total cost of maintaining State commissions of $10,175,116.65. These figures are taken from official records which only include up to the last Legislative appropriations, which, being added, bring the total over $10,000,000, as follows:

The inauguration of a plan whereby it will be possible for county taxpayers to see at all times the exact standing of county funds, so that it will be impossible for the county to ever again go into debt such as the deficit of $1,250,000 created by the present board, is advocated by Gabor Hegyi, candidate for Supervisor in the Third District. Mr. Hegyi has pledged himself in his campaign utterances to place the county on a firm business basis.

ROLPH "BOOST" BRANDED FAKE.

Chief Butler Says He Never Promised Support to Bay Candidate.

Chief of Police Butler yesterday branded as an absolute falsehood the statement published in a San Francisco newspaper on the 6th inst. to the effect that he had telegraphed Police Chief White that "I favor the election of Mayor Rolph and will do all I can down here for him."

Chief Butler declared the alleged telegram was faked and the story manufactured out of whole cloth. Chief Butler says he is not in politics, but if he were he certainly would not get behind a northern candidate. He is in receipt of a telegram from Chief White stating that the San Francisco official knows no more of the source of the report than Butler himself.

POLITICS.

The American Game.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

Two weeks and two days until the primary election.

While there are many offices to be filled at the November election, from Governor down to justice of the peace, the voters will have no more important decisions to make than the selection of legislative candidates. This issue is not even second to the Governorship, because it is the Legislature to which the people must look for retrenchment, a vital necessity if California would do her share toward winning the war.

Two months ago nearly 100 prominent business men met in Los Angeles and agreed upon a programme which, if carried out, will result in the reformation of the State administration. These men took a decided stand against reckless extravagance and pledged themselves to work for the election of State Senators and Assemblymen who can be counted upon to make retrenchment their slogan when they go to Sacramento next winter.

These candidates have been carefully selected and are recommended by the Association for the Betterment of Public Service. In Los Angeles county fifteen Assemblymen are to be elected and four Senators. The association has indorsed candidates for twelve of the Assembly districts as follows:

Sixty-first District, John Roberts White, Jr.
Sixty-second, ——.
Sixty-third, Sidney T. Graves.
Sixty-fourth, George A. Lynch.
Sixty-fifth, George M. Easton.
Sixty-sixth, Morris M. Ferguson.
Sixty-seventh, A. Burlingame Johnson.
Sixty-eighth, E. R. Shepherd.
Sixty-ninth, John C. Stick.
Seventieth, Bernice S. Edgar.
Seventy-first, ——.
Seventy-second, A. P. Fleming.
Seventy-third, Elmer P. Bromley.
Seventy-fourth, Peter H. Muller.
Seventy-fifth, Edwin L. Baker.

The Watchman has made an investigation of these candidates and has found that they are enthusiastically favorable to the policy of the association. They are pledged to eliminate all of the unnecessary commissions and reduce the running expense of the State to the lowest possible figures.

John Roberts White, Jr., is a business man. For thirteen years he has been a member of the firm of the California Furniture Company and has been a manager and buyer for that concern. He has lived in the Sixty-first District twenty-two years, now residing in Glendale. He was born in Philadelphia in 1870 and received his education there.

Sidney T. Graves has resided in Los Angeles thirty years. He is the junior member of the contracting firm of Frank Graves & Son. He also is interested in the farm lands of the San Joaquin Valley and is a stockholder in several local business concerns.

George A. Lynch is manager for the Continental Life Insurance Company. He has been successful in business here for twelve years. He is highly educated, being a graduate of the American School of Insurance, New York Institute of Finance and Accounting, College of Expression and the Denver Normal School. He has held professorships in several institutions of learning.

George M. Easton came to Los Angeles from Iowa in 1886. He is known as the working man's friend. For the past twelve years he has been a foreman in the plant of the Cudahy Packing Company.

Morris M. Ferguson is a successful attorney and has been an active worker in the Republican party for thirty years. Early in his career he was a police judge and an assistant State's Attorney in Illinois. He stands for State and national prohibition and believes firmly in the principle that democracy is now and always will be best served by the Republican party.

A. Burlingame Johnson is an exceptionally able man. He has served a term in the Legislature and his record is flawless. He resides in Pasadena and has the enthusiastic indorsement of the dry element.

E. R. Shepherd made a fine record in the Assembly two years ago. He is a strong Republican and resides in Whittier. He has had considerable training in legislative work and can be counted upon to vote at all times for the best interests of the State.

John C. Stick is a self-made man. After many hard struggles, he worked his way through school, and today is a successful lawyer. He believes in strictest economy and was chosen by the association because of his bitter denunciation of Assemblyman Wright's policy of "Let everybody retrench, but let the State be the last to do it."

Bernice S. Edgar is unusually well qualified for a seat in the Assembly. She was educated at the Ann Arbor High School and the University of Michigan. She has resided in Long Beach sixteen years. is a tireless worker for a dry State and nation, and is a member of the Republican County Central Committee.

A. P. Fleming has resided here sixteen years, having always been active in municipal affairs. For fourteen years he has been secretary of the board of trustees of the Y.M.C.A. and now is chairman of the Harbor Committee of the Chamber of Commerce. He is a lawyer and a good business man and has had much to do with the development of the harbor.

Elmer P. Bromley has been a resident of Los Angeles sixteen years. Graduating from the University of Southern California, he was admitted to the bar and has been practicing law five years. He is a deputy in the Registrar's office. He is a member of the Union League Club and Theta Delta Phi.

Peter H. Mullen was born in 1877 in the district which he would represent in the Assembly. He started to work at $9 per week for a telephone company and advanced in electrical work until he held a very responsible position with one of the big local concerns. At present he is in the auto tire business. He is a sound business man.

Edwin Baker has been a lifelong Republican and an excellent business man. He has served his district in the Assembly and made an enviable record. He is a member of the Eastern Star, Los Angeles Commandery, Al Malaikah Temple. His son, Edwin K. Baker, is now in France.

In the Sixty-fourth District the contest lies between Mr. Lynch and Harry Lyons, the incumbent. Mr. Lyons made an excellent record at the last session of the Legislature and while he was not indorsed by the Association for Betterment of Public Service the people will make no mistake if they elect him.

The recommendations for the State Senate are:

Thirty-fourth District, Charles W. Lyon.
Thirty-sixth, W. F. Knight.
Thirty-eighth, H. H. Yonkin.
Twenty-ninth, Dwight Hart.

Dwight Hart was chosen to defeat the impossible Mouser, who moved into the Twenty-ninth District a day or two after Senator Henry Lyon died. Mr. Hart has resided in Los Angeles thirty years. He is one of the most successful business men, starting in the hotel business as a porter in the old Natick House. With his brother he built up that hostelry and finally developed the magnificent Rosslyn Hotel. From a humble employee to an employer of 300 men and women indicates his success in the business world.

In the Thirty-fourth District, Charles W. Lyon has no formidable opposition. He is a straight Republican and during his terms in the Legislature has made good. He can always be depended upon. He bows to no party or faction and is a safe man to send to Sacramento.

W. F. Knight was selected to trim Senator Carr, who has taken the "dope" of the Sacramento bosses and stands for the Johnson policy of extravagance. Mr. Knight is a keen business man and well known in Pasadena. For years he was at the head of the Board of Trade there. There is no discounting his ability.

Henry H. Yonkin has no opposition in the Thirty-eighth District. He has promised to support the economy programme.

Gratifying news comes from the north to the effect that Joseph A. Rominger, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, is making remarkable headway. In Sacramento he was given enthusiastic reception, the women there and in Stockton unqualifiedly indorsing the Rominger anti-saloon measure. Candidate Young is losing ground daily. His reprehensible record in the Legislature has marked him for stinging defeat. Candidate Breed and Mr. Rominger are looked upon with favor in all sections, with the preponderance of sentiment building up for the southern candidate.

Speaking of would-be Lieutenant-Governors, Jo V. Snyder, the Democratic aspirant, is in town. He came in an automobile driven by his pretty wife. Jo believes he has a chance because he knows he will get the nomination of his own party. If Young should happen to slip over as the Republican nominee he figures it will be a cinch. So do I.

Charles M. Fickert is gaining ground every day. His attack upon Gov. Stephens for his jellyfish attitude toward the demon Mooney is making friends for him on every side.

Hon. Walter Bordwell continues his denunciation of the administration's extravagance. It is one of the most popular slogans ever launched in California. Solid Republicans look upon Judge Bordwell as the safest of all the candidates.

Editor Hayes has the confidence of thousands of voters, but the bottom seems to have dropped from his campaign. The people like his attitude upon retrenchment, but he is not preaching it enough to suit them. Unless he wakes up he will be a fizzle.

Charles A. A. McGee is becoming a bigger joke every day.

Thomas Lee Woolwine's chances could not be brighter. The Democrats in the north have flocked to him by the thousands and in the south they are for him all the way. Many a good Republican down this way registered as a Democrat just to get to vote for Woolwine at the primaries.

Gov. Stephens's managers say with so many in the fight that he will beat his nearest competitor by 50,000 votes. They were a little nervous at one time over Rolph, but since his candidacy has practically expired, they are very hopeful.

LOOKING AHEAD.

Although devoting every energy to the war programme of the United States, it is recognized by the officers of the organization that the best thought of the membership soon must be centered on the commercial problems that will come with the dawn of peace. Firm support must be given to the Washington bureau through which all Southern California comes in direct contact with the national administration. Plans are under consideration that call for sending trained trade emissaries to the countries on direct routes to the Los Angeles Harbor. Development of industrial production, overseas trade, utilization of raw products and other matters vital to the future of Southern California are a part of the future programme mapped out.

During the Chamber of Commerce week it is hoped to bring every resident of this section to a better understanding of the chamber's present work and its ambitions for the future.

The present officers are: Oscar C. Mueller, president; Watt L. Moreland, first vice-president; Maynard McFie, second vice-president; William Mead, treasurer; Frank Wiggins, secretary and superintendent of exhibit; A. S. Dudley, assistant secretary.

THREE JAPANESE IN A GAME OF CHANCE.

BUT "DOCTORED" DICE AND "PHONY" CHECKS BRING THEM ALL INTO COURT.

T. Wakamoto, 21 years old, a Japanese rancher near Azusa, had $800 when he came to Los Angeles last week for a good time. He betook himself to the home of his friend, T. Nakeshima, also 21. Nakeshima had a friend, T. Amemiya, 45 years of age, who told Justice Palmer yesterday that he "had no business at present," and was given to gambling.

Amemiya, as the evidence goes, invited Wakamoto to a game of "7 come 11" under the dice method. They played from 5 p.m. until 2 a.m. the following morning. After a short respite they continued playing all that day. Wakamoto was game. He lost his $800 and put up $240 in checks. They went. He put up more checks—and lost.

Meanwhile Amemiya cashed two of the checks, receiving $350. He paid out five more checks aggregating $300 which are still out. The first two were returned marked "no funds" so Amemiya promptly had Wakamoto arrested.

The young Japanese rancher in court yesterday penitently declared himself in a regular "Nagasaki pickle," but things began to brighten up when his friend Nakeshima took the stand in his behalf and testified that the game in question in his house had been played with "doctored dice." He said Amemiya gave the dice to him and he in turn passed them over to Wakamoto when the game was suggested.

Wakamoto was released on his own recognizance pending a continuance of his prelimination examination on September 5.

EXPERT PICKS PLAZA AS UNION TERMINAL SITE.

Report Submitted to Federal Railroad Administration Says It Is by Far Best Available.

Arrangement could be made for the handling of all through passenger-train movements on the joint tracks immediately west of the river, from North Broadway to the south city limits, and for the handling of all through freight movements on the east side of the river between the same points, taking all regular train and light engine movements and passenger equipment switching off Alameda street, North Main street and San Fernando street.

The plan provides for the handling of Pacific Electric freight on the joint freight tracks east of the river from Aliso street to the south city limits. It contemplates the use of the Alameda street tracks through the city from Alhambra avenue to the south city limits for limited switching purposes only, the main switching of the industrial district lying between the Los Angeles River and Alameda street and from North Broadway to the south city limits being handled from joint freight tracks parallel to and immediately west of the joint passenger tracks on the west side of the river. A consideration of the location of the business district and the relation of the main streets and thoroughfares thereto shows how completely and effectively such a subway system as is shown by heavy dotted line on the map would relieve the district from congestion caused by the movement of interurban cars on surface tracks. Such a location for a subway system would land itself much more easily to co-ordination with railroad passenger-terminal facilities, if located at the Plaza rather than at other suggested sites.

APPROACHES BY RAIL.

The approach to the passenger terminal by the several railroads could be made as follows: The Southern Pacific trains from the East would move directly into the terminal by Alhambra avenue; from San Francisco and the north, by the joint passenger tracks; from the main line near the North Broadway viaduct to Alhambra avenue and thence to the terminal; from Los Angeles Harbor and southern points via the Butte street conection and the joint passenger tracks to Alhambra avenue and thence to the terminal.

The Santa Fe trains from the East and north could move over the joint passenger tracks (their present route) to Alhambra avenue and thence into the terminal; from the east and north via Orange over the joint passenger tracks from Butte street to Alhambra avenue (their present route) and thence into the terminal; from Redondo over the same route.

Salt Lake trains from the east could cross the river on their present bridge at Butte street and move over the joint passenger tracks from that point to Alhambra avenue and thence into the terminal; from Pasadena and Glendale, trains could move from a junction with the Santa Fe at a point near Avenue 18 and Humboldt street on joint tracks across the river and down the west side to Alhambra avenue and thence into the terminal.

By means of a connection between the Southern Pacific tracks north of the Los Angeles River bridge to the Salt Lake tracks on the east side of the river at Humboldt street and Avenue 18, a connection to the north between the Southern Pacific and Salt Lake at Alameda and Alhambra avenue, a short connection between the Santa Fe and the Salt Lake at Humboldt street and Avenue 18, a rearrangement of the Pacific Electric transfer to the Salt Lake at Brooklyn avenue and a connection between the Salt Lake main line where it leaves the river and the Salt Lake Butte-street track, freight business, other than that for Los Angeles local distribution, would move from all railroads onto the joint freight tracks on the east side of the river and to various lines near the south city limits on the joint tracks on and in the neighborhood of Butte street, without going down Alameda street, and without incumbering the joint passenger or freight switching tracks on the west side of the river.

This would move all through freight under the proposed viaducts, thus eliminating grade crossings and doing away with costly delay to traffic. It would leave the Alameda-street track of the Southern Pacific for a restricted night switching use from Aliso street south through the business district as far as Twentieth street, or they might be entirely removed.

GIVEN SIX MONTHS FOR TAKING AUTO.

In Superior Judge Willis's court yesterday Willie E. Carter, who pleaded guilty to driving off an automobile without the consent of the owner, was given six months in the County Jail, and at the end of that term he will be released on two years' probation.

Albert Page, guilty of receiving stolen property, was given six months in the County Jail.

F. E. Monroy, who uttered a fictitious check, was allowed to go on five years' probation.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE.

PICNIC FOR MASONS.

Monarch of Jinnistan Grotto has Charge of Affair to be Held at Eagle Rock.

The second annual picnic of the Masonic Blue Lodges of Los Angeles county will be held at Eagle Rock Park Saturday, August 24. William T. Osterholt, Monarch of Jinnistan Grotto, has the affair in charge.

One of the special features of the picnic will be the entertaining of the orphans from the Masonic Home at Covina, special cars being chartered to bring the little wards direct to the park. Rhodes Hervey, Grand Master of the State, will be an honorary guest, together with other prominent Masons. Tom Wilson, motion-picture director, who is Master of Ceremonies of Jinnistan Grotto, will stage a comedy at the park, which will be made into a film and sent broadcast to all of the Masonic lodges of the country. Special athletic events will be held, but the one exciting the greatest interest is the tug-of-war between picked teams from the different lodges. The trophy is a loving cup, which was won last year by the team from Hollenbeck Lodge, and must be contested for again this year in order to be retained permanently.

GETS A COMMISSION.

Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Johnson, formerly of No. 1115 Magnolia avenue left last week for Mayo Bros. Hospital at Rochester, Minn. Dr. Johnson received a captain's commission and will train at that hospital until transfered to a Base Hospital in the East. He expects to go to France soon after his preliminary training has been finished.

LOS ANGELES (Loce Ahng-hay-lais)

Entered as second class matter December 4, 1881, at the Postoffice at Los Angeles, Cal. under the Act of March 3, 1879.

THAT EAST WIND.
That east wind you felt might have been Joe Scott coming back so soon to Los Angeles. Joe has not informed The Times whether he went to Europe or where he went.

SONGS OF THE SOIL.
This is the day when every happy young member of the woman's land army is singing "If ever I marry in all my life, a farmer's bride I'll be" and when the would-be farmerette rises at morn and sings "I dreamed I dwelt in overalls."

MANY INVENTIONS.
It is said that between them the War Department and Patent Office daily receive an average of nearly one thousand suggestions or inventions calculated to shorten the war. At the same time there doesn't seem to be anything equal to the old-fashioned way of merely killing off the Prussians.

A TABLE TAX.
People are accustoming themselves to the tax idea all down the line. One of the members of a local exemption board received a letter from a woman asking how much the war tax would be if she gave a bridge party of six tables. This might serve as a suggestion to the Ways and Means Committee.

IN WATTS, OF COURSE.
The City Marshal has resigned at Watts. Marshal Hill, he was. And no politician, he is. Imagine a city official resigning because there was not work enough for him! Incredible. Since Watts went dry in July the marshal has had little to do but sit on a soap box and whittle. So he threw up his job and went out to look for work. It is officials like that Los Angeles would like to have.

DESIGNING ONES.
The war-time idea of standardizing and simplifying everything is putting a crimp in the operations of some of our most designing persons. These are the alert men and women who design the modes and fashions. The colors and materials that once delighted them are not now available, and the time may come when shoes may be of but one style and quality and the manufacture of but three or four sizes be permitted. When that hour comes some of our twinkling vaudevillians will realize the full horrors of war.

THE HEATHEN BOCHE.
The work of China in regard to Red Cross activities is attracting worldwide attention. It should not be so surprising to discover the existence of the common virtues of humanity in China, for it is a civilized country and is fast becoming democratic in spirit. Perhaps one of China's drawbacks during the past has been due to the fact that the world in general has given her credit for too little and expected too little from her. However, the time is fast approaching when that country's part in the evolution of civilization will be recognized by all nations and will be more fully realized by the Chinese themselves. We have been accustomed to taking the phrase "heathen Chinee" too literally.

SPEEDING 'EM UP.
The greatest results of efficiency are determined by speed. In this line the Americans are painting little black dots all over the Teutons. It is not merely shooting straight but shooting first that counts. It is a dull day when some construction record is not broken in the development of America's fighting machine. The other day at one of the cantonments a complete hospital building over 150 feet in length was created and prepared for occupancy within the space of a ten-hour working day. Workmen began digging the postholes for the foundations at 7 o'clock in the morning and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon water was turned on in the bathrooms and electric lights were ready in the finished wards of the institution. The carpenters, the masons, the lathers, the plasterers, the plumbers and other needed workmen had finished their tasks and at one time no less than 600 men were on the job. They were just thick enough not to get in one another's way.

Likewise at Alameda the other day there was the launching of a 12,000-ton steel ship within twenty-four days after the laying of her keel. In times within the memory of us all, when a shipyard had a contract for a government cruiser, there was always a period of eighteen months allowed for construction, and in most cases this had to be extended to two years or more. Nowadays if a contractor were required to produce a battleship within a month he would not indicate any particular stage fright over the proposition. He would probably pull out his stop watch, press a few buttons and go to it. That old-fashioned gink who murmured, "The more haste the less speed," had warts on his noodle, webs in his dome and bees in his bean.

WHY AMERICA IS GREAT.

"Westward the course of empire takes its way;
  The first four acts already past,
A fifth shall close the drama with the day;
  Time's noblest offspring is the last."

When the United States was born the sponsors at its cradle made a covenant with God.

Nations endure and individuals attain true success solely through the will of the great God of the Ages.

We cannot always understand, yet neither can we doubt that we come or go, wake or sleep, live or pass on in co-ordination with that Unseen Power that swings the stars in stately pageantry through the infinite eternity of space.

We behold our country in these times taking hold of a world in chaos, and restoring it to a status of order. We behold America, youngest of the nations, assuming the place of leadership, if not of actual mastery. We have seen it seal the doom of kings.

We see that its destiny is to strike down the last shackle that binds men to slavery, and to make the whole world free.

Plain as the road to the hills of Zion was the pathway marked out for America at the very hour of its birth. And, upon this road it has kept its feet, steadfast and with unswerving eyes.

Kings and the puppets of kings laughed in their sleeves. Thrones and the makers of thrones jeered in sinister contempt.

The world had seen many dreamers in the past. "America will go the way of dreams," said they who leaned upon swords and kept burnished the gyves that bound the wrists of slaves.

But, instead, though not a century and a half of time has yet passed since the bright hour of its birth, America stands forth, elate and strong, the master nation of the world.

II.

AMERICA is great because it has kept the faith. It has never drawn the sword except in defense of its own liberties or the liberty of others. It has never acquired territory in conquest by the deliberate and premeditated force of arms.

It heard the cry of free Texas and answered it. It succored Cuba, groaning under an alien yoke. And now it is paying its debt to France and loosing from the throats of the free peoples beyond the sea the brutal grip of the barbarian Hun.

Consider in what patience and justice America has lived and continues to live with its neighbors.

With Canada, our splendid, strong neighbor to the north, America has been at peace for a hundred years. Not only that, but it has been the ideal peace that should and can exist between kindred peoples. It is a peace stronger than armaments can force, because it is builded on trust and faith. There stands no line of forts, no bristling guns to mark the border between Columbia and Our Lady of the Snows.

The patience and the loving kindness with which America has dealt with Mexico were a thing beyond belief in the age-old economies of governments with their ancient and traditional lusts.

Mexico is now, as it has long been, an easy and a tempting prey. Had it been neighbor to any other strong nation of the world, Mexico could not have survived, situated as it has been and is with vast material wealth and notorious man-weakness of power.

It would have been the policy of another nation to take advantage of any one of ten thousand excuses to conquer and acquire Mexico. It would have been the first impulse of another nation to seize Canada in England's hour of trouble and despair.

But America has not done, and could not demean itself to do either of these things.

It remembers its covenant with God. It keeps the faith.

This unprecedented example of a nation fulfilling the highest ideals is now having an effect on the rest of the world. It has become the creed of the Allies in this war.

And America has done another thing which the nations of the world must adopt into their creeds. It has put a stop to the primal curse of secret diplomacy.

It will never anymore be possible for a clique to rule by keeping secret from the people the nation's affairs. The business of the nation must be known to the people of the nation, and, particularly must the business between nations be known to the peoples of those nations and to all others.

So shall the death of unholy power be sounded. So shall it be made impossible for kings and courts, or even political rings, to put a yoke upon the people's neck.

The world has America to thank for all this, and more.

III.

AMERICA has become great also by its own insulate sanity. To preserve a sane state of mind within itself, America has had the most difficult task that any nation ever faced, for the reason that for a hundred years it has had dumped upon its shores emigrants from every clime under the sun, in which has been mingled illiterate and ignorant hordes who had not the faintest conception of the theory on which our republic was based.

They came here not to become Americans but only for the purpose of bettering their worldly conditions. They held tenaciously to their own national customs. They even persisted in the use of their own foreign tongues.

It was upon the knowledge of this that Germany so confidently launched that tremendous propaganda in America which has now so miserably collapsed.

Germany found, as we ourselves have found, that the melting pot boiled and did not merely simmer. The little red schoolhouse, the ballot and the newspaper had done their work.

There was something in the sun and the wind of America, in its mountains and rivers, the plains and the prairies, that made the American born sons and daughters of the emigrant as alien to the nations of their fathers as the Iroquois and the Sioux.

Socialism, which was eating like a cancer at the vitals of all European nations, was here permitted to have its fling. Its voice was and is included in the doctrine of free speech. But it dries up in the free air of America like a carcass in the desert winds.

It is an extremely difficult matter to make a Socialist or an anarchist out of a man who sees every broad avenue of success open to him. When he sees the son of a penniless Ghetto Jew the head of a great financial institution, the son of a poor German peasant the biggest business man in America, and all around him, everywhere, men rich or prosperous who would have been eating black bread and little of that in Europe to this day, had not their fathers emigrated to America.

These sons of the alien strangers find here the same ladder reaching to the skies on which climb the descendants of the Mayflower.

In this way, also, has America kept the faith and its covenant with God. It promised the High God, at the very hour of its birth, that it would be a haven for the persecuted and the afflicted of all lands, and it has kept the promise.

It asks but one pledge, which is the fealty and the loyalty of all who find shelter beneath its stainless flag.

IV.

AMERICA is now the richest and the strongest nation in the world. The place that Germany set out to make for itself through blood and iron is taken by America.

America is the money-lender of the world, but it is not and will never be a usurer. It is the strongest, but it is not and will never be a bully.

It will never demand the pound of flesh from its beneficiaries or force an unoffending neighbor to cringe at the threat of its mailed fist.

In these ways, and in others, it also becomes the greatest of the nations, in the true sense of greatness—greater than Florence in its days of song, greater than Athens in the glory of its schools.

All the glories of the storied pasts of other lands shall now be America's. She shall hold dominion over the world's soul. Into her heart shall flow love's tributaries. All lands shall hail her. She shall be the Mother of Ships.

For a thousand years and ten thousand years this shall be so if we keep sacred the covenant our fathers made with God when the corner-stone of the republic was laid. If we keep the faith.

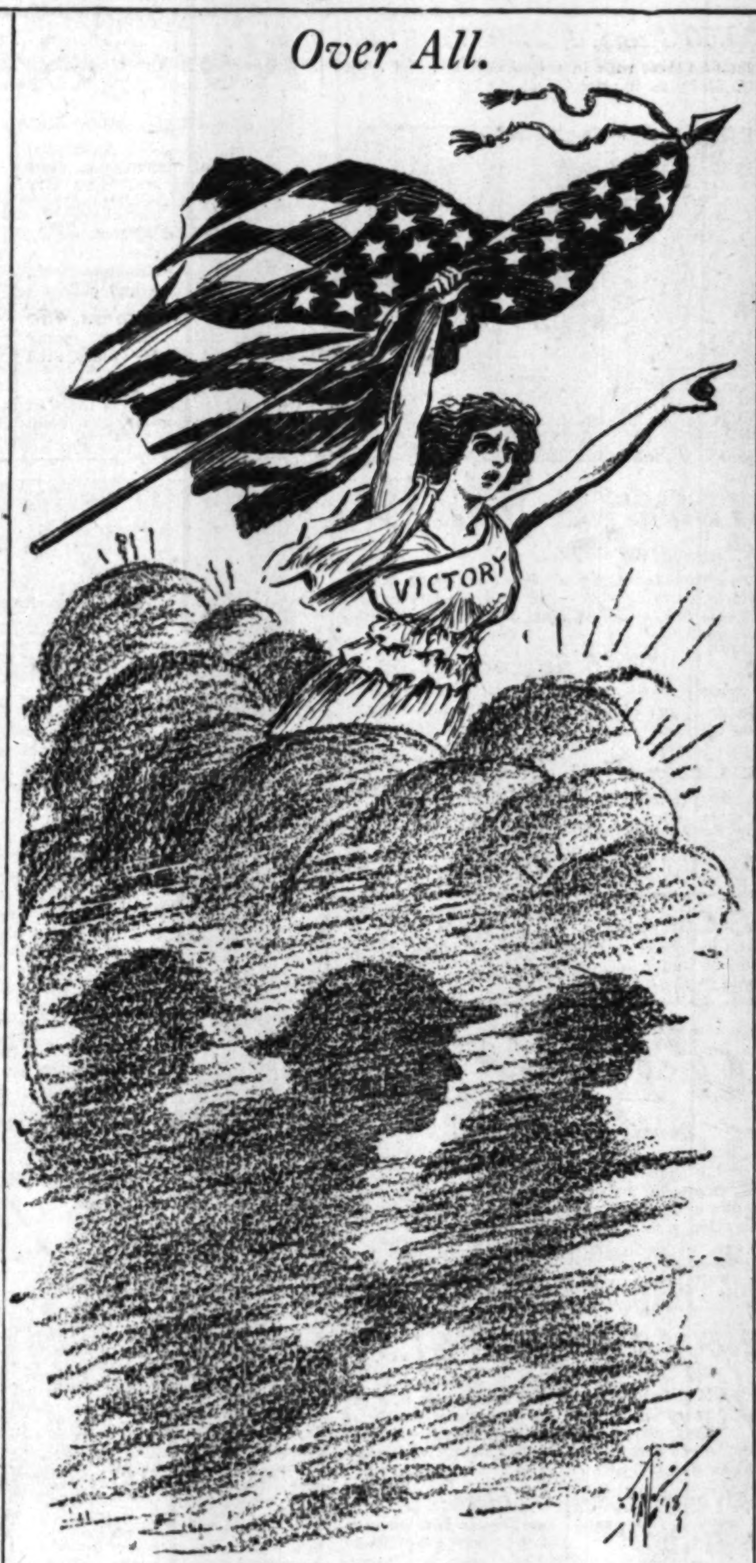
Proud as the boast was to have been a Roman in the ancient days, glorious as it was to have been a citizen of Athens, it shall now be a far prouder boast to be an American.

Once more we have rendered our account to the spirits of the mighty dead.

From the bloody reaches of the Marne America reports to Mad Anthony Wayne facing the ghosts of dead Hessian jaegers across the Schuylkill's storm-swept tide.

The Banner of the Stars salutes Paul Jones at sea.

Over All.



THE STATE TICKET.
But two strenuous weeks remain for the big and little drives of the various candidates seeking nominations in the State primaries. All the candidates for the major offices are exerting themselves to cover as much of the State as possible within the limited time that remains, and the campaigns are in full swing. There has not been a single withdrawal since the nominating petitions were filed, and each candidate expresses confidence that he is going to win. Possibly all are sincere; those who would not have a chance under normal conditions figure that in the dust of the present world conflict they may be able to slip past in it.

In both Republican and Democratic camps prime interest centers about the nomination for Governor. One of the surprises to the politicians in the week just closed was the strength developed by Judge Bordwell. His able and frank analysis of State expenditures has been making him friends everywhere. Thousands who have heard him have recalled that they have voted for him before. When he ran for the Republican nomination for justice of the Supreme Court he received 50,000 more votes than will be necessary to give him the nomination for Governor in the present six-cornered fight. Two years ago he was head of the winning ticket for delegate to the National Republican Convention and received more votes than any other delegate. His known probity and his unswerving loyalty alike to his country and his party mark him as an ideal war Governor. He stands before the Republican electors fearless and without reproach. He has pledged himself, if elected, to reduce the general expense of State government $1,000,000 a year, despite prevailing war prices. His record is an earnest that, despite the machinations of the politicians, such a reduction will actually be made.

Dist.-Atty. Fickert of San Francisco emphasizes two issues: the preservation of law and order by crushing the pro-Bopp, pro-German I.W.W. element and a radical reduction in the cost of State government. Mr. Fickert talks without equivocation on both subjects. His record as a cowboy on the range, as captain of a winning Stanford football team and in the prosecution of malefactors as District Attorney of San Francisco; his display of vigor throughout his whole career, furnish adequate assurance that, if elected, he would prove to be an efficient administrative officer. Fickert is a fighter; he possesses the courage of his convictions and those, in the main, are in harmony with the best interests of the State. He is endeared to every patriotic citizen by reason of the enemies he has made.

The Times confesses that it is disappointed in the attitude that Gov. Stephens has taken. In place of becoming the Governor of the whole people of California he has made common cause with the pay-roll brigade and marches under the banner of the forty fat commissions. A little courage and firmness on his part would have given him a standing in the State that would have assured him the nomination; but his vacillation has cost him at least 100,000 Republican votes.

Mayor Rolph of San Francisco made out the case against himself when he announced his platform in his San Diego opening address. He allied himself definitely with the forty fat commissions and the Johnson policies. He has shown his fealty to the walking delegates of the labor unions; and, on top of that, he sent to Los Angeles as a campaign manager Theodore Roche, attorney for Bopp, Von Schack and other dynamiters and alien enemies. The Times cannot conceive that it is possible for such a candidate to secure enough Republican votes to nominate him in a State primary.

Perhaps there has not been enough attention paid to the race for Lieutenant-Governor. Rolph has a congenial running mate in C. C. Young of Berkeley, who has probably done as much as any other man now in the State to boost the cost of State government to its present height. Young was Speaker of the Assembly during the time that most of the extravagant and useless State commissions were created. We believe that the records of the Assembly bear out the statement that he voted for nearly every one of them and favored nearly every item of the budget that doubled the cost of State government. Young did his best to assassinate the Republican party in California three years ago by the introduction of the notorious no-party bill, a measure that would have abolished all political parties within the State of California. He has always been the friend of the pay-roll brigade. If he were elected Lieutenant-Governor he would preside over the deliberations of the Senate, and under such conditions it would be almost impossible to secure any economies next year.

Opposed to Young is Senator Rominger of Southern California, a Republican with a spotless record and a knowledge of State affairs that would make him a valued assistant to either Bordwell or Fickert in the conduct of the State administration. Senator Rominger is best known to the public as the author of the Rominger bill, an admirable measure for closing saloons and limiting the sale of liquor to beer and light wines. It was one of the good bills that was beaten by the machine in the last Legislature. It will appear on the ballot this year as an initiative measure. Senator Rominger, by reason of his ideals and his record, deserves the support of every loyal Republican in California.

There are other candidates for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor; but it is apparent that the race will be between Young and Senator Rominger. Do not be deluded by any personal appeals to vote for Young. Consider his record.

Food Commissioner Merritt has ruled that a housewife can purchase twenty-five pounds of sugar for canning purposes—therefore let us can the Kaiser.

Thousands of brave Americans are keeping that "rendezvous with death." God rest them and give them an abundant entrance into His kingdom.

THE LANCER.

Somebody has sent me a book catalogue advertising a lot of literary junk among which was "Barbarous Mexico." It was written by an amazingly-excited person named John Kenneth Turner.

John was very much shocked at the time because old Gen. Porfirio Diaz made the Mexicans behave and kept peace south of the line and encouraged commerce. John painted the glories of Mexico as it would be when "free" with brotherly love and revolutions smeared all over the map and everything.

Well, John has seen his dream come true since then. But he doesn't seem to have much to say on the subject. The catalogue says the book is for sale for the moderate price of 60 cents (marked down.) It doesn't say how much John sells for.

There is a similar profound silence from other Socialistic stars who have seen the glories of freedom burst over a confined and trampled Russia.

When the revolution broke out Charles Edward Russell, little Bessie Beatty, John Reed and others went hopping across to witness the coming of the brotherhood of man.

Somewhat reduced at the stomach line, with neck muscles materially strengthened from dodging bombs; somewhat sadder and, it is to be hoped, wiser, they have all come home again; but they are very economical in their remarks about the glories of government by the Bolsheviki.

Now that the Divine Sarah is safely out of town, perhaps it wouldn't be committing any very serious crime to make a few remarks.

Sarah has been coming over here a great many years and has been taking out a whacking load of dollars every voyage. Wouldn't it have been a pleasant compliment to the United States if somewhere in the midst of her peregrinations she had taken the trouble to learn English?

The real highbrows of course do not need the medium of language. They get her meaning psychically, even if they do not chance to know French. But, alas, my physic telepathic apparatus is out of order. All I could get out of Sarah was that she was dying and that it took her a long time to do it.

My interpretative faculties are, I fear, hopelessly dulled. On one occasion I was invited to sit with a number of esthetics with bulging brows who listened to a famous violinist improvising.

We all sat with rapt expressions in a circle while he fiddled. I was distressingly hungry; that is my only excuse.

When it was finished the famous fiddler asked me with a gentle holy sort of smile, "What did my music suggest to you?"

"The arrival of the milk man," I answered timidly. The truth was that, above his infernal squeaking, I had heard the pleasant tinkle of the approaching dairy. They all gave me a deadly and terrible look and never have I been invited to hear another famous fiddler squeak.

Just so with Bernhardt. I want regular words that I can understand.

A very charming lady of my acquaintance tells me that she and some of her relatives are going to buy a partnership automobile.

That's all right; but I should think she would find it more practical to kill her relatives with a club and save so much time; also mental wear and tear.

I don't know any husband and wife who can start on an automobile ride together and return on amiable terms.

Imagine what it would be like with just an in-law telling you when to shift gears!

I want to tell you right now that if Damon and Pythias had ridden down hill in an automobile together they would have been sworn enemies for the rest of their lives. To see somebody else slip in the clutch after coasting down a hill and not tell him he is all wrong is too poignant a test of any friendship.

Can you imagine the embarrassment of our first meal after the war?

My day dreams nowadays are all of white bread and coffee just gooey with sugar. Yea, and even entrees of various kinds that can be seen with the naked eye—not just stained places on the plate.

But, alas, I know the dreams will never come true. Harry Williams writes from France that white bread doesn't taste good when you go back to it.

By the same token I dare say that the coffee will taste like syrup and will cloy and disgust the palate. And big hunks of entrees will give us indigestion.

We all dream of going back, but we all know as a matter of common sense that life will never be the same again.

We will all find ourselves in the position of the man who wept because he discovered himself cured of the drink habit.

Those disasters, by the way, that were to befall Los Angeles when the saloons closed seem to have been delayed in transmission like the war cable messages.

For my part I am willing to stand a little disaster—my share, anyhow—in order to escape going home on the street car with a lot of boozy ruffians with stinking breath and dirty clothes.

In the old regenerate days, when I saw a drunk staggering down the middle of the street I was always buoyed up by the hope that every reckless automobile driver would do his duty; but I was always disappointed.

THE LANCER.

Possibly technicalities prevent the handing out of exact justice to interned Teutons, but when citizens are being compelled to take up "useful occupations" it is high time that traitorous Germans be put to hard work for the benefit of the nation instead of being kept in idleness and ease.

Ballot for election of War Savings governors.

Unique Event.

NEED HUGE BALLOT FOR WAR SOCIETY ELECTION.

UNIQUE in the annals of election history will be the big election to be held by the War Savings Societies of Los Angeles on the 19th inst., for the selection of a governing board of fifteen members.

The ticket bears the distinction of being the largest ever voted. Numerically, it carries the names of more than 300 nominees, while its physical proportions stretch some three or four feet in length by two feet in width.

Even the State gubernatorial election must shrink into insignificance in comparison with the overshadowing magnitude of the War Savings ballot, with its preponderance of candidates.

This election of a governing board of the Los Angeles War Savings Societies is being conducted along the most democratic lines possible. Each War Savings Society selected one candidate, whose name has been placed on the mammoth ballot.

A ballot, placed in the mail last night, will reach every War Savings Society in Los Angeles tomorrow morning. The organizations were requested by Motley H. Flint, Los Angeles city and county chairman of the National War Savings Committee, to call a special election meeting for the 19th, in order that every member may have a voice in the selection of the governing board.

Each society will have the privilege of casting seventy-five votes—crediting five to each of fifteen candidates named on the ballot, the choice of candidates being made by the society by vote.

Ballots are to be remailed to the War Savings headquarters, No. 319 L. A. Trust and Savings Building, on the 20th. And on the 23rd the sealed envelopes containing the ballots will be opened. Representatives of War Savings Societies are asked to attend and witness the official count, which will be made at 10 a.m. on the 23rd.

Among the nominees named on the huge ballot are included many of Los Angeles' most prominent men and women: Willis H. Booth, Boyle Workman, Nicholas Milbank, Rev. Charles E. Locke, Mrs. J. T. Anderson, Dr. John R. Haynes, Nathaniel Myrick, Harrington Brown, A. K. Detwiler, P. D. Mason, Mrs. Susan Dorsey, Simpson McClure, Marco Hellman, Richard E. Barry and George L. Eastman. Several of the nominees are the choice of more than one precinct.

The War Savings governing board upon its election will serve for one year, and to this body will be referred all matters of war service in which the societies may be asked or desire to participate. Other matters of importance which may arise from time to time in the organizations will be referred to the governing board for adjudication.

For the Government.

VENICE GAME OF CHANCE HARVESTS WAR STAMPS.

THERE is one concession at Venice that does not turn over the regulation 10 per cent. [illegible] tax to the government. [illegible] it gives Uncle Sam 100 [illegible] of its receipts—and its re[illegible] average $7 a minute during [illegible] it is in operation.

It is a paddle game in which a War Savings Stamp, which twenty people have each chipped in a [illegible] to buy, is then given to the [illegible] who holds a paddle numbered correspond with a little counter [illegible] from a box.

During the twelve Sundays this [illegible] has been operated at [illegible] nearly $40,000 worth of [illegible] have been sold for Uncle [illegible]

William Ramsden, a globe[illegible] amusement and advertising man, conceived the idea, and obtained the permission of the Board of Trustees of the city of Venice to operate the 100 per cent. government concession on the ocean front before the bath-house. He proposed to gather a corps of workers who would be willing to work eight hours each Sunday without receiving a penny for their labors.

Among those enlisted for the work are Dan Daniels, who has charge of the sale of Thrift Stamps at Venice; C. A. Short, a school trustee and secretary of the Venice War Activities, his wife and daughter; J. C. Barthel, postmaster; Trustee Clyde W. Holbrook and Mrs. Holbrook and Oscar Radinsky and F. M. Johnston of the Triangle Film Corporation.

The sale of Thrift Stamps commenced on May 5. As one result of the concession's twelve days' activity, the city of Venice has already exceeded her 1918 quota of 100,000 Thrift Stamps by 794, with nearly five months of the year still remaining.

Matthews Widely Known.

J. L. Matthews, editor of the Covina Argus, who is a candidate for Supervisor in the First District, is one of the most widely-known men in that community. He is making an energetic campaign and his friends assert that he is certain of landing upon the final ballot. Mr. Matthews is carrying his campaign into all political strongholds and is rapidly gaining strength throughout the district. He is the sort of man who should be elected to the responsible position he seeks.

For Law and Order.

Hon. Walter Bordwell, Republican candidate for Governor, has been indorsed by many leading citizens. Among them is John B. Bushnell, who said:

"I am heartily in favor of the candidacy of Judge Walter Bordwell. California has been overburdened with expensive commissions and overextravagant administration in almost every line. Judge Bordwell stands for a fearless administration of law and order and a defi to the lawless element that has made itself so apparent in the West in recent years. Every law-abiding citizen should indorse his candidacy.

"I know exactly what the judge will do if he is elected, and I am very glad of the opportunity to support him."

Hidalgos for Cline.

Sheriff John C. Cline has been indorsed by the Hidalgo Club of Southern California and many of its members whose names are listed among the pioneers of Los Angeles are taking an active part in the campaign to insure his re-election. The Hidalgo Club, under the direction of its president, Gen. C. J. Briceno, is arranging its Mexican independence celebration at which Sheriff Cline will be a guest of honor.

Should Return Chambers.

Among the active supporters of Judge Joseph F. Chambers for election to the Police Court in the coming primaries is Tom Murphy, temperance worker and grandson of the late Francis Murphy, the evangelist.

"During my connection with the police department as 'judge' of the 'sunrise' court, I had the opportunity to observe the splendid work accomplished by Judge Chambers while a judge of the Police Court," said Mr. Murphy. "His enforcement of the laws was such as to bring about a greater respect for the law. He accomplished a great deal of good that the people have never heard of. He should be returned to the Police Court by all means."

Political Notes.

The Ratification Committee of the Anti-Saloon League has indorsed John P. Steele, candidate for the State Senate in the Thirty-fourth District. It has also indorsed Charles W. Lyon, who seems to have an edge on the situation.

Frederick M. Roberts, candidate for the assembly in the Seventy-fourth district, is a high-class citizen. He is highly educated and stands well in his community.

Deputy City Prosecutor W. D. McConnell, candidate for police judge, has received a letter from E. W. Oliver, vice-principal of the Los Angeles High School, who has been engaged in Y.M.C.A. work at Camp Lewis, Wash., stating that he expects to be home in time to assist in the former's campaign.

Perry A. Howard, candidate for Sheriff, believes that his record as a successful contractor during the last twenty-three years recommends him as one fitted for the office he seeks. He has a high representation as a square business man and public-spirited citizen.

Louis N. Whealton, ex-Mayor of Long Beach, has indorsed Sam Browne, candidate for Sheriff. He says he considers Mr. Browne one of the shrewdest and most competent men he has ever known.

John Wesley Luter, candidate for police judge, is daily receiving indorsements from attorneys, business men and various organizations of the city.

Alfred L. Bartlett, staunch Republican, is supporting J. O. Hayes for Governor, but denies that he has anything to do with the direction of the local campaign.

Announcement that Mrs. R. W. Richardson is a member of a committee that is working for Shirrell Osborne, candidate for Supervisor, was erroneous. Mrs. Richardson is chairman of the Republican County Central Committee and therefore cannot consistently work for any candidate until after the primaries.

Prescott F. Cogswell's campaign for Supervisor in the Third District appears to be making considerable headway. Mr. Cogswell has a long list of indorsements, including several of the most prominent bankers and business and professional men in Pasadena, Monrovia, Whittier and other cities in the district and the number of his active supporters is steadily increasing. He is well known throughout the county, having served several terms in the Legislature, and is one of the leading walnut growers in Southern California. He also has taken a prominent part in the flood control movement.

Jeff McElvaine, candidate for re-election to the State Equalization Board, has returned from Sacramento and is prepared to conduct an active campaign.

Friends of J. W. Summerfield, the popular justice of the peace, who is a candidate for re-election, declare he will lead the field.

E. J. Delorey apparently has everything his own way in the Second Supervisor District. That he will be re-elected seems certain.

Among prominent business men who are giving support to the candidacy of Sherrill B. Osborne for Supervisor are Fred J. Mullen, I. L. Clark, Meredith P. Snyder, Ralph Day, John Rugg, W. H. Harrison, Cortez Shelton, William Beymer, Grover Jacoby, Theodore B. Bessing, William Beirne, R. G. Curtiss, N. J. Cordary, Paul Stewart, J. F. Durlin, Leo Jacoby, E. D. Edwards, Dr. W. H. Hathaway, J. C. Oliver and Andrew Wade.

Keppel for Superintendent.

Mark Keppel, for nearly sixteen years superintendent of the schools of Los Angeles county, is a candidate for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction. His nomination papers were secured and filed by a committee of school men and laymen, and in four days over 10,000 voters in Los Angeles county indorsed Mr. Keppel for this high office.

Mr. Keppel is conceded to be the best-informed school man in California on school law. His administration of the schools of Los Angeles county has been characterized by efficiency and honesty. His supporters say the time has come when a strong man, with a constructive policy, must be placed at the head of our State school system, and they say that Mark Keppel is the best man in the public school field to fill this important place.

Woolwine Speaks.

With two enthusiastic meetings, one at Pomona and the other in Long Beach, Thomas Lee Woolwine, candidate for the straight Democratic nomination for Governor, opened his speaking campaign in Southern California yesterday. At Long Beach he spoke in the Municipal Auditorium and was introduced by Harry B. Riley. On Monday he will speak in San Diego and environs; Tuesday, in Riverside; Wednesday, in Santa Ana, and Thursday, in San Bernardino. He will then return to the northern part of the State.

BEAN GROWERS FORM LOCAL ASSOCIATION.

Meetings were held last night at the farm bureau centers of Inglewood and Sawtelle at which bean growers listened to an address by R. H. Churchill, general manager of the California Lima Bean Growers' Association

On the suggestion of H. C. Miller of the State Food Administration, the growers are organizing local associations in order to be in a position to co-operate more fully with the government in the disposition of this year's bean crop. Such organization is already under way in both centers, it was announced. Many growers have already signed up, while others have signified a wish to come into the organization.

A committee has been appointed in each center to sign up all growers. A final meeting for completing the organization will be held in Inglewood next Thursday night and a similar meeting in Sawtelle the night following.

Dr. J. Eliot Coit, county farm adviser, stated yesterday that not more than two bean associations would be formed during August, as the marketing cost, including insurance and all charges by the Lima Bean Growers' Association last year was approximately 1½ per cent., compared with the usual commission charges of from 5 to 8 per cent.

"There is no question that the co-operative plan is the best for the farmers in the long run, as has been proved already by the citrus, walnut and raisin growers and dried fruit producers," Dr. Coit

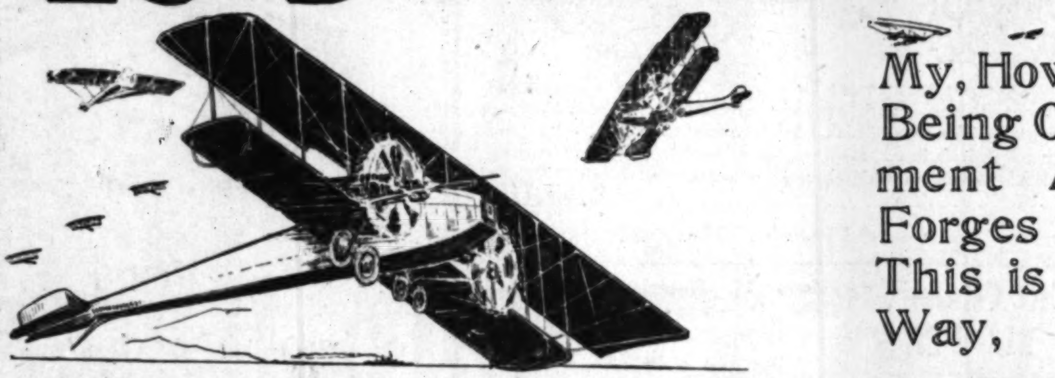
FOUR PAGES. SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 11, 1918. THIS AD. FOR MONDAY.

FLYING INTO THE HALF WAY MARK IN THIS THIRD WEEK OF

18th Department Managers' Sale



My, How Sales Records are Being Outdone as Department After Department Forges Into the Lead, for This is Proving, in Every Way,

The Year's One Big Event

—Last year's selling records are being overcome in such a surprising way in this Annual Race.

—Some of the larger departments in the first classifications have been making increases of 106%, 72%, and those in the medium classifications running as high as 115%, 98%, while some of the smaller departments have shown as high as 200%, 140% and 137%.

—And each new week brings its own enthusiastic response.

—So well and carefully have the Department Managers planned that new lots follow new lots with rapid changes.

—There is to be action every moment.

—And as this advertisement is being prepared and the merchandise is being written up, we most enthusiastically advise you to take an inventory of your needs, that you may, at this time, be provided with the merchandise you desire at savings that are possible only at such a time as this.

—We have information from various department managers regarding merchandise that is being presented, for this Third week, and more that is on the way, to warrant our most enthusiastic endorsement.

—This sale is proving, by all odds, the most notable sale event in the history of this business.

—Read every one of the pages and every item of every page—see the windows—come prepared to share in the savings.

Odds and Ends of Fine

Stationery 25c the Box

—Here's an item that should create wonderful activity in the stationery section. Several lines of higher priced stationery from regular stock have sold down to smaller lots, have been assembled three groups for Monday selling, at choice 25c.

—There are some 350 boxes in all. Cards and papers in white and colors.

—The boxes in some instances are somewhat finger-marked, the contents in every instance perfect. Be among the early ones to share in this.

E. J. Moriarty, Mgr., Stationery, Books.

Desirable

Books at 35c

Three for $1

—And you'll be surprised at the titles that are included in this assortment. Just the sort of books you'll want for vacation reading. Among them you will find:

—What's His Name—Barr McCutcheon.
—Trinity Bells—Amelia E. Barr.
—Pandora's Box—By Mitchell.
—His Sombre Rivals—E. P. Roe.
—The Eagle's Mate—By Chapin.
—The Ramrodders—By Holman Day.
—The Witch—By Mary Johnston. Aisle 8.

Could You Duplicate Them at the Factory?

White Kid Gloves $1.39

—Some have fancy black embroidery on the back—all have p.k. seams, one clasp at wrist.

—I could not go into the market today and buy them for this price, so naturally I have a right to be enthusiastic.

—I am out to win in this race.

C. R. Vient, Mgr., Gloves, Leather Goods, Handkerchiefs.

Fownes Well-Known Suede-Finished Gloves 75c

—Fine washable suede finished gloves, they look like undressed kid.

—These are in white and have two clasps at wrist. Again we say these gloves are under the wholesale price today. Aisle 2.

1920 of These Beautiful

Sample Handkerchiefs At 25c

A Saving of About Half

—Each one of them on separate card; all are pure linen, all are hand embroidered, and every one of them selling at half or less than what such handkerchiefs should bring. White and colored embroidery in the corners.

—These handkerchiefs are made in Ireland. Embroidered by hand. It's one of the striking events in the Third week of the Department Managers' Sale. Aisle 3

6 Handkerchiefs 25c

—200 dozen, all white, sheer cloth. Just imagine a handkerchief for less than 5c. Naturally we suggest early buying, for an item like this may not be possible again. Limit of 12 to a purchaser. Aisle 3.

Oh! Look at These Silk & Silk Lined

Hand Bags $2.95

200 of Them to Sell

—Certainly there will be a rush for these, for there isn't one of them that could be purchased under double this price regularly.

—They came to me from a large manufacturer. The co-operation that I received to make the third week of this event a notable one.

—No, indeed, they could not be duplicated ordinarily at any such a price. Aisle 2.

Morning Shopping Means Conservation

It's more satisfactory and it's patriotic.

This Is by All Odds the Most Notable

Sale of Women's Neckwear at 50c

That I Have Offered This Season

Who Would Imagine 4 to 7 In.

Oriental Lace Edges at 25c?

—St. Gall Oriental edges that are so much demanded for fichus, white and ecru. High-class laces that are worth ever so much more, beginning Monday, priced 25c yard.

26 In. Oriental Flouncing 98c

—Dress flouncings, 26 inches wide, white and cream. Very fine nets in richly worked effective patterns. These go for the first time Monday at 98c yard. Aisle 4.

—If all the women in Los Angeles could see this beautiful neckwear spread before them as I see it now—the 60 dozen pieces that I have would go with the very first rush.

—There isn't a piece of this neckwear that isn't a notable value at the price, and many of the pieces are worth so much more, that if I were to name a comparison, you'd say: "It isn't possible."

—Included you will find vests, vestees, guimpes, collars, sets, etc.

—Made of organdy, lawn, net, satin, pique, etc.

—Naturally there will be a crowd for these, for I do not know when I've been able to offer an item to compare with it.

W. W. Penry, Mgr. Neckwear, Ribbons, Laces. Aisle 5.

Marabou Neck Pieces $3.45

—This is the lowest price I've quoted on Marabou neck pieces this season, in spite of the fact that the down which is used in the making of these pieces is three times as expensive as it was three months ago. Aisle 5.

Overshadowing My Best Efforts with Fine Sample Corsets

Madame Lyra and Bon Ton at $2.45 & $3.45

—And I tell you that, in some instances, these corsets are far below half what they would bring regularly, and in every instance the saving is so important that few women can afford to remain away.

—There is a broad assortment of styles and materials.

—Including handsome broches and coutils, both pink and white. And remember these corsets are to go beginning Monday at $2.45 and $3.45, but when you think of them you must think of higher priced beautiful corsets. Come early to share in the saving.

Mrs. L. Cooper, Mgr., Corset Dept., Second Floor.

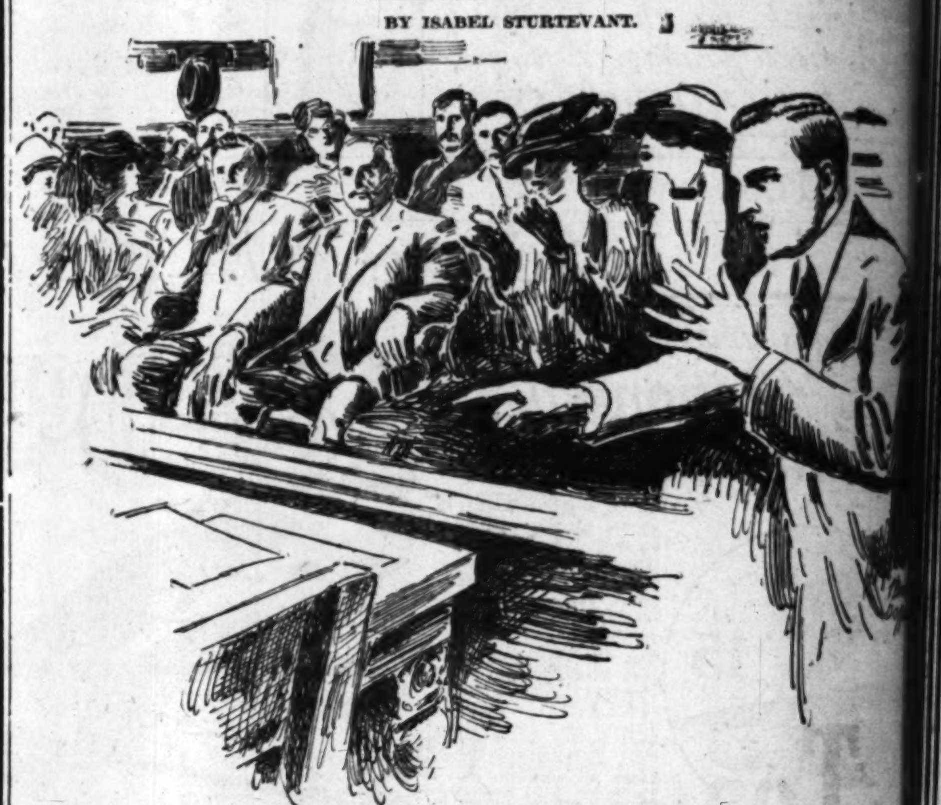
FOUR MONTHS IN THE JURY BOX; THE CONFESSIONS OF A WOMAN

Remarkable and Illuminating Sidelights on the Good and Bad Points of Feminine Judges; Frankly Admits They Will Not "Reform" System.

BY ISABEL STURTEVANT.



—Stumbling only when they came to "ladies and gentlemen of the jury."

[The following unusual article was written by a woman who has just finished four months in jury service in the local Superior Court, being five times foreman of the juries on which she sat. For the skeptical who may try to "check" up on her, through the court records, it may be mentioned that Isabel Sturtevant is merely her pen name.—Ed. Times.]

WHEN the club season for women was at its height, when the experiment of women on the jury was still much talked of, when judges dismissed court at 4 on Friday afternoon instead of 5 to go trout fishing up the San Gabriel for the week-end — about that time the women of the Friday Morning Club came together, the elect of them, to tell their experiences on the jury. None of them would commit herself more definitely than to say, in effect, "delightfully interesting." That does sum it up. It is more fun than men have been entitled to monopolize all these years.

I have just finished a four months' term on a trial jury in the Superior Court. Herewith are some of my observations. If there are any deductions to be extracted, the operation can be performed painlessly now that I am through. I suppose the reason women have refrained, while serving, from any expression in public more than "delightful experience" is because they feared they would be excused from the next jury when their names were drawn. Say what you will, we women feel it more or less a disgrace to be told in public that we are not wanted. We wonder if it is the shape of our mouth, the color of our hair or our new hat that has weighed against us.

I asked a bailiff once why I was excused and his reply was "the lawyers themselves don't know."

THE QUALIFICATIONS.

Some women of experience told me in the beginning that I must not display any intelligence if I wished to be retained as a juror, so in Judge Houser's court when asked if I knew anything concerning the law governing a certain damage suit I particularly desired to hear, I said: "No, I am very ignorant about it." Counsel for the defense scarcely allowed a decent interval to pass before he excused me. I had to go, while another woman who had answered every other question as I had was sworn in as a juror. She had already confided in me that she hoped she would "be on that case" because the furniture and frescoing in that department went so well with her new suit. She made a good juror.

Toward the close of my term I was never excused when my name was drawn. Eleven times I had the pleasure of hearing lawyers for both sides go glibly gabbling, stumbling only when they came to "ladies and gentlemen of the jury." I wished they would say, "Men and women of the jury." Woman is a good Anglo-Saxon word, while lady is a hybrid. Five out of the eleven times I was foreman—the word forewoman is not in my dictionary. In the eleven trials the women never voted unanimously as a sex. In one trial for damages against a well known corporation there were six women and six men. After an eight-hour session in the jury room, with twelve ballots taken, the result was a mistrial, 6 to 6, three women voting for the plaintiff and three for the defendant.

JURY PSYCHOLOGY.

A man who said he would not return a verdict for the corporation if he had to sit there three days led in the discussion for the plaintiff. Although sorry for the crippled man it seemed clear to me, after the instruction of the court, that he had no case and I led in the discussion for the defense.

A week later nearly the same group of jurors were in the jury box in another department before the same lawyer for the same corporation. He promptly excused me and kept the man to serve who had made the remark against the corporation. In nine trials this man invariably voted for the plaintiff yet he was never excused, to my knowledge, by counsel for defense.

A trial which lasted into the fourth week was one that had been tried twice before with men jurors, resulting in a disagreement. At last with three women on the jury this test case upon which five other suits depended was decided in a comparatively short time. Two of the three women did not make up their minds regarding the verdict until they had heard the court's instructions and were on the way to the juryroom. We were instructed to wait for all the evidence before deciding; but neither men nor women always followed this to the letter.

In the juryroom I never heard any question discussed except the one in hand, I never heard any general conversation nor a single reference to the war. I never heard any but courteous language and the most impersonal as far as women were concerned, with one or two exceptions.

UNPOPULAR VERDICT.

Once I happened to be foreman, returning a verdict which was not my own opinion—the only time out of the eleven when the verdict returned was different from my own vote. No poll of the jury was taken and after dismissal when I went into the hall to take the elevator, suddenly I was confronted by an angry face thrust close to my own. A woman hissed at me, "You thief! That is the time you reached right down in my pocket and robbed me."

"But I voted for you," I man-

Mrs. Alfred Whitney Allen.

SERVICES FOR CLUB WOMAN TOMORROW.

FUNERAL services will be held tomorrow for the late Mrs. Alfred Whitney Allen, one of the most active club women of the city, who died on Friday at the family residence, No. 206 St. Andrews place. At the time of her death she was curator of the dramatic department of the Ebell Club and director and treasurer of the Channel Club. The services will be at 10 a.m. at St. Brendan's Church, No. 239 South Western avenue.

Mrs. Allen was a native of Lansing, Mich., where she was born in 1885, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. W. J. O'Neill, now residents of Ontario, Cal. In 1907 she was married to Attorney Alfred W. Allen of this city, who survives her. After her marriage she took a course at and was graduated from the Cumnock School of Expression, and since then had taken an active part in amateur dramatic work as well as in women's club activities and civic affairs. Besides the Ebell and Channel clubs, she belonged to the Galpin Shakespeare Club, of which she was presiding officer in 1913 and 1914.

The cause of death was carcinoma, after an illness which had confined her to her bed since last February.

SON FAILS TO WRITE, MOTHER SEEKS DEATH.

DESPONDENT WOMAN SWALLOWS POISON TABLETS AND MAY NOT LIVE.

The absence of her only son, and his failure to write as often as she had hoped, brought Mrs. J. H. Senter of No. 1317 De Long street to the point of death yesterday, when she swallowed a strong poison solution in an attempt to commit suicide. She was found by her husband and rushed to the Receiving Hospital.

The frantic efforts of the police surgeons to save the woman's life may be without avail they feared. Mrs. Senter while on the operating table confessed she crushed fourteen bichloride tablets and then drank the solution. Her despondency dated back to over a year ago, when her son, F. E. Senter, went back to New Hampshire. Several months after his departure, the mother received a letter telling of his marriage, Mr. Senter said. He feared the tragedy, and tried to dispose of all the poison in the house.

DRUG STORES TO BE WIDE OPEN.

Will Sell Anything They Have Today—Fruit Stands will be Closed.

Drug stores in Los Angeles will remain open today and sell anything from their stocks, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Los Angeles and Southern California Retail Druggists Association. Counsel employed by the association will look after the interests of members if they are arrested for violating the Sunday closing "blue" law which went into effect last Sunday. The police are not disposed to enforce the law until the City Prosecutor's office gives a ruling stating item by item what druggists may and may not sell and this ruling has not as yet been made.

Fruit stands generally will close throughout the day, and continue to close Sundays until the law is repealed or amended so that the police can announce just how it is to be enforced.

Growing.

HARBOR BUSINESS NEEDS NEW WAREHOUSE SPACE.

THERE is a big demand for warehouse space at the harbor that cannot be accommodated by private owners, and efforts are being made to arrange for vacant space in the municipal warehouses. Although the city has eleven acres of floor space in the seven-story concrete warehouse in the outer harbor and four large transit freight sheds, very little of the space is used for storage. The Submarine Base and Naval Reserve training station take up most of the outer harbor shed space.

"We have been turning away storage business almost by the trainload for weeks for lack of space," said J. P. Puckett of the Wilmington Transfer and Storage Company, yesterday. "Our big warehouse is filled to the roof. We would like to get additional space in the Water street municipal shed were it not for the legal restriction that prevents private firms from doing business there."

Clarence H. Matson, traffic manager for the Harbor Commission, says there is no reason why private firms cannot do business in the city warehouses. While there is a provision in the bond ordinance requiring the municipal warehouses to be municipally owned and operated, this is easily complied with by any firm that desires to lease space at the regular schedule of rates.

"In fact, one firm is already using city space, and it is probable that considerable more space will be taken for uses which cannot be discussed for military reasons," said Mr. Matson. "We are now negotiating for some big business that may mean much to the port. Recent developments may make a big change in the shipping situation here."

It is known that before the collapse in Russia plans had been made to utilize the big outer harbor warehouse as a base for shipment to the Orient. With the stopping of shipping to Russia, however, the plans fell through and no effort has since been made to utilize the city warehouses other than for a limited amount of grain storage.

DEFENSE COUNCIL TO MEET.

On the understanding that local action must depend on the decision of the State council, plans for the reorganization of the County Council of Defense will not be put into effect until after the meeting of the State Council of Defense next Wednesday, R. W. Pridham, who heads the county body, announced yesterday. War activity in all its phases will be discussed, and many changes are expected to be made at the meeting of the State organization, he said.

RELIEF SHIP TO FRANCE TO BE GRATEFULLY RECEIVED.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.
Staff Correspondent of The Times in France.

PARIS, July 5.—Announcement that the people of the southwest are sending a shipload of food for the French refugees and others who have suffered through the war was received here with much interest and many expressions of good will. All acquainted with conditions in France regard this as a timely and practical enterprise. Not that a proud, capable people like the French are dependent on charity, but the country's resources have been severely taxed through four years of war.

In addition to her own army and population she has fed the veritable host of civilians and special war workers who have followed the British and American armies to this, the battle ground of Europe.

As in other countries at war, food conditions here are not uniform. This is partly governed by transportation facilities and other conditions.

Thousands of refugees have been sent to the southern cities, and this sudden influx has severely taxed the food resources of some of them. It is in these places that the California ship with its cargo will bring the greatest relief. The arrival of this ship from a faraway part of the world after a journey of 7000 miles via the Panama Canal is awaited with more than ordinary interest. The people will see in it an expression of that deep sympathy which all the world feels for the country which has so long and uncomplainingly borne the burden of mankind.

From the widow's cup of sugar to the ton of beans donated by a farmer, it will be welcome, not only for the relief which it will bring, but because of the spirit in which it is given.

SOUTHLAND'S SCHOOLS WIN NATIONAL NOTICE.

Training Colleges Draw Attention of Easterners; List of Them.

IT IS a well-known fact—of which the West may justly be proud, but of which the East need not be ashamed—that educators from beyond the Mississippi, both north and south of the Mason-Dixon line, have, of recent years, made many pilgrimages to California in order to study the advanced methods of our educational systems. For here on this western rim of the world, where Alpha meets Omega and where the past blends with the present, may be found not only all that is old and true in the knowledge and wisdom of the centuries, but here is also something new—an urge, a wholesome restlessness, a faith that fits in with the climate.

Here in Southern California there are, in adition to the great public school system, thirty or more splendid training schools and colleges, storehouses of learning, wherein are taught every trade and profession, every language, every science, art and industry in the category of human knowledge. With all the facilities for securing the highest education in any line right at hand, with teachers, who stand as high as any in their profession, waiting and anxious to guide the hand and brain of youth, with tuition as reasonable as can be found anywhere in America, it would be as senseless for a young man or woman to turn away from Los Angeles and seek an eastern school of learning as it would be for him or her to leave untouched a good dinner on the home table in order to ride to Redondo and eat a restaurant meal.

To dwell at length upon the advantages of the Los Angeles training schools would require an entire issue of The Times. However, in the following paragraphs The Times endeavors to give a brief account of a number of the more important institutions and of the nature of their curriculums.

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA—Pride of the Southland. Founded in 1880 by M. M. Bovard; present president, Dr. George F. Bovard. Comprises fifteen large buildings, has 175 regular teachers and 175 lecturers and assistants. Total enrollment, 3500. Includes every branch of learning. "A mother of usefulness."

THE SAN DIEGO ARMY AND NAVY ACADEMY AND THE PASADENA ARMY AND NAVY ACADEMY—Two of the best schools in the entire West. These schools are under supervision of their president, Capt. Thomas A. Davis, a regular army officer. These academies emphasize the great value of clean living and right thinking. The Pasadena branch is patterned after the San Diego academy and has as head master, C. M. Wood, one of the best-known educators of the Southland. For the young man of ambition no better opportunity could be found than is afforded by either of these schools.

MODERN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Metropolitan Building, Fifth and Broadway—Founded by Prof. C. A. Grommet, three years ago. Prof. Grommet specializes in civil service preparatory, secretarial work and reporting. Having engaged in the business of court reporting for eighteen years, prior to establishing his school, Prof. Grommet is an efficient instructor in that special line. H. B. Blanchard, perhaps the best penman in California, teaches penmanship. Scores of young men and women have been sent from this school to take up government work in Washington.

California Military Academy, founded in 1906 by Prof. N. W. Brick. New academy now situated at No. 4001 West Sixteenth street. Boys between ages of 6 and 15 years taught everything from a, b, c's to high school work. Excellent military drilling and special attention paid to physical and moral welfare. The student body works in unison with the Junior Red Cross League. School has grown from forty members, last year, to a membership of sixty.

Harvard School for Boys, now in its nineteenth year. Boarding and day pupils. Said to be the largest and best equipped boys' school in the West. Designated by the War Department as a Reserve Officers' Training Unit, Junior Division. Graduates are eligible for commissions. This school prepares pupils for higher education along business and military lines. Summer school now in session. Apply to R. B. Gooden, head master, Sixteenth street and Western avenue, Los Angeles.

Urban Military Academy. C. C. Burnett, head master, has been in charge since the founding of the institution in 1906. School situated at No. 915 South Alvarado street, and the school home at No. 800 South Alvarado street. In this school special emphasis is laid upon home training. Music and other arts are taught, but military training remains the feature. Boys are accepted between the ages of 6 and 14 years, and every effort is made to surround them with the best influences. So far, seventy pupils have enrolled this year, but more are expected.

Page Military Academy is another military boarding and day school for young boys, which soon starts upon its tenth year of existence. It is situated in the Wilshire district on La Brea avenue, and is open to all budding Pershings between the ages of 5 and 14. Its founder and head master is Robert A. Gibbs, whose great interest in life is boys. Officially connected with the institution are eighteen practical educators who received their degrees from among the best colleges in the United States.

Los Angeles Military Academy, No. 4800 Huntington drive, was founded in 1895. Its present head master is Walter J. Dailey, who expects to do his bit toward the education of seventy-five pupils this fall. It is an all-the-year-round school, but the regular academic course will begin on September 24, and all young men between the ages of 8 and 21 years are eligible to admission. Artistic, homelike buildings and cultured surroundings give this academy the environment necessary for the proper training and development of boys.

Westlake School for Girls, at No. 333 South Westmoreland avenue, was founded in 1904, and is, in more ways than one, a true "beauty spot" of beautiful Los Angeles. The location of the institution, together with its tennis court and fine swimming pool, make it one of the most attractive schools in the city to young girls. In addition to the language courses and the courses in music, domestic science and art, a secretarial course has been added for the session which opens September 25. The principals of the institution are Misses De Laguna and Jessica Vance. The school is also a Red Cross auxiliary.

Westlake School for Boys. This progressive institution, at No. 624 South Alvarado street, which began its existence in September, 1917, with only two pupils, now has a membership of more than seventy-five—and ten of the youngsters have adopted French orphans! Special emphasis is laid upon English and mathematics, and it is the intention of the faculty to make this one of the best grammar schools in the country.

Claremont School for Boys is, as its name implies, in Claremont, thirty-five miles east of Los Angeles, far enough away to make the school term seem like a vacation. It has a forty-acre campus and a new athletic field and swimming pool. W. E. Garrison is head master of this institution.

The Cumnock School of Expression. Who hasn't heard of it? The principals are Miss Helen A. Brooks and Mrs. Edwin H. Brooks, and they expect fully 150 pupils to enroll when the school opens on October 1. Last year the young women of this institution participated in nearly 100 patriotic programmes. The school is located at No. 200 South Vermont avenue.

Hoff's Expert Training School, seventh floor of the Grosse Building, was established in 1895 by A. C. Hoff, who claims to have the largest and best equipped training school in America, with the possible exception of the Pierce school in Philadelphia. More than 8000 of Mr. Hoff's pupils are now in government service. The faculty includes twenty-two teachers, the student body now numbering 700.

Cherniavsky's High School of Music, opening August 15, in No. 504 Majestic Theater Building. Piano, violin and 'cello are taught. German music done on the soft pedal.

Los Angeles Medical School of Opthalmology and Optometry, 512 Auditorium Building, Fifth and Olive streets. See M. B. Ketchum, president. He will teach you how to heal your fellow man.

The Egan School, at 1324 South Figueroa street, is the place for you to learn to be a star actor. "Frank C." will do his best to turn your spark of dramatic genius into a flame—and teach you music into the bargain, if you want it.

The Yale is a good school for boys, founded eighteen years ago and now situated at No. 205 North Union avenue. The chief feature of this institution is that it fits young men for the university. The specialties are English classics and military drilling. Prof. P. G. Adams is in charge.

Hollman's Business College, fifth floor of the Realty Board Building, and in charge of D. L. Hollman, was founded in 1900, starting with twelve pupils. It is co-educational and now has an enrollment of 300 pupils. A special civil service course has been added.

Swiss College for Boys—Pupils of all ages are welcomed at this boarding school at No. 507 West Adams street, under the tutelage of Prof. C. J. Williams, who founded the institution two years ago and who makes a specialty of teaching Latin-American youths, instructing them in the rudiments of the English language, preparing them for English schools.

The Castilleja School for Girls at Palo Alto specializes in domestic science and physical culture. The fall term opens September 30. For information, correspond with the principal, Mrs. Mary I. Lockey.

Harker School for Girls is another growing school, conducted at Palo Alto, by Miss Catherine Harker. This institution consists of a high school and a lower school. French, economics and music are the special branches taught. The seventeenth year opens September 16. For information, write Miss Catherine Harker, Palo Alto, Cal.

The Gallagher-Marsh College, which is located temporarily in the Byrne Building, is another good business college. Although this is a new school, having been founded in January of this year, it is a growing concern and bids fair to become as popular as the famous school of the same name in San Francisco, after which it was patterned and with which it is connected.

Los Angeles School of Art and Design, Sixth and Alvarado streets. L. E. G. Macleod, the director of the school, has an international reputation. Students are given instruction following the best European academies.

The Y.M.C.A. Schools need no introduction. They have been in existence since the present building was erected, ten years ago. Last year nearly 2000 young men took advantage of the opportunities offered by these remarkable schools. J. A. Gillaspie, educational director, is one of the most brilliant and able educators of Southern California.

The Los Angeles Chiropratic College, at No. 931 South Hill street, was founded in 1911. It represents practically a new school of the healing art, chiropractics having never claimed the attention of science until twenty-three years ago, but its students are growing in numbers and there is now a move on foot to secure a State Board of Examiners for Chiropractors.

The Willis Woodbury Business College, in the Hamburger Building, was founded in 1884. It now has an enrollment of 235 students. The principal is S. T. Willis, a man of broad experience in his field. This is one of the most stable business colleges in the Southwest. The commercial course includes every branch of study necessary for the equipment of the young man or woman entering upon the business life.

The Sawyer's School for Secretaries, in the Baker-Detwiler Building, was founded three years ago. Its present directors are Frances Jackling and Camille M. Giffen and the present enrollment is 250. Among other good things claimed for the student body is that it has

And will be pleased to give detailed information about these two excellent schools.

Officers' training camps for instruction in Infantry, Field Artillery and Machine Gun drills have been established by the Government at Camp Pike, Camp Taylor and Camp Hancock. Civilians from Imperial and San Diego counties, who desire to secure commissions in these branches of the service and who wish to enter any one of these camps, should make application at once to the Academy's Professor of Military Science and Tactics, Lieut.-Col. J. M. T. Partello, Pacific Beach, Calif.

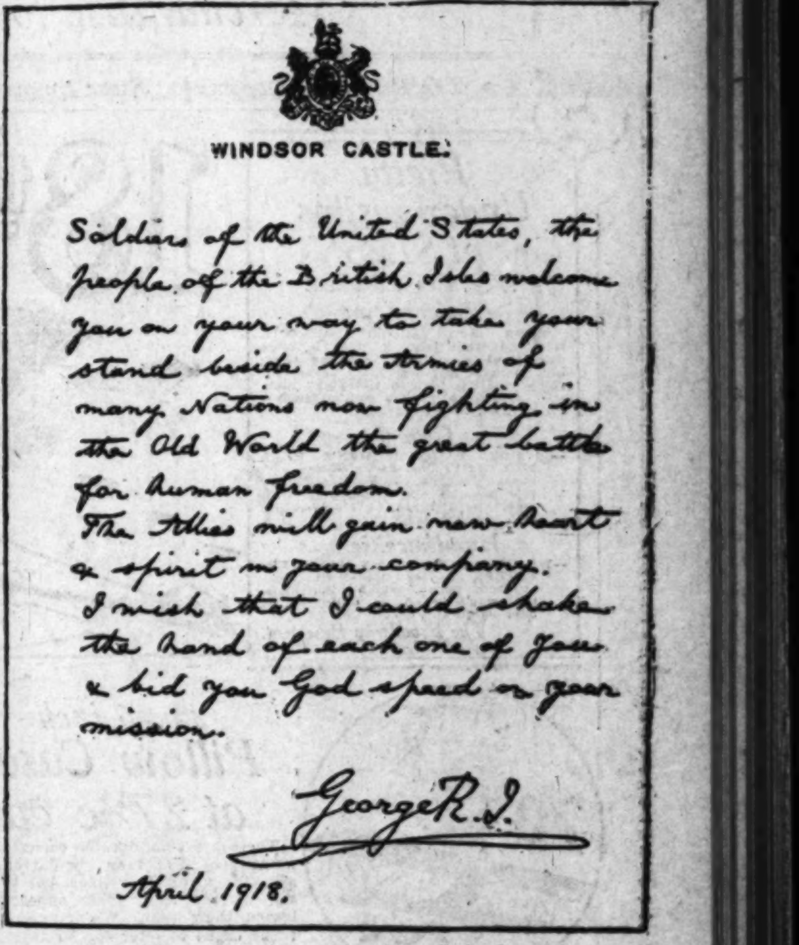
Extracts From War Department's Inspection Report

"6. Are the students required to be continuously in uniform, and do they lead, as far as the surrounding conditions can reasonably be expected to permit, a military life? In other words, are the conditions such as to impress them constantly with a sense of being under military discipline? Yes, decidedly so. 7. To what extent is a military spirit developed and nurtured? By practical instruction and by lectures. Every effort appears to be made to give the institution a decidedly military atmosphere. Military training has the fullest possible support of every member of the faculty. 8. With what degree of zeal is military duty performed? Excellent. 9. What was the general appearance of the cadets at inspection? Excellent. 13. Is the military instruction of such an extent and thoroughness as to qualify the average graduate for a commission as a lieutenant of volunteers? It is believed so, but graduate cadets considerably under minimum age limit. 17. Do the conditions warrant the continuance of the detail at this institution of an officer of military science and tactics? The conditions warrant such a detail."

"This is essentially a military school. Apparently, military training has an equal rating with all other studies and the training of the cadets in all matters military is carried out with most commendable esprit. Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. T. Partello, U.S.A., retired, is at the head of the military instruction. He has been at the academy since September, 1917, and, for inspection, turned out a remarkably well-trained body of cadets. Physical drill (Butts' Manual) and bayonet drill, excellent. Review complete in detail and excellent. Formal inspection: Though the rifles were commendably clean, several of them were somewhat out of repair due to fair wear and tear. The cadets present a clean and natty appearance and are very soldierly. The quarters of the cadets were found to be clean and orderly. Practical work is taken up with road-sketching and military map-reading. Considerable instruction has already been given in the last-mentioned subject."

Catalogue of either of the above named Academies will be furnished upon request.

A Souvenir Our Soldiers Prize.



WINDSOR CASTLE.

Soldiers of the United States, the people of the British Isles welcome you on your way to take your stand beside the Armies of many Nations now fighting in the Old World the great battle for human freedom.
The Allies will gain new heart & spirit in your company.
I wish that I could shake the hand of each one of you & bid you God speed on your mission.

George R. I.

April 1918.

King George wrote the original.
A former Los Angeles and a Santa Ana man have sent copies of this message from His Majesty to their relatives here.

Of England.

LOS ANGELES SOLDIER HAS LETTER FROM KING.

American soldiers and sailors now engaged in the fight to make the world safe for democracy are collecting all sorts of quaint and curious souvenirs and sending them home to their relatives and friends. Some of these are in the form of vases made from empty brass shells picked up on the battlefields, but one of the most highly prized of all the war souvenirs our soldiers are able to get their hands on is a personal letter of greeting from King George.

As the American troops pour through England on their way to France, the King sends to each of them a greeting from Windsor Castle. One of these was recently forwarded to Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Johnston of No. 1442 Kellam avenue by their son, Byron O. Johnston, aged 19. The envelope bears a printed line as follows:

"A message to you from His Majesty, King George V."

Before enlisting in the One Hundred and Forty-third Field Artillery here last September, Byron O. Johnston was employed in the mechanical department at The Times office, where his father is a make-up man. Early last spring Byron was detached from the artillery and sent to France, where he is now in the thickest of the fight with another American organization of field artillery.

He has a brother, Ewart Johnston, aged 21, who enlisted in the marines last September and is now stationed at Honolulu. Both the Johnston boys volunteered.

One of the letters written by King George and sent to American soldiers passing through London was sent to Santa Ana recently by John Parley Black, son of Mrs. Dottie Stephenson. Black is with the artillery in France. He writes as follows:

"This is a beautiful country. The houses are all made of brick and each has about a dozen chimneys. I haven't seen a stovepipe yet. The only thing that looks funny is the money. The pennies are as large as half-dollars and are worth as much as two of our pennies. The steam cars here are as small as our wagons over there. I haven't seen a two-horse rig yet; they all seem to be one-horse affairs. The streets are only half as wide as ours."

Los Angeles Military Academy

Unexcelled as a Boarding School for Boys and Young Men

Huntington Drive, Los Angeles

For a Limited Number of Boys Coming Well Recommended

24th Year Begins September 24, 1918

The Los Angeles Military Academy affords a rare combination of military discipline and home life, country life with city advantages. The boy is assured wholesome, homelike surroundings, affording environment necessary for the proper training and development of boys. Spacious campus and commodious buildings.

The faculty is strong numerically, strong in ability and progressive in its aims.

The advantages are ideal for a boy who is desirous of making the best possible use of his time in school, who has pride in developing a strong, graceful body, military bearing, correct habits and those qualities which make for a successful life.

In school the small boys have separate class rooms; they have their own portion of the grounds and a special director during playtime, separate company for drill, and when in quarters have a building, Lockwood House, attractively and comfortably arranged, with an experienced, skillful, loving matron in charge, whose special and only duty is to look after their comfort and welfare.

At Los Angeles Military Academy the small boys are enthused and their ambition excited by the presence and example of the Upper School boys. The small boy sees a goal ahead and works steadily for it. There is everything to be gained and nothing to lose by small boys under the conditions existing at Los Angeles Military Academy.

A visit to our buildings and grounds and careful investigation of our equipment, facilities and results obtained will convince you that for SMALL BOYS the Academy is not excelled by any school.

The courses of study include Primary, Grammar Grade and High School subjects and are designed to prepare students for Business Life, Government and Technical Schools of the highest grade and for COLLEGE ENTRANCE.

The following extracts from letters from a few of our patrons may be of interest in this connection:

From W. C. Green, 1011-1015 Trust and Savings Building, City:

"My son, Earl, age 11, who has been a student at the Academy for the past two years, has shown such marked advancement in his studies and general deportment that we desire you to know that we highly value your work and intend to keep our boy under your guidance until he has finished the full course of instruction. When we were considering a school, we thought possibly one with small boys only might be the best, but decided in favor of Los Angeles Military Academy. We feel that it has been of much benefit to him to have as an example bright young men of the right sort."

Dr. Edward H. Angle, 1066 N. Los Robles Ave., Pasadena, California.

March 23, 1914.

Mr. E. M. Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich..

My dear sir—In reply to your favor of the 13th inst., I may say that from what I know of the Los Angeles Military Academy, I can only speak in terms of praise of it. While my knowledge of the school is not extensive, I am sure it is an excellent one, and if I had a boy I would place him in it. Very Truly Yours, EDWARD H. ANGLE.

"What your school has done for him in discipline and self-respect, in application in scholarship—and in practically every other quality that goes to make a Man—I can never be sufficiently grateful to you for.

"I have been familiar with colleges and educational institutions throughout the United States for more than 40 years and I don't know one which could have done my own boy more good in three years than you have. I have good inside as I find it in him, nor more outside as all the world can see it.

"Thank you, thank, also, for me, his instructors, his comrades, and everybody else who has helped in this extraordinary development of my boy, now 18, just graduating from your institution.

"Good luck to you, and may it be your privilege to be of use not only to the community still further, but also to the government of the country, which needs just such service, applied to the younger generation, to fit it for the more serious duties that are facing it.

"With high regard and always best wishes, Always Your Friend, CHAS. F. LUMMIS."

Mabel E. Burns, 1076 West 6th Street, City, writes:
"I am thoroughly satisfied and pleased with the school."

(Seward F. Burns, 9 years of age, entered the Academy September, 1915.)

"Under your care Fred has become strong and well. I consider the location of your school ideal, the grounds and the quarters of the little boys especially attractive. His progress in school and in his music has been remarkable, and I want to thank you for the excellent care he has received." Mrs. A. M. Salter, 3124 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal.

"I am gratified to note the marked general improvement in my son Stanley.

"I must thank you for the great personal interest you have shown in his welfare, which I feel confident is not a matter of having singled Stanley out for consideration, but is a part of your general plan of handling and developing the students who attend your school."
Mary F. Horsley.

"My boys, aged seven and ten years, advanced in every study twice as fast as they would have been allowed to in the public schools; in addition, they had French and Spanish conversation and reading.

"I want to speak in the highest terms of your course in music. I find this unusually good, as many schools pay very little attention to music. My boys advanced, both of them, on a stringed instrument and the piano. The work was so well planned, that nothing conflicted and much was accomplished.

"And what interests the mothers especially is the fact that Mrs. Baily and a number of highly educated housemothers really mother the boys as well as look after their health.

"The military drill as well as their games are all under the eye of a professor and develop the body as well as the habit of fair play in a way that can't be obtained alone.

"Very sincerely,
"MRS. H. SKINNER."

the finest Thrift Stamp organization in Los Angeles, the students averaging a sale of $2000 worth of Thrift Stamps a month. Besides the business courses, a civil service course has recently been added to the curriculum.

Otis Art Institute, on Wilshire boulevard, is one of the most noted art schools in the Southland. The regular term will open September 30. For further instruction, consult with Prof. C. P. Townsley, managing director, No. 2401 Wilshire boulevard, Los Angeles.

Adolph Dahn-Peterson is the director of the Dahn-Peterson Academy of Music, corner of South Grand avenue at Fifteenth street. Mr. Dahn-Peterson is a native of Norway. He is an authority on modern voice.

The Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn School of Dancing is inaugurating a new and interesting feature this season. They intend to have a class for babies from 2½ to 4 years. Mrs. E. E. Hamilton, manager, says they expect to have quite a number of the little tots and that they will be given the very best of attention. Miss St. Denis seeks every possible means to discover the nature of the talent in each individual, whether it be a baby or a grown-up.

Modern Business College, "The Specialty School," located in the Metropolitan Building, fourth floor, was organized three years ago. It has doubled the enrollment since January last. The principal, Prof. C. A. Grommer, has had unusually wide and varied experience, both commercial and professional, including a private secretaryship, institute conductor and court reporter. It is the claim of this school that pupils are experts on graduation, inasmuch as few offices furnish the range and variety of work that is given in the regulation course. Modern Business College claims that in Prof. H. S. Blanchard students receive instruction from one of the greatest masters of the pen extant. The college probably has the only complete equipment of Underwood typewriters in the city, and its newly organized Burroughs machine department has become one of the most popular departments in the school. To meet the tremendous demand of the government for competent stenographers, a civil service course has been a specialty of this school since its organization—in fact, is the oldest business college civil service department in Los Angeles. The motto of the school is "Universal Business Training for Women."

Both the San Diego Army and Navy Academy at Pacific Beach and the Pasadena Army and Navy Academy are under the direction of Capt. Thomas A. Davis, late Sixth United States Volunteer Infantry. Within the first two years of the San Diego Army and Navy Academy existence, after inspections by the examiner of schools of the University of California, the academy secured the certificate privilege at that university, and at the first meeting of the Committee on Secondary Schools, after the academy had had one of its graduates enter the university, the academy was put on the fully accredited list. The work of the academy's representatives at the University of California has resulted in the academy's recognition as one of three military schools in the State which are worthy of the university's "Class A" division. Other accreditings have been given by the United States Military Academy, West Point, and by the United States Bureau of Education. Under the former a recommended graduate of the academy, on securing from his Representative in Congress the appointment, is exempted from the usual mental examination on entering West Point. Within four years after its founding, after an inspection by the War Department, the academy secured the detail of an officer of the Regular Army as professor of military science and tactics. Ever since the academy has been under government supervision, and the reports from inspectors, who have been sent out each year by the War Department to look over the institutions which have details, have been most gratifying. Practically 10 per cent. of the academy's aggregate enrollment, since it was founded have entered the service of our country; because of their military training received here nearly half of this number have been made commissioned officers. The founder of the academy has had, from the beginning, high ideals for his school and the laudable ambition to make it the best preparatory school in the West.

ELKS AID SALVATION ARMY'S WAR DRIVE.

SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS ARE SOUGHT IN LOS ANGELES.

Plans are now being perfected to raise $75,000 in Los Angeles for the war service of the Salvation Army, and it is expected that the local order of Elks will figure prominently in the work.

Already the Elks have launched effective campaigns in New York, St. Paul, Minneapolis and other large cities, and a similar action is being planned throughout the country. The order made up a fund of $1,000,000 last year, and paid it out to help the men in khaki. It has 25,000 of its membership already under arms, and the 500,000 at home are loyally backing them up.

"It is time for the Elks to put their strong arm behind the Salvation Army in its war drive," said Grand Exalted Ruler Fred Harper in his message. "This fund must be subscribed at once. Elks should give sincere and unstinted help to this drive for war funds for the practical, far-reaching, nonsectarian and truly helpful Salvation Army."

The Salvation Army is raising its $5,000,000 war fund, needed for the tripling of its hutment service with the American Expeditionary Forces, the operation of hotels in France for the soldiers, and for work at the cantonments in this country.

Here and There.

WE WANT CLEAN PLAYS.

PHOTOPLAY LEAGUE OF AMERICA WORKS TO THAT END.

The swelling wave of feeling against undesirable pictures is at last taking shape and has reached organization in the body of the Photoplay League of America. Photoplay Magazine, the official organ of the league, in its September issue publishes the following explanation of the league's mission:

"On numerous and sundry occasions commercial persons engaged in the manufacture of lurid, salacious, unwholesome or merely stupid and vulgar screen products, have replied to interviews of protest: We give 'em what they want. But do they? Photoplay Magazine has long had its doubts that anywhere in this country is there a real demand for any except clear, diverting, human, uplifting motion pictures. It has often expressed these doubts.

"And coincident with this editorial force has been a great unorganised wave of feeling among intelligent people all over the United States, for as intelligent people from Portland, Me., to San Diego, Cal., have come to accept the photoplay and other motion pictures as a mighty new means of world expression, in just the degree that the potential power of the motion picture has been recognised, to that degree has there been a demand for better pictures. That wave of feeling has taken shape. It has become a vital movement. It has crystallised into organization. That organization is an actual fact today and it is known as the Photoplay League of America. This organization will be the national clearinghouse of clean pictures, good pictures. And by 'good' we don't mean nasty-nice. We mean intelligent, artistic, inspiring,' just as we use the word 'clean' to define those healthy, optimistic, fresh-blooded emanations of imagination which are and must remain typically American."

CARLETON PHOTOPLAYS ARE NOW IN THE FIELD.

The newest bidder for honors in the motion picture field is Lloyd B. Carleton Productions, which is a Los Angeles corporation, whose promoters have extensive plans for the making and marketing of pictures, chiefly through the open market route.

The premier offering of the organization will be a six-reel feature entitled "Mother, I Need You." It was written by Wycliffe A. Hill, and was directed by Frank Beal. It is described as "a story of Eve and her modern sister," with a message to mothers who are too busy with other matters to listen to the heart cry of the daughter at home. Recently press and pulpit have been asking mothers if they were not too hard driven by household and welfare work to look after the needs of the daughters, and "Mother, I Need You," is set forth as an answer to this question. It has a biblical prologue, visualizing the temptation of Eve and the expulsion from the garden.

Enid Markey, fresh from her laurels as leading lady of "Tarzan of the Apes," is the star of "Mother, I Need You," and her work in the strongly emotional role of Eva Stanley is declared by her director to be the best screen work of this young actress. She is supported by Edward Coxen, Jack Standing, William Quinn, G. Raymond Nye, Eugenie Besserer, Clarissa Selwynne, Elsie Creeson and Marian Warner.

A beautiful musical scheme has been arranged for the picture by Louis F. Gottschalk.

Ernest Shipman has the disposition of the State rights to the film in charge, and already reports several bids. It is to be shown at a local theater shortly.

LILA LEE AND THE OBSTREPEROUS MONK.

After all, little Lila Lee, Lasky luminary, is the very youngest of the grown-up stars; so if she did follow a monkey off and get lost, why it's exactly what one might expect of a youngster.

It happened at Catalina Island, where Miss Lee recently visited, making scenes for her picture, "Such a Little Pirate." The company, headed by Director Melford, visited a lonely part of the island, one day, and landed from a launch. Late in the afternoon, as the other members of the company went inland to film some scenes in which Lila did not appear, Miss Lee decided to stay on the beach and watch over Bepo, the small monkey which is used in the story. Absorbed in a novel, the small star forgot her charge, and when she looked up he was legging it down the beach. Lila immediately started after him, but the monkey maintained his lead and finally turned inland through the hills. With grim determination Lila kept up the chase until Bepo climbed a tree and chatteringly refused to come down. Just then Lila discovered that she didn't know where she was, and that it was getting dark.

When Director Melford and the other members of the company returned to the beach there was no Lila, though they distinguished her footprints on the beach. The company all followed these until the prints were lost in the underbrush. Then they scattered in various directions and as darkness settled they trailed along calling out her name. It was Theodore Roberts who finally discovered the little star. She was sitting under a tree with Bepo in her arms, calmly waiting for help to come.

"I knew you'd come," she said, "so I thought I'd save my strength. And Bepo was so frightened at the darkness coming on that he was glad to come back to me."

Metamorphosis.

A BAS THE SOB BRETHREN! ALL HAIL, COMEDY KING!

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

A BAS the handsome picture hero with the long, dreamy eyelashes, the shredded wheat hair and no sense of humor!

Long live the comedy king, with his villain-proof trick automobile and his tooth-wash smile!

It looks now as if the days of the sob brethren are numbered. One by one our handsome villain-hounds are cutting their hair, cultivating a smile of goodwill toward men and even greater goodwill toward women, and sunnyjimming into comedy.

Of course, it's the war that has done it. The war has made us all so frivolous—if you know what I mean. That is, we're all so serious at bottom that we've just got to laugh—or die.

And if the war does nothing else for us, it has relieved us of the handsome hero who never smiled in his film career, and who takes himself and the heroine seriously. The new comedy hero doesn't. He chucks the heroine under the chin, in effect, and says, "Dearie, we've been in altogether too many five-reelers together to take them seriously, haven't we? We know that nothing on earth can prevent the clinch in the last reel, so we should worry!"

The handsome hero, you understand, still races his automobile to save the heroine, while the villain yells, "You hold the house while I set fire to the child!" Only now it's a trick automobile which can leap impossible chasms and hop from roof to roof if necessary; but instead of doing it with a do-or-die frown, he drives with a devil-may-care smile. And now-a-days, when he starts to choke the villain over the library table, he finds there are five villains instead of one—which, don't you see, turns melodrama into neat satire?

Everybody's doin' it. One can name off-hand a dozen or so of our very loveliest heroes who have checked "the papers" and the "child" in the property room, and have parked their professional curly locks with the barber or have sold them for the benefit of the Red Cross. There are Douglas Fairbanks, Jack Kerrigan, Wallace Reid, Franklyn Farnum, Herbert Rawlinson, William Desmond, Tom Mix, and a score of others; while Dustin and William Farnum always did believe in the efficacy of the sunny smile. Even William S. Hart, chief high priest of the solemn boys, is becoming a smile expert.

But the come-on artist of a new school of satirical comedy is William Russell, boss of his own company, formerly a Mutual, now a Pathe star. "William" has become just "Bill," and Bill promptly parked the bunk. A few months ago, Bill slicked back his temperamental hair and practiced a brand new smile before the mirror. Then he got him a brilliant young scenario writer—Jules Firthman was the writer's name when he wrote the "Hard Rock Breed" stories, but now he's Stephen Fox—and the new writer measured him for comedy. It was decided that a brisk little article with a dash of satire, a lot of surprise situations, and some main strength comedy was the best fit for Bill's talents. The first one was tried on—and it fitted Bill like a glove. Then he got "Up Romance Road" and it was a big success. And now "Hobbs in a Hurry" promises to be a knockout. Half a dozen other stories are in the making, and all of them promise to place Russell's name in even more electric lights. In fact, Sid Grauman is now negotiating for these comedies, it is understood.

The new school of satirical comedy, which is being presented by Russell and Fox delicately balances on the verge of burlesque, but the satire is so adroitly worked in that, to such as still like their melodrama neat, why there it is apparently. There are scores of "hear-breadth

THE WEEK'S PICTURES.

BRILLIANT PHOTOPLAYS ON THE LOCAL RIALTO.

Clune's Auditorium.

It is not ofen that a motion-picture producer can call to his aid the services of a queen and women of the most exclusive nobility of England. But D. W. Griffith, producer of "Hearts of the World," has succeeded in accomplishing this in "The Great Love," his second and latest European production. In this photoplay, Queen Alexandra and many titled ladies are seen engaged at their various duties in hospitals and on their estates, some scrubbing, some mopping floors, others engaged in attending convalescent soldiers, while others do menial work, but which they do not deem degrading, because it is necessary for them to do their bit in order that the cause of world democracy may triumph. This is a remarkable photoplay and Manager Bert St. John is preparing to handle record-breaking crowds at the premier showing of "The Great Love" at Clune's Auditorium tomorrow. This picture was photographed in England when D. W. Griffith made his trip to Europe and the battlefields of France. He was assisted by the British government in producing "The Great Love," so that the people of the United States could learn the great lesson attached to this picture.

Quinn's Rialto.

The national thought of today is "To Hell with the Kaiser," and, with this in mind, Metro Pictures Corporation has produced a propaganda cinema of that name. No more fitting place than Quinn's Rialto has been selected by the producers as the home of their big production, and yesterday this stupendous story of romance and love and the expose of the devilish Hohenzollern plots and tricks began its local run. "To Hell with the Kaiser" will afford its audiences genuine satisfaction, for it brings home in a thrilling way the hopes and dreams of millions of souls. It serves the nation in many ways, for it carries a message of strength and courage that will undoubtedly inspire onlookers to the highest pitch of emotion. The story, which has to do with the flight of an American inventor and his two young daughters from Berlin at the outbreak of the war, carries the specator to the plains of Belgium, where the littlest daughter meets a ghastly fate at the hands of the German Crown Prince. The detailed accounts of the Kaiser's plot for world dominion are shown as are also portrayed the orders of the German leaders for the "relaxation of their soldiers." The production, however, does not depend upon its dramatic virtues alone to get over. A beautiful romance between the eldest daughter and a young American aviator runs through the play.

Tally's Broadway.

Just as Ambassador James W. Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany" gave the American people the first truthful account of the inside workings of the Kaiser's war machine and the astounding array of facts that led up to the entry of the United States into the great war, so does Herbert Brennon's wonderful eight-reel production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," which comes to Tally's Broadway Monday, present another historical document, a true story of the disruption of the Russian empire and overthrow of the Czar. In "The Fall of the Romanoffs," as in "My Four Years in Germany," many of the facts presented are not generally known, and it is the truthful depiction of these facts wherein lies the great strength of these two wonderful productions. Monk Iliodor, former confessor and confidant of Rasputin, assisted Mr. Brennon in the production of this feature and appears himself in it. No writer of fiction has ever penned a more romantic story than this true story of Rasputin, the illiterate, drunken, peasant sled driver, who by trickery, luck and unscrupulous craftiness rises to court adviser and actual power behind the throne.

Grauman's.

Douglas Fairbanks, with all his vim, vigor and athletic proclivities, will be introduced on the screen at Grauman's tomorrow in his most recent Artcraft photoplay, "Bound in Morocco," in which he is cast as an American youth who inconveniently finds himself on the Sahara Desert, and on the other hand, in the midst of a country whose foreign beauty is most appealing to his enthusiastic American mind. The picturesque country of Algiers, where the desert and its natives have often been the

FIGHTING VIOLINIST.

WHEN VIENNA IS BOMBED SPALDING WILL PLAY.

F. H. La Guardia, Congressman of the Fourteenth District, New York, and a captain in the aviation service, United States Army, is today one of the most prominent figures in political and military circles, not only in his own country, but also in Italy, where his stirring speeches on the war, its aim, needs, and meaning, have been certainly a most vibrant and potent impetus and stimulation to the Italian people. He has interpreted America to them as perhaps no one has ever done before, and drives home those truths which are ventured very rarely by orators.

In his work he has been ably assisted by the great American violinist, Albert Spalding, now a first lieutenant in the aviation service.

It took a world war to get a Congressman and a world renowned fiddler working together, but the great melting pot which took the best that political and artistic America could give away from their prominent and important life's work, harmonized, orchestrated and harnessed them in Uncle Sam's chariot in the vital and chief pursuit of today—winning the war.

Spalding, when asked if he ever had a chance to keep up his music, replied: "Not much. You cannot do two things, and do them properly at the same time. At the present moment there is more music for me in the factories gloriously grinding out planes and motors than in a symphony of Beethoven. And today I would rather run on an office-boy's errand for my country and do it as well as I can, if it's to serve my country, than successfully to play a Bach Chaconne, and I would rather hear a well-directed battery of American guns, blasting the road of peace and victorious liberty than the combined applause of 10,000 audiences.

"And I want you to believe that the artist in me is not asleep in telling you these things. For it is my conviction that art has as much at stake in this war as democracy. Art depends as much on the freedom of individual thought and action as democracy. How then, could it hope to endure and prosper in the face of a German peace? The triumph and vindication of a human machinery and the crushing out of individualism? With a German peace, we would have seen a world-wide spreading of that foul and insidious disease which has already sapped the life and spirit of what was once Teuton's art, now striving to complete its blight on the rest of us.

"The hand that points the destructive guns on Rheims, and gloats over the ruins of a rare Venice, is not likely to hesitate to turn the voices of poets and musicians to the task of making hymns of hate for the kultur, or to be used as propapandists for her espionage system."

Recently the Congressman and his aide visited the Italian front to examine and study the methods of aviation as practiced there. They were entertained at dinner by King Victor Emanual, and also by Generalissimo Diaz, together with members of the Italian General Staff. The Generalissimo inquired of Spalding if he was a pilot.

"Unfortunately no, your excellency," said the violinist.

"No, his services are utilized in the service of supplies for which he is better fitted as a language officer because of his knowledge of French and Italian, and his duties are more valuable in that capacity than to fly," added La Guardia.

"Is that it?" said the general. "Why, then I will tell you what we will do. When one of our triplanes bombs Vienna we will put Spalding in the observer's seat and he can play the American and Italian national anthems on his violin."

NAVAL QUARTETTE WINS PLAUDITS.

Of considerable recent interest is the newly-formed Naval Reserve Quartette, which, in their appearances at the Allied War Exposition and at Grauman's, where a week's engagement was played, have been commended for their rendition of patriotic, popular and naval numbers. The four is made up of ex-performers on the vaudeville or legitimate stage, comprising Jack Holden, Bert Gutterman, Irving Lippner and Leonard Van Berg. The former was one of the first Americans to go to Europe with American songs and ballroom dances some years ago.

Gutterman is well known in eastern vaudeville for his Jewish impersonations, and Lippner as a master of the banjo. Van Berg has a large circle of Los Angeles friends through his connection with the Melody Shop here on South Broadway, which he owned for two years. He and Holden are known at the Naval Training Station as the "Caruso and McCormack" of the navy.

CHRONOLOGY IN ART.

Gift to Philadelphia Said to Embody History of Painting Covering Long Period.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 2.—The $4,500,000 art collection bequeathed by John G. Johnson to this city is now safely stored in a fireproof warehouse. Mr. Johnson was a lawyer of international fame, and his hobby was buying pictures. He was well known abroad as an art expert. The Johnson collection includes about 1600 paintings.

In bequeathing his collection to Philadelphia, Mr. Johnson stipulated that the treasures should be kept on exhibition in his home and that the city should annually appropriate money to care for them. It was decided that a collection of such value should be contained in a fireproof gallery, and the residence is now being altered with this object in view.

It is said that outside of the British National Gallery there is perhaps no collection of classic paintings that is so chronologically complete as is that accumulated by Mr. Johnson, and it is certain that there is nowhere any private gallery to be compared with these carefully-selected exemplars of Italian, Flemish, French, Dutch, German, Spanish and English schools of art. Mr. Johnson's collection is practically an embodied history of painting for the long period which it includes.

New Dinnerware From France and England

Open stock patterns we already carry are supplemented and new open stock patterns are introduced in new dinnerware arrivals from France and England.

We advocate the open stock idea, because it enables you to buy just those pieces that particularly meet your requirements.

You can select a full dinner set for as few or as many people as you wish. Or you can select just the essential pieces for a luncheon set, a breakfast set, an ice cream set, a salad set, a fish set, or for any other service you may elect—and then you can enlarge the service at a later date.

The selection of patterns is especially complete now, including the very inexpensive, the moderate in price and the ultra fine.

Feel free to come and see the new patterns whether you contemplate buying now or not.

The illustration shows the "Sheridan" pattern—a very artistic new design entirely exclusive with us.

Pantages.

"An Arabian Night," an opera comique featuring the well-known funsters, John A. Crawford, and Gus Erdman, together with a company of ten beautiful girls, will head the coming week's bill at Pantages. This act is the latest production of George Choos, and is described as being a concoction of mirth and melody. Sully, Rogers and Sully, three jolly sailors, will stage their comic oddity called "In the Good Ship Itistolaugh." The Misses Parker, two American girls, with "mirrored" voices, will render a series of songs in their own inimitable manner. Creighton, Belmont and Creighton have a novelty comic skit which they call "The Muddletown Minstrels in Rehearsals." Hallen and Hunter, songsters, will render a number of the latest hits, featuring their own success, "Kaiser Bill, You've Got a Lot to Answer For." Davy Jamieson will dispense mirth, "As You Like It."

Hippodrome.

It is not essential to have comedy all mixed up in a vaudeville act to make good entertainment. This is proven by the Six Proveanies, who offer one of the most sensational bicycle acts that has ever been seen on the vaudeville circuit. This will come to the Hippodrome beginning tomorrow matinee. This is a clever group of wheeling men and girls.

Jimmy Dunn has an inexhaustible supply of good stories and will tell a few jokes for your benefit. As a mimic he has no equal. Newcomers in vaudeville are Gray and Jackson, but "comers" in the best meaning of the word. They have a lot of laughs tied up in their skit. Everything in the line of Roman ring tricks are performed by the Peerless Potters. Just listen to Christopher and Walton in their barber story. The Ambler Bros. display ease and grace in their act. A conglomeration of comedy singing and darktown dancing is presented by Two Southerners. The usual films are shown.

HIS DEFINITION OF THE WORD SLACKER.

"Yes, I will tell you all about the production of 'Missing,' and will tell it gladly," said J. Stuart Blackton in an interview recently. "It is a wonderful thing to be able to work on a story of current interest, of all-absorbing interest, like a war story, and that from the masterly hand of Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

"Perhaps you did not know that I was born in England. Yes, I was, but I am an American now, all right enough. I should have regarded it no less than a catastrophe to have missed the privilege of giving 'Missing' its screen interpetation. Of all the work in my long career, I regard it the most important. It has a strong, wholesome love story, but the part that thrills one most is the expose of the slacker."

"Slacker?"

"Yes, everybody who is selfish and greedy and fails to serve in every way the public good is a slacker. I think the delightful part of the story is the happiness that comes out of despair and the agony that follows the treachery and self-seeking. 'Missing' is a novel, but the very incidents it recounts are taking place every day. No, nothing pays now but patriotism of the highest order, and it sort of makes an old chap feel as if he were doing his 'bit' to send out such a production."

TRIANGLE GETS CROSS.

Wellington Cross, favorably known for his successes in musical comedies and vaudeville, has been engaged by Triangle to appear in pictures. He has already begun work at the Culver City studios as the the featured player in "Gray Parasol," by Fred Jackson, Lawrence Windom will direct.

MOTION PICTURE FOLK WILL GIVE A BALL.

When the motion-picture people stage an event they do it with a maximum of dash and splendor, and all their past efforts appear to be eclipsed in the preparations being made for the motion-picture masked ball to be given in the Shrine Auditorium next Saturday night, August 17.

The interior of the auditorium is to be entirely transformed, not only regarding the decorations, but architecturally as well. A horseshoe of boxes, each making a background for one or more of the foremost celebrities in filmland, and promising to emulate in picturesque effect the famous gold horseshoe of the Metropolitan Operahouse, is now being constructed. Each box will be decorated with individual effect, in many instances so as strikingly to offset the costumes of those who occupy it. Each studio has contributed the assistance of its art department to the Motion-picture War Service Association to make the auditorium into a ballroom of unrivalled beauty.

Two orchestras will be present, one to provide the music for the dancing, the other composed of forty-eight pieces, to play during the surprise features of the night's entertainment and to render symphony numbers. The nature of these surprises is to be kept secret until they develop during the progress of the ball.

The purpose of the ball is to raise funds for the Motion-picture War Service Association, for use in financing the activities of that body in its important work. Committees of motion-picture stars and their friends have taken charge of the work of selling the tickets for $3 each, and of securing advertisements for the elaborate souvenir programme book. The book is to contain the photographs of the most prominent persons in the industry, brief and witty sketches of them.

Everyone at the ball is to wear a mask and the majority will appear in costume. Because of the wealth of material available to them, the dancers are to be most beautifully costumed.

Just So.

"OLD THEMES FOR NEW," OR "HOW DO THEY DO IT?"

BY THEODORE P. TAYLOR.

IT IS just another instance of the great American virtue, persistency, that writers keep on attempting to please the flicker corporations in the face of the "Hints to Scenarioists" and the "What the Producing Companies Want" articles that appear from time to time in various journals.

At the same time, that other virtue, consistency, is conspicuous on the part of the scenario departments themselves, because of its absence.

These cheerful (shall we dub them "lyre?") birds continually warble in print about the scarcity of new ideas in the stuff submitted for their approval. Then in their own "adapting" they "squads-right-about" and make use of the same dear old ideas the Egyptians loved to chisel on their tombs to amuse the dead ones of those days.

"We wish," say the official script constructors through the magazine columns, "that some of these budding authors would send us a few scenarios occasionally. We fine-comb the universe for original material, and even then staff writers have to turn out our stuff because outsiders send in themes that the old Roman fans used to hiss at in the Colosseum when Hector was a pup.

"It's a fact that every third script that comes in the morning mail dishes up 'The Necklace' in camouflaged form. Of course," the article usually adds kindly, "the authors don't realize they're cribbing classics, but that doesn't make things any better."

That's their usual line of chatter, if you've noticed. If it's not "The Necklace" it's something else of De Maupassant's. Just why the embryo flicker authors always pick on him is not vouchsafed. Probably "The Necklace" is a favorite because the public is not expected to remember much more about it than that it's something Frenchy and about a young married couple. The studio birds are wise at that. "The Necklace" stands in the same relation to short tories that the Bible does to literature—each is the most admired and the least read of its class. Just as a matter of information, the theme is briefly this:

A poor but promising young woman loses a borrowed necklace which is reputed to be worth a fortune. Her career is thereupon ruined. Later it is disclosed that the supposed diamonds were only paste.

If you admire O. Henry, you know "Cherchez la Femme," that whimsical tale of the two newspaper reporters whose omniscience is severely jolted when they try to run "the eternal feminine" to earth on one of the local robbery mysteries. After paying a fabulous sum for a gilded plaster image in the belief that it is made of stolen gold, they finally discover the missing $10,000 in government bonds mending some cracked wallpaper at the little home of the woman in the case.

As it stands, that story is good for about two reels without padding. Also as it stands, there is no possible way of closing the picture from the producer's standpoint. Unless you have some love interest, how can you manage the fond clinch and "iris-in" that invariably precedes the word "Finis?"

Perhaps some of us would have foregone the doubtful pleasure of watching another fellow make love to a pretty girl for just once in order to have our O. Henry unadulterated. No m.p. "adapter" pretends to observe the usages of polite society, however. You'll not catch him asking the film fan if he takes one or three lumps of romance with his story. No, he dumps half-a-dozen cubes of sugary sentiment in, with careless defiance of Mr. Hoover's edict in re sweets—and if you don't like the result, stay at home and entertain the Victrola.

It may be only a coincidence that seismic disturbances were felt at the time a certain well-known and repected film corporation started to "adapt" O. Henry's "Cherchez la Femme." If, however, it was the great Sydney Porter turning in his grave—no wonder!

For after the Honorable Director said "Our female star must have a leading role in this production."

And after the Exalted High Manager had said, "Our features must be five reels in length."

The idea hounds, sometimes known as staff writers, thus unleashed, picked up their scent without a moment's hesitation and loped gracefully into action.

Some months elapse.

The picture has been shown, and I have seen it.

Furthermore I liked it—as a photoplay.

I didn't care much for it as an O. Henry story, however, although the only changes that had been made were on title, characters and plot. Still it was quite amusing to note the theme with which the studio surgeons had trepanned the original. It was exactly this:

A poor but promising young woman loses a borrowed necklace which is reputed to be worth a fortune. Her career is thereupon ruined. Later it is disclosed that the supposed diamonds were only paste.

(Having thus dramatically made use of the movie cutback, we will register a harsh, grating ha-ha, and fadeout.)

MEXICAN BANDITS ALMOST KIDNAP HER.

While the Dustin Farnum Company was filming Zane Grey's "The Light of Western Skies" in Arizona, the mouse-like Winifred Kingston, Farnum's leading woman, came near furnishing an obituary notice for the press.

The exigencies of the play demanded that Miss Kingston was to be captured by the bold, bad captain of a gang of Mexican bandits, and in this case the Mexicans were real bandits—the riff-raff of the border. Mr. Farnum says that in fact, he never saw a choicer lot of scuffle-hunters, swash-bucklers, rustlers, thieves, cut-throats and stage robbers in all his western experience.

The bandit king, it was soon discovered, was casting glances of flame at the violet-eyed little woman, who was to be his prize in the picture, and, as the international line was only a few miles away, the cowboys who were to perform the rescue act slipped a few real bullets into their left hand gats to be ready in case the Mexicans attempted to pull off a sure enough kidnaping.

Whether Miss Kingston knew about all this or not, she stood pat and went through the rough work like a thoroughbred. After the capture of the girl, the bandits made camp on the banks of a mountain stream and tied the young lady to a tree. Then the excitement started. The cowboys attacked at full gallop and the shooting was tremendous. At its heigth, Two-Gun Watkins lost all discretion and busted loose into the scenery with sure-nuff lead, one bullet whizzing so near the captured girl that it fanned her scalp lock.

And now does Two-Gun Watkins appear in any more shooting scenes? He does not. After pulling that bit of cowboy realism Two-Gun is left at the wickyup to curry the goats.

COLONIZING MEXICO.

Carranza General in North Turns from Military to Reconstructive Efforts.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

JUAREZ, Aug. 5.—Gen. Francisco Murguia, commander of the north, has forsaken the ways of war for more peaceful pursuits. While he has not relinquished his command of the northeastern military zone, Gen. Murguia is devoting practically all of his time and attention to reconstructive work in Northern Mexico.

In addition to the agricultural colonies he has established at Molinar and Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, he has plans for opening large tracts of land which were confiscated from land holders during the revolution and colonizing on these tracts with Mexicans from the crowded cities of the south and with Mexican laborers who have been forced to go to the United States to seek employment.

When the constitutional movement led by Carranza succeeded, the work of the Madero revolution, which had been left unfinished, was resumed. Confiscation decrees were issued against Gen. Luis Terrazas and many other large land holders in the north. These lands have been under the control of the government since they were seized by the confiscation decree issued by Francisco Villa while he was commander of the north under Carranza. They are well adapted to cattle grazing, irrigation farming where water is available and in many places cutting high-grade timber.

It is these lands that Gen. Murguia plans to colonize and his experimental colony at Molinar, north of Chihuahua city, is receiving practically all his attention at present. He visits it frequently and assists the colonists.

Some Santa Barbara society folk.

Little Miss Rock is mounted on "Uhlan," the holder of the world's trotting record of 1:58, who is owned by C. K. G. Billings. Miss Benedict, who is the daughter of Mrs. C. A. Benedict of St. Louis and New York, is to marry Charles M. Marvin of New York. The engagement was announced recently by Mrs. John Patin of Santa Barbara, Miss Benedict's grandmother, at whose home she has been staying. A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8.

Marcella dear:

We are all so glad to hear you are better and returning home again soon. They are showing the new fall hats already, cherie, and giving away all the summer finery for next to nothing, so see what you are missing.

Mrs. Ervin S. Armstrong is going to New York with her three beautiful babies early next week, to join her once golf-champion hubby, who has transformed himself into a munitions worker over there. Mrs. Armstrong has been devotedly helping out at the Enlisted Men's Club here—Thursday is her day and the last two have been desperately strenuous on account of the parades that brought so many of the men to town. Mrs. Armstrong expects to stay all the winter in Atlantic City with the children and is making no plans beyond that. Sidney Walles is also going East to join Mr. Armstrong in the munitions work, but Mrs. Sidney Walles will not follow for another month or so, and will remain at Santa Monica with her little girl.

The G. Allan Hancocks, with Miss Rose Mullen, are up at their lovely summer home, at Cupertino in Santa Clara county, and are happily entertaining relays of friends each week. It is a very lovely place, built by the Pullmans of Pullman car fame, replete with every luxury, outside and in. Miss Marie Mullen, who, as you know is the guiding genius of Mullen & Bluett's and one of the best business women in town, is enjoying a well-earned rest up there, with her sister and family.

Of course one of the events of the week is the advent of an heir to Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Maier. Eddie Maier feels rather like royalty these days. The event establishes the dynasty, don't you know, and secures the entail. Popular congratulations are raining upon them thick and fast and some sort of celebration seems to be in order.

William Banning has a merry yachting party over at Catalina for a couple of weeks with two Katherines on board—Katherine Banning and Katherine Mellus. From all accounts they are having a wonderful time.

Did you know that Norwood Howard had joined the navy and is down at San Pedro since Wednesday, having a dubious time of it in the detention camp and not at all sure he really likes vaccination and inoculation, but heroically resigned in the good cause? Arthur Howard has gone to France—and that makes four of the boys in the service. Neil Pendleton is also joining the naval aviation. Both Norwood and Neil will probably restore their svelte contours under the drastic naval training.

Lieut. Stanley Tolley, Jr., has also left for France. His fiancee decided against a war wedding and so the engagement was not announced. Roger Lapham, another of our golf champions, has just gone to France as a lieutenant; and Robin Hayne is in the aviation over there, but the fact has not prevented Mrs. Hayne going on with those divorce proceedings.

That Enlisted Men's Club at Trinity Auditorium has really reached wondrous dimensions. Just think of, those once-time society butterflies of ours served 700 meals on Wednesday and stood behind a cafeteria counter for three and four hours at a stretch. Mrs. Hugh Stewart has gone away, so Mrs. I. B. Newton took her day and it proved the busiest they have ever had. That regal woman, Mrs. Michael Connell, has performed miracles, for she has in some mysterious way acquired the furniture for a handsome lounge-room, a barber's parlor, shower baths, a gymnasium, a new dining-room, and an immense kitchen and the only paid help is the Chinese cook, Mrs. Newhall's famous Louie, who simply adores being overwhelmed, and has known all the society ladies from girlhood and entirely approves their new vocations as adequate kitchen help. The Van Nuys chef cooks all their meat for them, and it is one little lady's duty to go down and fetch it in her machine every day. Thus if you see little Mrs. Alfred Wright driving gingerly across Broadway somewhere about 5 p.m. you may know she has her car laden with steaming meats de luxe and great cans full of luscious gravies. Mondays are in charge of Mrs. Anne Simpson; Tuesdays, Mrs. Homer Laughlin; Wednesdays, Mrs. I. B. Newton; Thursdays, Mrs. Ervin Armstrong; Fridays, Mrs. Bobbie Hook; Saturdays, Mrs. Dan Murphy, and Sundays, Mrs. Michael Connell.

Had lunch at the Belgian relief headquarters on Thursday and found Mrs. John Lynch ensconced while Mrs. Willoughby Rodman is away. Mrs. Lynch, just back from a recuperative week-end at Mt. Wilson, is trying to break all records filling the treasury, aided and abetted by Mrs. John Trainer, who does some alarming book-keeping. Saw Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Marble lunching with the newest Belgian fairy godfather, a Mr. Mellen, who has recklessly offered to do anything needed and got himself and his machine sent off on a dozen errands right away—and went right on smiling. So they let him have half a spoonful more sugar in his iced tea as a reward of virtue. L. T. Bradford looked in with some friends and stood them a riotus lunch which included beef loaf and hot muffins, salad and peach tart, and generously tipped the society waitress a dollar for the Belgians into the bargain.

Lots of the Belgian relief brigade are out of town, but there are plenty of willing deputies to take their places. Mrs. W. C. Marble has gone to Alamitos Bay, Mrs. Irvin Muma to La Jolla, Mrs. Arthur Bent is still in New York, Mrs. Willis Booth at Berkeley, Mrs. P. H. Booth in Chicago, and Mrs. Trainer is just waiting for the Norman Macbeths to give up the house at Hermosa Beach to move into it. But in the meantime a valiant band under the captaincy of Mrs. Geoffrey O'Connell are doing a roaring trade all day and every day out at Exposition Park—fancy what it means to take $315 in one day for nickel ice creams, which is what they achieved on Wednesday. And this weather is murderous on the ice-cream trade. It yearns to run all over the park.

It really is one of the wonders of the war—seeing these charming women pitch in and do all sorts of hard menial work in hot kitchens and hot tents, waiting upon hundreds of people with the utmost good humor until they are ready to drop. They will never be able to go back to leisurely pleasure-hunting again—how far away those days seem when we used to sit around and watch golf tournaments and think up luxurious parties for every day in the week.

Yours energetically,

BETTY.

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

Submarine Base Ball.

The event of the week will be the ball to be given at Hotel Virginia in honor of the Submarine Base on next Wednesday evening. Mrs. Rodman Robson and a bevy of Long Beach society matrons will chaperone all the young girls who will be invited to give 650 men from the Submarine Base their exclusive attention. At the Wednesday and Saturday dances the men have often found a scarcity of partners, complicated by just a bit of jealousy on the part of civilian beaux. So on this one evening the sailors will have first call on the maidens for dancing partners—and there certainly wont be any shortage of navy men for the occasion. The Submarine Base Jazz Band as well as the Virginia orchestra will be on hand to insure continuous music. Capt. C. Poundstone and officers of his staff will be the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Robson.

There will be dancing in the ballroom, the grand salon and the tennis courts, a gala occasion de luxe for which any number of Los Angeles people are going down.

For the Harbor Men.

The supper dance given at the home of Mrs. Jeanette Lonavon, No. 419 Loraine boulevard, Windsor Square, for men from the naval training station at the harbor, on Saturday evening by Miss Katherine Donavon, Mrs. Henry T. Gage, Miss Fanette Gage, the Misses Rosalie and Mary Dockweiler, and Miss Jeanette Prendegast, proved a delightful affair.

These parties in which several Los Angeles girls collaborate to entertain various contingents of young men from the local cantonments are proving a huge success. One given earlier in the week at the home of Mrs. J. W. Trueworthy by fifteen girls for the men from the Arcadia balloon school was such an unqualified success that another is already in the offing.

Harry M. Rogers Engaged.

Mrs. C. W. Rogers of No. 216 West Adams street gave an announcement luncheon party on Thursday to inform her friends of the engagement of her son, Harry M. Rogers, the well-known tennis player, to Miss Florence Park of Michigan.

Harry Rogers is in Washington engaged upon work with the ordnance department. Miss Park, his fiance, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Park of Michigan. The young people expect to be married in the fall.

Harry Rogers is very well known here, having graduated from the Los Angeles High School and the University of California, where he has always shone in athletic circles. At the luncheon on Thursday all the guests wrote words of sophisticated advice in a specially prepared gift book, which will be sent to young Rogers in Washington for his digestion.

Lieut. Campbell.

Lieut. Clarence P. Campbell, formerly professor of engineering at Stanford and Nevada universities, the son of Mrs. Selina Campbell-Webb, of No. 851 South Wilton place, arrived home for a brief furlough on July 5 to bid farewell to his family before leaving for France. "I Love it; I Love it; and who shall dare to chide me for loving the Old Arm Chair"

Of all the influences that enter into our daily lives, administering to our physical comfort, and thereby molding our thoughts, and shaping our destinies, there is perhaps none so intimate, none so subtle, as the old arm chair.

Unconsciously we grow to love it and cherish it, as day after day and year after year, fond memories and life's romances are conjured up in its history.

And eventually we pass it down to our children and our children's children—an heirloom, priceless in sentiment and in the ancestral associations that cling to it.

And now, above all times when history is in the making, when lives are being sacrificed that our homes may be protected, and when home influences are so essential to the morale of the nation, sentiments that time can never efface are being written into the life of "the old arm chair" in your home.

Surely the arm chair—your own chair—should be selected with thought and care.

The "California" shows many wonderful chairs, including famous reproductions, the originals of which are to be found only in national museums.

And other splendid chairs are shown in almost every style conceivable, priced from a very few dollars up to as high as one may care to go.

We shall appreciate your coming to see these chairs and making value comparisons. We want you to know and feel that you are always cordially welcome here to look, and that you will not be importuned to buy.

We're puzzled!

—We can't find words to tell about the new hats as they ought to be described!—
—The writer is inclined to believe that there are no words that quite suit these hats—even the artist says that it is next to impossible for her to tell the story——And so this advertisement resolves itself into an invitation to come see the hats themselves!—You'll understand instantly why we hesitate to offer a description!
—The window showing will interest you!

TUSTIN.

Miss Ada Squires was hostess at a farewell party given in honor of her brother, Edward Squires, prior to his departure for Camp Fremont with the draft contingent. Other honored guests were two cousins of Miss Squires, Miss Gertrude Coutts and Mrs. Walter Vasseur of Virginia, house guests at the Squire home. Patriotism was the dominant note in the decorations and refreshments were served with similar patriotic suggestions. Prizes were won in guessing games by Miss Jessie Pollard and James Utt. The guests were Misses Beulah White, Thelma Nordstrom, Zena Leck, Jennie Pollard, Mildred and Blanche Fewell, Lois Morgan, Elizabeth Manghan, Addie Trickey, Lillian Martin, Gertrude Coutts and Ada Squires; Albert Thorman, James Utt, Scott Prather, Millard Foster, George Matthews, Fred Fitchen, Albert Schroeder, Harvey Gulick, Leo Allison, Norris Allen, Eddy and Harden Squires.

Saunbys, who is an experienced graduate nurse, and who has recently been assistant superintendent of the Toronto, Canada, Municipal Free Hospital, will be in charge of the station. She is enthusiastic in her endeavor to interest Tustin young women in becoming student nurses.

Mrs. A. D. Turner opened her beautiful country home on Newport road on Wednesday afternoon for the entertainment of the women of the Presbyterian Berean class. The trip into the country was made by automobile and was an enjoyable addition to the afternoon's pleasure and usefulness. Social chat mingled with the more serious business of sewing and knitting. Delicious Delaware grapes from the hostess' own vines and dainty cakes and cooling ices were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith of the famous Irvine fruit ranch have returned from a delightful two weeks' trip to Yosemite Valley. Mr. Smith has not taken a vacation for six years, hence this wonderful journey was more than ordinarily enjoyed.

Miss Una Fowler, formerly a successful teacher of English in the Santa Ana High School, and who was extremely popular both in Santa Ana and Tustin, has recently been the house guest of Miss Elizbeth Kenyon at her Tustin home. Miss Fowler is now teaching in the Los Angeles schools.

OXNARD.

Fr. Truxaw. The ceremony was attended by the parents and immediate relatives of the bride and groom. Miss Hulda Wucherpfennig was bridesmaid, and S. M. Salkeld, brother of the bride, the best man. A wedding breakfast served at the Maulhardt country home followed the ceremony. The bridal couple will visit the Yosemite and other points of interest in the State by auto, and will then reside in this county.

Miss A. M. Duperu and daughters, the Misses Mabel and Celine, who have been much-feted guests of the Driffils for the past two weeks, left this week for Coronado, and from there will return to their home in Crockett.

Mrs. J. A. Driffill and Mrs. J. L. Milligan presided at the buffet lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hunt and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hunt, all of Santa Barbara, spent the week at the R. O. Hunt ranch in the Conejo.

Bursts Into Bloom

Monday

ALL the rich and gorgeous shades that grow, and all the tender rainbow tints as well, are beautifully blent in the cool, soft, lovely petals of these dahlia flowers!

The co-operative courtesies of "THE FLOWER GARDENS" at 39th and Flower streets have helped us to make this Summer's Dahlia Show far more magnificent, infinitely more interesting, than any we have ever conducted before.

Many hundreds of varieties will be exhibited during the course of the Show—scores of new blossoms every day! You'll see glorious specimens of all familiar kinds of dahlias and many entirely original and exclusive hybrids as well.

You are most cordially welcome to come and enjoy this Carnival of Color! — starting tomorrow morning, August 12, on the Main Floor of our South Building.

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL.

Gen. Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, is one of the sons of Prof. Francis A. March, eminent philologist of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa. He graduated at Lafayette in 1884 and at West Point in 1888. He made a brilliant record in the Philippines, was a member of our General Staff from 1903 to 1907, and was attached as a military observer to the Japanese army in the Russo-Japanese War. Gen. March is very highly esteemed, not only by our own army, but by French and British officers who became acquainted with him during his service under Gen. Pershing in France. He now holds the rank of full general, as does Pershing, while Gen. Tasker Bliss, who is our representative in the Allied Council, is also a full general by brevet.

Earning $3 a day as a laborer in the shipyards of the Luders Marine Construction Company, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, preacher, author and scholar, is spending his vacation in the service of the government. His soft hands, concealed in a pair of woolen gloves and a plank heaved across his shoulders, Rabbi Wise works ten hours a day at this strenuous form of labor.

Vice-Admiral William S. Sims, now in command of the American destroyer flotilla in European waters, has long been known as one of the best equipped and most resourceful of our naval officers. He was born in Canada sixty years ago and graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis at the age of twenty-two. Since then he has held a great number of important commands. For many years he has worked unceasingly to raise the standards of gunnery in the American navy. It was in 1910 he made, in England, his famous prediction, abundantly fulfilled in the past twelvemonth: "If the time ever comes when the British empire is seriously menaced by an external enemy, it is my opinion that you may count upon every man, every dollar, and every drop of blood of your kindred across the sea."

The late Miss Fay Kellogg of Brooklyn was an architect, woman suffrage advocate, athlete, and owner and manager of a Long Island farm. The Brooklyn Standard Union believes her to have been "the ablest female architect in America." Miss Kellogg's health gave way while she was supervising the construction of some buildings at Camp Gordon, Georgia.

Roger A. Pryor, a penniless brigadier-general of the Confederate army, came to New York City fifty-three years ago to make his way in a new and strange land. He made his way successfully, at last reaching the Supreme Court. He recently celebrated his ninetieth birthday at his home at Setauket, L. I., surrounded by his family and relatives, and received many telegrams of congratulation from men who had fought with him and against him in the Civil War, as well as from the sons of men who belonged to both sides.

Matt Crosby of Ocate, N. M., has the distinction of being the oldest cowboy in active service in the United States. He recently celebrated the ninety-first anniversary of his birth by breaking a wild young horse just off the range. On the same day he roped and tied a 2-year-old steer in a little more than four minutes.

Mrs. Mary Hasenstaub of Mewry, Blair county, Pa., who is in her one hundredth year, is the purchaser of a $100 Liberty Bond. She is a native of Germany, and cannot speak English. She conversed with the solicitor through one of her daughters, the youngest of whom is aged 73. She promised after receiving the money from the sale of her farm that she would purchase additional Liberty Bonds.

Hop Long, proprietor of a celestial laundry in Springfield, Ill., wants the world to know "a man from that place is serving in the army." That's why he hung an eight by eight-foot service flag in front of his establishment. The lone star represents Long Wing, the first and only Chinese to go in the army from Springfield.

Pershing, (z) unable to fight effectively because it was so large that it got in its own way, our troops did fairly well yesterday.—[New York Post.

Insects and Aviation.

According to Lieut. Depret-Bixio of the French army, who is a naturalist as well as a flying man, many insects follow captive balloons in their ascent. He has seen flies go as high as 2790 feet after which they die. Grasshoppers cling to the basket of the balloon until the air becomes too rarified for them, when they let go and fall. He says the swallows have a glorious time catching these insects.—[Scientific American.

SONGS OF TRENCHES.

Favorites of British Soldiers on the Firing Line.

(Many new songs have been sung by soldiers since the days of "Tipperary." Some of these are included in "Hunting the Hun," by Capt. James Belton and Lieut. E. G. Odell, just published by D. Appleton & Co.)

When the singing soldiers of the first British expeditionary force marched to the slaughter at Mons in the fall of 1914 singing "Tipperary" they established a precedent which the troops from all parts of the British empire have maintained. The Canadians were quick to learn the value of songs to fighting men, and some of the many they have given voice to in Flanders are here set down. Most of the parodies were acquired from that redoubtable soldier, Tommy Atkins. Some of them are the invention of Canadian soldier-minstrels.

When the first Canadian division landed in France they marched to Armentieres singing, to the tune of "Marching Through Georgia:"

Hurrah, hurrah, we'll get you, Kaiser Bill;
Hurrah, hurrah, your cup of joy we'll spill;
The day that you have toasted will be hell let loose when we All go marching through Germany.

Moving west from Fleurbaix to Ypres they sang to the air of "Good-by, My Bluebird," as they marched:

Good-by, old Germany, farewell to you,
You'll have no Kaiser when the war is through;
You'll have no army, no shot and shell,
Good-by, old Germany—and go to—

There they switched—to please the padre—and chorused gleefully:

You're in the army now,
You're in the army now,
You son of a gun, you'll never be done,
You're in the army now.

What happened to the first Canadian division at Ypres during the two weeks following the first gas attack made by the Germans (April 15-22,) is an old and glorious story in the annals of Canadian bravery. The Highland brigade went into the blood-drenched salient to the lilt of:

Sing a song of bonny Scotland.

They sang little during the slaughter-pregnant, fight-full days and nights which followed, but at the first halt following their departure from that section of the line May 5-15,) one brave heart sang:

Far, far from Ypres, I want to be,
Where German snipers cannot get me;
Think of me crouching, where the shells shriek,
Praying for sergeant to sing me to sleep.

During the fierce fighting at Festubert, towards the end of that month, they had learned the trench classic (sung mock seriously:)

I want to go home, I want to go home,
The bullets they rattle, the cannon they roar;
I don't want to go up any more.
Take me over the seas,
Where the Alleman's cannot get me,
Oh, my, I don't want to die,
I want to go home.

About that time they realized that there was little good in the jam issued to the troops in the field, so they joined in with the soldiers of the imperial army when those cheery fellows sang:

Tickler's jam, Tickler's jam,
How I love old Tickler's jam;
Sent from England in one-pound pots,
Packed it is in ten-ton lots;
Every night when I'm asleep
I'm dreaming that I am
Forcing my way through the Dardanelles,
With a pot of Tickler's jam.

Next month they dared to carol (from the "Duck's Bill" salient at Givenchy) with "Fritz" only forty yards away:

Keep your head down, Alleman', keep your head down, Alleman',
Last night, in the pale moonlight I saw you, I saw you;
Going reconnoitering on a cold winter's night,
  Aw Gawblimey, ain't it cold?
When we meet with Fritzy there'll be a fight,
  Aw Gawblimey, ain't it cold?
  Pity the poor old soldier,
  Pity the poor young soldier,
  Pity the poor old soldier,
  Standing in the rain and the cold.

Burying stiff 'uns on a cold winter's night,
  Aw Gawblimey, ain't it cold?
When the big 'un hit 'em, don't they look a sight,
  Aw Gawblimey, ain't it cold?
  Pity the poor old soldier,
  Pity the poor young soldier,
  Pity the poor old soldier,
  Standing in the rain and the cold.

Going back to Blighty on a cold winter's night,
  Aw Gawblimey, ain't it cold?
When we get to Blighty, then we'll be all right,
  Aw Gawblimey, ain't it cold?
  Pity the poor old soldier,
  Pity the poor young soldier,
  Pity the poor old soldier,
  Standing in the rain and the cold.

The popularity of "My Little Gray Home in the West" brought to birth a dismal parody entitled "My Little Wet Home in the Trench," and many other popular songs have had striking parodies composed on them by the singing Britishers in Flanders.

Those songs have saved many a man from nervous exhaustion, they have cheered the wounded, they have been heard by the dying wherever the British army has grappled the foe, and they have inspired the mildest mannered man with courage abnormal.

Who would not go "over the top" with men who could sing "I Want to Go Home" as they crouched for a charge across No Man's Land. Who would not fight like knights of old when comrades could sing in face of the foe, "Keep your head down, Alleman'."

America's sons in Flanders will fight all the better when they learn the songs which Britain's sons have sung from Ypres to Gallipoli, in Macedonia and Mesopotamia, India and Egypt; on sinking transports at sea, and in shell-torn trenches on land.

He who sings well will fight well. Perhaps the songs of Uncle Sam's soldiers will be most heard of when the Allies make their final drive, but the simple songs and parodies of the British, Canadian, Australian, New Zealand, and South African soldier have re-echoed round the world since "Tipperary" took fearless men to heroes' graves in 1914.—[From "Hunting the Hun," by James Belton and E. RED CROSS AFFAIRS

Money to Red Cross.

A check for $208.06 was sent by La Fiesta Camp, No. 63, Woodmen of the World, to the Los Angeles chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday as the gross proceeds of a benefit given on June 10. The expenses of the benefit were all paid by La Fiesta Camp.

War Relief Luncheon.

A luncheon for war relief will be given at the rooms of the British Ambulance Society in the Westminster Hotel next Tuesday noon. The luncheon will be in charge of Mrs. L. Bennet, mother of Enid Bennet, film star, assisted by Red Cross young women. The programme is being arranged by Mrs. Evelyn Robinson, and will include several musical and vaudeville numbers.

Request is made by the management of the Red Cross Adobe Inn and branch shop for the loan of a small roll top desk and several showcases. The Adobe Inn, which is located at West Jefferson and Figueroa streets is under the direction of the Jefferson P.-T.A. Red Cross Auxiliary.

This auxiliary has recently received its quota of hospital garments to be supplied and sends out an urgent call for workers for the hospital garment and surgical dressing classes, which meet each Friday at the Jefferson school, at the corner of West Jefferson and Key West. The salvage department of the auxiliary is also in need of the regular loan of an automobile with which to gather salvage.

Hostesses at the Adobe Inn on Tuesday are Mrs. J. S. Towle and Mrs. J. Tucker.

TEA SHOP WORKERS TO TAKE VACATION.

CARNIVAL SCHEDULED FOR NEXT SATURDAY ORDERED POSTPONED.

By Olive Gray.

The coming Saturday was to have been the date for Hale's store to give a carnival at the Red Cross Shop, Eighth and Alvarado streets, but these plans have been changed. This being the first Saturday during the summer which has not witnessed some brilliant affair given by the retail stores, the announcement is made thus in advance, lest crowds visit that center in the anticipation of spending an interesting afternoon as heretofore.

So strenuous has been the work and the entertainment at the Red Cross Shops during the summer that it has been decided to take a complete week-end vacation, from Friday night until Monday morning, so nothing will be going on during that period and the shops will be closed.

The following Saturday, however, will be Jacoby day at the Red Cross Shops, and a wealth of entertainment is in preparation for that time.

A Canadian Hall of Fame.

The plans for the reconstruction of the Canadian Parliament buildings include a hall of fame for commemorating the glorious deeds of Canada and the Allies in the war, and also for the accommodation of the colors of the various Dominion regiments. The hall of fame will be practically a Canadian, Westminster Abbey, and will run almost the whole depth of the building. There will be niches in the spacious corridor for the erection of statues, and the walls are to be utilized for the portrayal of scenes associated with the cause for which the Allied nations are fighting.

THE LETTERS OF LEMUEL BEAN.

Gardenettes and Farmerinos.

BY ROY K. MOULTON.

SOMEWHERE IN NEW YORK, Aug. 6.

Dear Folks:

In the section of New York in which we live there is, now and then, on the face of the landscape a small bare spot of ground. Of course it is worth $100 an inch, but, on account of the war, building operations are restricted, and so these little patches of Old Ma Earth remain vacant.

These little patches of ground have given rise to the gardenette, a beautiful variety of the feminine gender. The people who own the ground rent it out for garden purposes. One may get a very beautiful young farm 22 x 12 feet in size at a very reasonable figure.

I suppose, out in the country, the farmerettes are the real thing, but the main thing in gardenetting is to wear the uniform. The uniforms we have beheld, believe us, would drive the French army to shame, and no army in the world has anything on the French army for colors and design.

Gardenettes select their own uniforms. There is no general rule to go by—no service stripes, chevrons or shoulder straps indicating rank or length of service, and a gardenette who has been in the ranks only two hours is allowed to outshine all the veterans, if she has the price. It seems a shame to do gardening in such uniforms—and so some of the gardenettes think, apparently. In some cases the gardenette uniforms are much like the expensive and daring bathing suits seen at Long Beach. The bathing suits never go nearer the water than the dark line of wet sand, and many of the gardenette uniforms never get nearer the garden than the board palings.

When the gardenettes want to do real gardening, they go home, take off their gardenette uniforms, and get into old clothes. Most of the real gardening is done in the semidarkness.

My wife, Luella, has been working on a gardenette uniform which, it is hoped, will outshine anything in this section of the city.

BUYS BREECHES FIRST.

The first thing she purchased was a pair of corduroy riding breeches, very smart. Then leather puttees. The next article was a French packet or blouse such as is affected by French artists we have seen in the movies. A Tab-o'-Shanter hat completes the outfit. One cannot tell whether she is going to paint an Italian sunset or take a ride along the bridle path in Central Park; but it seems that is the uniform which has been adopted by the gardenettes of Elmhurst, in which section we live.

The riding portion of the uniform suggests that the gardenettes expect to pursue the jumping beans over the hurdles while the remainder gives an artistic effect and is a gentle tribute to our ally, France.

The ladies have been so busy getting their uniforms ready that the gardens have languished in spots and the potato bugs and tomato worms seem to be having a field day.

Over in Woodside, the section next to ours, the ladies have adopted a uniform consisting of Palm Beach overalls, red riding coats, aviators' caps and high-heeled slippers.

IT'S A DELICATE TASK.

Raising a garden in a city like this is a delicate task. If one could take the garden indoors at night and keep it under lock and key all would be well, but it is positively dangerous to leave anything like a garden lying around loose out of doors after dark. We have a cosmopolitan population and there are many people who just dote on letting us work and make garden so that they may come along after dark and reap the harvest.

If a person forgets and leaves a baby cab out of doors over night it is entirely useless to go down and look for it in the morning. The best thing to do is to open the morning papers to the baby cab advertisements and start out bright and early to buy another cab. No use looking for the old one. It is much the same with Fords.

They will steal an American flag if it is hanging out of a first floor window and if it is hanging out of a tenth floor window the result is the same, if there is a fire escape on the front of the building. It isn't even safe to leave a half-dozen clothes pins on the roof and a pint of milk is about as safe in a dumb waiter as a dish of ice cream in the region where all Huns go when they die.

So it is easy to imagine what happens to a garden which lies out of doors with the price of vegetables where it is. The pilferers have even been known to leave sarcastic notes complaining that the gardeners didn't plant enough potatoes.

Gardening, therefore, becomes largely a matter of uniform. The uniform is a success even if the garden is not. Nobody will ever steal the uniform, no matter how badly they may be in need of clothing.

HAVE SOME TROUBLE.

The ladies in various occupations here seem to be in rare trouble over their uniforms, anyway. This is most noticeable among the conductorettes and ladies of the subway and tram. It has been suggested several times that these hard-working ladies get together on the subject of uniform, but they just don't seem to be able to do it. It is nothing at all to see two ladies chopping tickets at a subway gate, one adorned as a field marshal of the Mesopotamian army and another as a Red Cross nurse. The passenger of inquiring mind would like to know whether his ticket is being chopped by a Vassar graduate or a M. F. H. of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club; but he is left in a delightful state of uncertainty. Many of them wear decollete evening gowns when they go to work, and more than once a conductorette has been mistaken for a hostess at an afternoon tea. It is not good form for conductorettes to dress better than the passengers, but many of them do.

There can be no doubt that the uniform is the thing. Fifth avenue on a pleasant afternoon is a mass of them. One may see a gallant French officer of whatever grade he desires. The Frenchmen are a riot of color and gold braid. No wonder they fight well. They have to fight like blazes to live up to their dress uniforms.

When one is in doubt whether the man approaching is a Rumanian field marshal or a Serbian Ambassador in court attire, it is generally certain that both guesses are wrong. The party is just as apt to be a carriage opener for one of the big hotels. The hotel proprietors here are showing the visiting Europeans more about uniforms than they ever knew before. The uniform of an ordinary porter at the Gilmore Hotel, including gold braid and shoulder ornaments, weighs in the neighborhood of thirty-eight pounds.

The ladies who drive ambulances are gradually getting together in the matter of uniform. So are ladies in other lines of service. They are adopting mannish styles in which the military cut predominates. But there seems to be no hope for the poor gardenettes. We have recently seen three in pink oil-cloth caps, chintz coats and blue overalls. It is always necessary to ask a gardenette what branch of the service she is connected with. One can never tell at a glance.

We are always told that when we salute a party, we salute the uniform and not the person inside of it. But there are some uniforms in this village that I refuse to salute.

The new lady police wear the most dashing outfits in the city and they are so proud of their uniforms and look so well in them that it is a pleasure to work without pay and it seems a shame to them to take enough time off to sleep. The ladies never looked so well as they do in these dashing blue creations with tight-fitting, double-breasted coats, short skirts, puttees and blue caps with the regulation police shield. It takes all the unpleasantness and disgrace out of being arrested to have it done by one of these young women.

It is impossible to resist an officer.

Everybody has a uniform now except the poor old ult consumer, the family man who is doing his share toward bearing the brunt of this war.

Hoping you are the same, I remain,

Yours, LEM.

Preparations are being made, under the direction of the prefect of the Federal district of Brazil, for the publication in 1922 of a centennial book, commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the independence of Brazil.

PASSING OF A NOTED LANDMARK.

Will San Francisco's famous Cliff House become a House of a Thousand Ghosts, or will it experience a rennaissance and again take its peculiar place in the Bohemian life of the community, is a question patrons of the world-famous resort are asking today.

Last night the lights went out, and there appears to be something in the hearts of its devotees akin to genuine sorrow.

Manager John Farley will not speak of it. "All the old-timers are too sad to talk," he said. "Don't ask me to say anything, for so far as I know, the last chapter of its famous history is ended. The name of the Cliff House evokes more memories than any other American landmark, not excepting the old Absinthe House of New Orleans."

Does the rendezvous of the seekers of conviviality belong to an era that is gone? Does the order refusing it the privilege of selling liquors to its guests effectually obliterate it except as a memory, and will bats take refuge there and weird, haunting sounds make of it a place to shun? Or will it come to life again and attain popularity greater than ever before when some manager conceives a form of entertainment that does not appear to require for its acceptance the stimulus that comes from out the flowing bowl?

Two nights ago the windows were blaze with lights, syncopated strains modulated harmoniously with the song of the splashing surf, cabaret entertainers gyrated through the measures of song, and glasses tinkled and men and women danced and laughed and appeared to be happy.

Last night the windows were dark and there was an air of mystery behind the drawn blinds, the jazz was hushed and there was only the endless song of the sea. Somewhere below the terrace a dark-skinned attendant of a fruit stand tinkled the strings of a mandolin and the loneliness of it caused a shiver to race down the spine of the two or three people who stood about as if lost in a maze of dark passages.

Leaning against a khaki-clad artillery private from Fort Winfield Scott was a demure girl, and frightened she appeared. ON ORGANIZATION

The most interesting phenomenon of the age is organization. The progress of humanity; the upward toil of civilization is largely the slow, sometimes groping, process of coordination and unification.

Organization, applied to destruction, endangered the world for a time, but as right is mightier than wrong, so organization will win the war and liberate the nations to a rebirth of cooperation and progress in mutual helpfulness.

Robinson's is an example of the high development of organization in business. The very human mechanism combining hundreds of human parts, works with the precision of a great, noiseless dynamo. But there the simile ceases.

For in the Robinson organization each unit has brains, and thinks and acts upon individual initiative. The complete change from store work to the service of the Red Cross yesterday proves that.

You'd scarcely realize you were in a shop—so few "wares" are in sight—it seems just a cool, beautiful, quiet room, where the weary shopper can rest a bit! It's Mandel's, you know, which just opened, 733 South Hill, next the Alhambra. Ask to be shown a hat and lo! what wonders greet the eye! Chapeaux of exquisite loveliness, which certainly must just have come from "La Belle France." No, it's the designer—she's from Redfern's, Paris! They'll show you wonderful blouses, really imported, and you may try them on in a beautiful room for that purpose.

The jacket blouse with peplum effect is very new.

"Where to picnic?" That's the only question—for the question of what to take settles itself at Young's, 638 S. Broadway. You can satisfy the palate with imported sardines and Martin's eastern cheese! There's a special on this cheese, and also on the high-grade olives next week. They carry a large variety of picnic meats and other good things too numerous to mention. You will always receive the most courteous treatment and all orders are promptly filled. The most discriminating shopper can find what she wants at Young's Market Co.

It seems we really must eat! So why not have good things cooked just as we would have them at home—without all the bother? I know where you can get a fine dinner for 50 cents, a choice of hot or cold meats and fried Belgian hare on Thursdays. Every day the most delicious war pastry and muffins are served. It's at the Boston Lunch Room, 709 South Hope.

Flaring cuffs and flaring sleeves are shown on dressy gowns.

Every woman wants a lot of sweaters! Those of Shetland wool are really lovely and come in all of the beautiful new colors. Silver gray, Sammy, coral, China blue, etc., are very popular. JEHU, THE FURIOUS.

BY CHARLES COKE WOODS.

JEHU was in a hurry, and his haste made waste. He was possessed of an impatient, impetuous, and precipitous personality. He did a number of good things in a bad way. He was a sort of dare-devil which thing itself is generally more or less devilish. Because he was headlong he fell short morally. Jehu was a sort of Kaiserite before the Kaiser's day. He was an accomplished camoufleuer. He could deceive like the devil. It has always been too common to call that sort of thing "diplomacy." He was a sort of mailed-fisted murderer.

Jehu was grewsome enough to be a German of Germany. Jezebel was a feminine fury. No doubt she deserved to die. Her living was a menace to humanity, so far as she could influence a situation. There may be a killing which is actuated by a spirit of kindness to others. There may be a killing which is wanton cruelty. The Germans represent this last kind of killing, as no other nation in all human history has represented it. Every day new light from indisputable facts is showing the world that Berlin is headquarters for a nation of brutes. Brutes have brains, and many of them (such as the tiger, the lynx, and the hyena) are instinctively shrewd in slaughter. Less and less as Germany approached her climax of mere militaristic power has she produced any essentially noble thing. Art, music, literature, law, education—all of these in any high and noble sense have been as steadily dying for years in Germany as human tissue dies from cancerous growth. They are shrewd in the manipulation of murderous implements. But not shrewder than a cat in the manipulation of its claws in killing a mouse. They are instinctively skillful in distributing poison gas, but no more skillful than a skunk is in distributing his. The German spy is equal to a rattlesnake in hiding in the grass and shooting out the poison fang. What is our case here against the German nation. It is plainly this: It does not require a high order of intellect to crush, to bruise, to maim, to mutilate, to kill, almost any brute beast can accomplish any of these wanton and wicked things. These are the essential performances of the brute and serpent. It takes intellect to construct, to conserve, to build, to serve, to save. Super murderers are not super men.

The highest intellectuality takes the direction of service for humanity, and not against humanity. Symmetrical intelligence knows enough to know that supreme selfishness is suicidal. Real intelligence knows that murder cannot immortalize itself in the affections of mankind. But Prussianism does not know that selfishness is a self-slayer. Prussianism does not know enough to know that the misrule of ruin is not the road to any worthy renown. So far as ethics, morality, psychological sanity, and the simplest human decencies are concerned, the Hun is not in the reckoning any more than a hog.

Jehu was almost indecent and cruel enough to be a Hun. Not quite, perhaps, but almost. He ordered a half-dozen Chamberlains to throw the body of a woman out of the window and then trampled his horses over her body and gave her to the dogs. Doubtless that wicked woman deserved to die, but even death ought to be administered decently.

Jehu destroyed the unholy house of Ahab. But he asked for the heads of all the royal princes of Samaria. On a certain morning when Jehu left the palace gate he saw seventy human heads piled up in two piles. It was ghastly enough to demand explanation. Even then this eleventh King of Israel and the founder of the fourth dynasty tried to explain the murder according to the fool notion of "the divine right of Kings." That idiocy which Jehu advocated 884 B.C., is today the crazy notion held by bloody Bill of Berlin. It has always been the insanity of such sinners as Jehu and Attila and the Kaiser to explain to their stupid subjects that they were special instruments of Jehovah. "The King can do no wrong" has been the cowardly excuse of many a criminal King. It is the big business of democracy to break that bubble. Jehu was so corrupt in the inner parts of him that he could not do a good thing decently. When he destroyed the Baalites he did it in such a way as to show that he was as bad as the Baalites whom he destroyed.

The infinite mercy of Jehovah lifted the meanness of Jehu into a ministry of mercy. The Almighty has been wise and powerful and good enough to be doing that through the long centuries. "He maketh the wrath of man to praise him." And He will extract honey for humanity from the poison weeds of Prussianism. The extracting process has been running at high speed over in France, lately. The mills of God's goodness may grind slowly, but they grind exceeding sure.

Jehu was a furious driver. Had he lived in this day he would belong to the bunch of crazy speeders. He had the speed mania away back yonder in the slow Orient. Jehu is dead, but Jehuism still lives.

A few years ago in this land of ours a man prominent in national educational circles was in a hurry to get rich. He thrust his hand into the treasury of the people's money and they hurried him to the penitentiary. The whole drama was a spectacular performance in speed. In the insane drive, the educator ran recklessly over wife and friends and children and the accumulated honors of years. He was as wild for wealth as any suicide, and his speed insanity wrecked him forever. Another man was in a Jehu hurry to get rich on Oregon timber land. His hurry drove him to theft. It drove him away from his wife and children and his beautiful home which he loved, but which he had purchased with other people's money. But it was not a "joy ride" when he rode with the officers over to the penitentiary. A young, brilliant United States Senator got into a Jehu hurry. He had achieved fame, but he wanted fortune, and he wanted it "right away, quick." It had been to his everlasting welfare had he remembered the wise words of a very old book, "THEY THAT WILL BE RICH, FALL INTO DIVERS TEMPTATIONS AND A SNARE." "Riches take wings and fly away." The wings of wealth are as swift as a dove's wings. But many a dove's wings have dashed him to his death against a telegraph wire. We have seen bunches of feathers along the country lane, by the side of which the telegraph wires ran, and we have soliloquised, "it is the penalty of the speed mania." The foolish dove might be flying yet, had he not flown too fast. But the young Senator used his position unlawfully before a certain grain company for the sole purpose of personal, financial gain. He was another Jehu, a furious driver. He drove the wrecked chariot of his career to jail. We saw a prairie eagle flying high. Of a sudden his eye caught sight of some fascinating feast in the prairie grass. He swooped and swung low, when the hunter's rifle ball broke his wing. The Eagle lost his chance of the great sky flights because, for once, he forgot and flew too low. It's the story of a thousand Jehus in fame and finance.

There are also the automobile speeder Jehus. Now the automobile is like a gun. It is safe enough in the hands of sanity. But the automobile, like the gun is dangerous in the hands of a dunce. Automobiles are not fools, but some automobilists are. Automobiles minister uncountable blessings to the people of today. How much easier a man can go five miles to church than he could in the days of old "Dobbin." How much more quickly the dear old stork can fly out to some happy country home! Yes, neighbor, automobiles are good things, but they are not intended to be shot out of a gun. They are not intended to give their owners the glorious privilege of running over every innocent pedestrian on Broadway when that thoroughfare is crowded with traffic. Have we not seen with our eyes? Have our ears not heard? Have we not seen some Jehu, male or female, dash along the curbing, between the sidewalk and the street car, just as some sweet lady, or some dear old man had started from the sidewalk to the car? Have we not had to wave a handkerchief like some wild Indian in the face of these fool Jehus to keep them from madly running over some innocent person? "Brethren, these things ought not so to be." Jehu does not own Broadway. He has no right to any particular spot on Broadway at the moment when some other law-abiding citizen is on that same particular spot. Then, is anybody's sense of propriety and justice so warped that they think it is fair for ONE MAN IN ONE AUTOMOBILE TO OCCUPY ENOUGH SPACE ON A CROWDED THOROUGHFARE FOR TEN PEDESTRIANS? The public highway belongs to the public. It belongs to the old man whose "Steps halt feebly to the tomb," as really as to the speediest automobilist.

The loan shark is a Jehu in his diabolical drive to get rich. The joy rider is a Jehu in his speed after joy. And just now the world is witnessing the wild spectacle of a demoniacal emperor driving his people headlong to death and destruction. The Jehu of Berlin is a bloody wretch, whose long nightmare of disaster is just beginning. He is now being enmeshed in the traps which his infamy has set. Like Jehu of old, he is "a furious driver," and is plunging his empire over the precipice of disaster and despair.

TO REBUILD SOLDIERS.

First Reconstruction Hospital in Country is Opened at Former Hotel in Cape May.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAPE MAY (N. J.) Aug. 1.—The first army medical school for the reconstruction of defects of hearing and speech of soldiers has been opened here under the division of physical reconstruction of the Surgeon-General's office. It is a part of Army Hospital No. 11, located in what was formerly a luxurious hotel built by a land syndicate. Lieut.-Col. Charles W. Richardson of the Army Medical Corps is the director of the school, which is said to be the first of its kind in the world.

Returned soldiers with hearing destroyed or impaired, or suffering from partial or total loss of speech, are to be educated physically and vocationally.

The school opened with a full corps of teachers and enough patients to occupy their time.

Lieut.-Col. Richardson, who came here to establish the school, is professor of laryngology and otology in the George Washington University. He joined the army when this country entered the war.

When an Aviator Sees Red.

Maj. W. A. Bishop's new book, "Winged Warfare," confesses how often an aviator gets "in a tremendous temper" when he misses his German. "He landed in a field underneath me. To see him calmly alight there under perfect control filled me with a towering rage. I saw red things before my eyes. I vowed an eternal vendetta against all the Hun two-seaters in the world, and, the impulse suddenly seizing me, I dived right down to within a few feet of the ground, firing a stream of bullets into the machine where it was sitting. I had the satisfaction of knowing that the pilot and observer must have been hit or nearly scared to death. . . . The sight of the 'sausage' filled me with one of those hot bursts of rage. . . . It is discouraging work, and very aggravating, to chase machines that will not fight. For my part, I find that I get in a tremendous temper and am apt to run unnecessary risks when I meet another enemy."—[New Republic.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE most interesting thing on the club programme will be the women candidates' day at the Woman's City Club, set a week from tomorrow.

There are four women candidates for various offices to be heard from—Miss Orfa Jean Shontz, candidate for judge of the Superior Court; Dr. Jessie Russell, candidate for State Assembly, Sixty-first District; Mrs. Berenice Efgar, candidate for State Assembly in the Seventieth District, and Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, candidate for Congress in the Eleventh District.

Each of these women candidates enjoy a certain amount of indorsement and have many enthusiastic friends. The Woman's City Club is looking forward to personal addresses by them, and it is understood all are willing to answer questions from the floor, always an exciting time at club meetings.

Miss Shontz, being the very first woman candidate for judge in the country, enjoys the eclat that goes with pioneer enterprise and confidence. She is receiving a number of indorsements, especially from judges and attorneys. Judge Sidney Reeve, who appointed her referee in 1915, is an ardent supporter, as is Judge Gavin Craig and Judge James H. Rives, with whom she served for three years in the Probate Court. Then there are Attorneys James Scarborough, W. S. Allen, Douglas Edwards and William Bowen, and all the women lawyers, members of the Professional Woman's Club, of which she is president. Dr. G. W. Bovard, president of U.S.C.; Dr. Edward Locke of the First Methodist Church, Mrs. Herbert Cable, State president of the Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Chester Ashley of Ebell; Dr. E. C. Moore, president of the State Normal School, and Mrs. Cora D. Lewis, chairman of the Probation Committee, have all come forth with public indorsements of Miss Shontz's candidacy.

Dr. Russell, too, has many friends, especially among the Prohibitionists and the Congress of Mothers, of which she is State president. Dr. Russell means to concentrate on child and educational laws, judging from her literature on the subject.

Tomorrow's meeting at the Woman's City Club will be devoted to a recital on the subject of State expenditures and economies by H. L. Carnahan and Senator George Cartright, who will deal with different aspects of the question. Luncheon will be served in Hamburger's Cafe at noon, and the meeting begins in the auditorium on the fifth floor at 1 p.m.

Woman's Liberty Loan Committee.

Miss Mary Foy has prepared a rousing address to be made before the Woman's City Club on the 26th inst. on the subject of the Woman's Liberty Loan Committee. After her visit to the Chicago woman's conference on the subject with Mrs. E. R. Brainerd, she has come back primed with data and information. According to Mrs. Brainerd, Miss Foy made the best address at that Chicago conference.

Mothers' Educational Center.

Mothers' Educational Center will open on the 27th inst. instead of September 3, according to an announcement. This change in the time was made imperative by the requests of mothers wishing to have their children examined before the public schools open in September, for many of the little tots are enrolled in the kindergartens, and their mothers are anxious to know just what to feed them and how to train them in the beginning of their life work.

Due to the national drive to have all children of preschool age examined, the work at the center became so congested that it was found necessary to close the appointments, so the clerical work on the records could be cared for and the doctors and nurses, who have given two years of time without remuneration, short vacations.

The week beginning the 27th inst. will be held exclusively for the kindergarten child, the examinations beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning. For appointments, mothers should telephone Mrs. Harold E. Thomas, 599585. In so doing no child will be kept waiting.

The regular lecture course will begin September 4 at 2 p.m. at the center, Nos. 518-519 Chamber of Commerce Building. The subject of the first lecture will be "A Well-chosen Diet." To this all mothers are invited.

The lectures, as well as the examinations of the children and the instruction given to the mothers is free, the only requisite being a desire on the part of the mother to better care for her child.

"AMERICA'S ANSWER."

Stupendous Photographs of Sailors Taken on the Drill Field at Great Lakes.

Eight thousand sailors in whites were dotted among 32,000 others in blues and blue caps on the main drill field yesterday morning forming the words, "America's Answer." Around the great square formation which covered nearly one-half of the entire field, was a border of white, which gave the scene the appearance of a great painting framed with a white border.

Both moving and still pictures were taken for the Committee on Public Information, and the pictures will be distributed first through Great Britain and France, then will be shown in the United States.

The effects produced by the formation this morning were striking in every detail. Looking at the mass of men from the ground, or from the windows of buildings about the station, they represented something more than a great mass of humanity.

EVERYBODY HELPED.

Every man on the station who was not engaged in necessary work was in the picture. Bluejackets began arriving on the drill field at 8 o'clock. From all directions and camps men came marching in blues and whites.

They took the places that had been assigned to them and gradually the few onlookers realized that "something" was being formed, but it was impossible to tell what the effect would be. But as the spectator stepped on the roof of the Administration Building "America's Answer" greeted him in the form of 40,000 sailors.

The blues represented a mass, while the men in whites formed the letters.

The National Ensign and the station colors were placed directly behind the words and added a touch of color to the picture.

Lieutenant Commander A. C. Wilhelm, drill officer, was "director" of the picture. Each effect that he produced seemed better than the preceding one. When all men in blues bowed their heads to the ground showing only the surface of the flat hats, and the men in whites waved their hats in the air, the few on the roof of the Administration Building thought the scene could not be excelled.

But when 32,000 blue hats were waved in the air the effect was one that has never been seen before at Great Lakes. White hats might represent a snowstorm, but there is nothing in nature that could represent the blue hats flying in the air.

Then the sailors started whistling and singing the "Missouri Waltz" and their bodies swayed back and forth to the time of the music. The effect produced a gasp of admiration from even the most undemonstrative on-lookers. A few "dry-land" sailors wondered if the ocean would look like that when they were placed aboard ship. Others said it looked like the waves of the ocean, so there must have been a "sea-going" atmosphere to the picture.

ITALIAN FLAG NEXT.

Then came the order to "Break ranks on the double" and to the north, south, east and west the men scattered over the field, without order or precision. It would seem that it would have been impossible to get the men together in company formations to march them back to their respective camps, but in less time than it has taken to write this story the drill field was cleared and the men were returning to their quarters.

This morning a picture of the Italian flag will be taken, and the pictures will be continued until all the Allied flags have been formed, as well as several other formations which are under consideration.—[Great Lakes Bulletin.

Africans take Germans' Cocoa Trade.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, June 25.—Four native chiefs in British West Africa are going into business as cocoa exporters. They are taking over the trade of the German firms in West Africa who used to send cocoa to England.

UP IN A BALLOON WITHOUT PARACHUTE.

A PASADENAN RELATES SOMETHING OF HIS EXPERIENCE IN AN AERIAL TRIP.

I had crossed on the old "X——" in those ancient days when, as the latest-launched greyhound of the Cunard fleet, it held for a few precarious months the constantly shifting blue ribbon for the swiftest trans-Atlantic passage; but in that angular "cubistic" lump of lead-gray, looming over the bow of my spray-smothered launch to blot out the undulent sky-line of the nearest Orkney, there was not one familiar feature. This is the story told in Popular Mechanics Magazine by Lewis R. Freeman, formerly well-known resident of Pasadena. Continuing, he says: Its forward funnel had been "kippered" down the middle to somewhere about the level of the lower deck, and carried up in two smaller stacks which rose abreast to port and starboard. This had been done (as I learned later) to make room for a platform leading forward from the waist over which seaplanes could be wheeled to the launching stage, which ran out over the bow from beneath the bridge. The break in the forecastle had been closed in connection with a sweeping alteration which had converted the whole forward end of the main deck into a roomy seaplane "repository," with space for a repair shop.

The changes aft were no less startling. The old poop seemed to have been rased to clear the last 200 feet of the main deck, and over the ten or fifteen-foot high railing which surrounded this, the top of a partly inflated observation balloon showed like the back of a half-submerged turtle.

When a seaplane is about to be launched, after the usual preliminary tuning up on the launching stage, the ship is swung dead into the teeth of the wind and put at full speed. This matter of wind direction is very important, for its variation by a fraction of a point from head on may easily make a crooked run and a fluky launching. As the latter would almost inevitably mean that both plane and pilot must be churned under the swiftly advancing forefoot of the ship, no precautions calculated to avoid it are omitted.

All of the dozen or more launchings attempted that afternoon were successful, though one big bombing plane, whose engine began missing the instant it started, gave everyone, from the captain down, a bit of a turn when it "drooled over the bow like cold treacle" (as a bo'sun aptly put it,) and swooped down toward the water in what was almost a dive, before picking up and mounting aloft. The launching stage was something over 100 feet long, and sloped downward at a grade of about 5 per cent.

The wind had been freshening considerably all afternoon, but with no more than thirty miles an hour showing on the indicator, there was no reason for not letting me have my balloon ride.

As the time approached for its ascent, the balloon was allowed to rise far enough from the deck to permit its car to be shoved underneath the center of it, in order that the latter might not be dragged in the getaway.

Doughboy's Initiative.

Herbert Corey, war correspondent, who has received special permission to accompany American troops at the front, says in Everybody's for August: "American boys in France are developing into topnotch soldiers. They have the spirit of initiative that only first-class soldiers have. If it were necessary to bring proof in support, a thousand stories might be told. There is the yarn of the intelligence officer, for example, who found the Germans had an electrified wire in their protective entanglements. The next night he crept out with an insulated wire, hooked on to the electrified line and would have lighted his dugouts with German electricity if his outfit had not moved that day."

Vogue Frocks
Indicators of the Fall Fashions

Truly, the most distinctive frocks of the season are being shown at Vogue Company now.

Always having been known for having unusually smart garments, this year, more than ever before, Vogue has triumphed in showing frocks of individuality and charm.

The materials are tricotine, tricolet, serges, Georgettes, satins and Poiret twills.

Dainty and clever touches of jet and fringe, embroidery and silk braids are shown in the trimmings, while other frocks depend on the simple smartness of design for individuality.

There is something extremely difficult about describing frocks, for so much depends upon the first impression in the minds of the shopper, and our frocks have to be seen to be appreciated, for words seem entirely inadequate to describe their charm.

The Patriotic Corset
The Bien Jolie
The Corset that "Does its Bit"

To say that there is a close alliance between winning the war and corsets sounds ridiculous, but 'tis true nevertheless.

The woman who works is the woman who is helping win the war, and this patriotic woman needs to be untiring and dependable.

But how can she be if her body is incased in an instrument of torture as so many badly constructed and ill fitting corsets are?

The perfect corset is the one that supports the figure and molds it and the one that a woman is absolutely unconscious of.

The Bien Jolie is the perfect corset for the "war worker" and it is "patriotic" for it fills every requirement.

Madame Adele, our expert French corset specialist, will fit you to your model.

"NO FOOLISHNESS."

Kansas City Father Makes His Girls Get Busy in Useful Occupations.

A South Side grocer has two daughters. They wouldn't work. They wouldn't help around the house. They wouldn't go to school. One was doing well in a local dramatic school, but stopped going.

Both like to dance. Both like to ride in motor cars with "classy guys." They dress well, and don't look bad in camouflage. They seldom lack for "classy guys."

At 7 o'clock that morning he rapped on the door of the girls' room. "Get up," he said, "you go to work in the store this morning. No foolishness, either."

HOSPITAL ROUTINE.

The Story of a Soldier's First Experience with Nurses and Chloroform.

A nurse comes along, shaves off around the man's shrapnel-shattered knee, and paints it freely with iodine. His eyes listlessly follow her skilled hands. He is in great pain and with it comes the thought that the morning may bring relief. The weary hours drag on. As he dozes under the influence of morphine, he wonders dimly what his first operation will be like. Toward morning the night nurse brings him in a cup of tea.

The usual hospital routine goes on under his tired gaze until about 10 o'clock, when two orderlies in white jackets and aprons bring in the white enameled stretcher.

"Best of luck, old-timer," comes the sympathizing voice of a husky Canadian who was on the "table" the day before.

Swiftly they wheel him down the long corridors to the door of the operating theater. His nurse talks and keeps him cheered during the few minutes they have to wait for the last case to come out. The door opens and they wheel him in.

Just before being laid on the operating table he gives expression to his only anxiety:

"Say, captain, you'll see they give me plenty, won't you? Don't let me wake up in the middle of it."

The gauze is adjusted over his nose and mouth. The chloroform falls drop by drop. The smell reminds him of toothache tincture.

"Take fairly deep, regular breaths and open your mouth a little," directs the anaesthetist.

After a few seconds, breathing becomes difficult. There is a heavy singing in his ears. Complete unconsciousness as yet. . . . The nurse takes his hand. He squeezes hers and tries to speak, for he imagines they may start on him too soon.

A few more seconds—really minutes—pass. It is becoming unbearable. His head is bursting. He cannot breathe. He is suffocating, choking—and then, his eyes open.

In bewilderment he looks at the nurse sitting by his bedside. The operation is over and he is back in the ward.

"You behaved splendidly, corporal, and went off beautifully."

And then he realizes that his "turn" in the hospital "theater" is over.—[E. J. S., in the London Mail.

The Seamstress

Patriotism as a Pretext.

Ma'm, I feel a little bad this morning. Our nights are pretty [illegible] at our house. I feel a good [illegible] this morning as though I'd [illegible] put in the skillet and simmered along in slow lard. Well, it's going to be cooler soon and there ain't no use to make a fuss about it. We've all lived through it before and we ain't going to die this year, just because we've got to have the [illegible] to make the corn good. It ain't real patriotic to complain. My, but this war is certainly going to [illegible] a good deal of puttin' up with [illegible]. You can't turn around or [illegible] a wry face about nothing. Somebody will say you ain't patriotic. And thank our stars we've learned that that is the orneriest [illegible] we can be. Most all of us would rather be called a coward or a thief. Ain't we got educated since the war started? Not patriotic! Ma'm? Why, they ain't nothing the matter with me.

Let's us talk about your crepe and what we are a-going to make for you to take north with you. You know you ain't got many days to get ready. I don't blame you for getting out: It sure is bad and you'll have to go soon for your hay fever anyhow.

My land! I got a cousin what knows all exactly about that hay fever and the time it is a-going to take him. He says that it comes at twenty minutes past 4 o'clock a.m. on the [illegible] of August, and of course he always stays up and meets it. What do you reckon he'd do if his clock was a little slow? (Ouch!)

That's a nice burnt bread color, and that peacock blue, or whatever it is they call it now, will make it [illegible] . . . . Ma'm? Why, yes'm, I'd make the coat right loose and boxy and not very long, and how would it do not to have it meet but in one place and have some kind of unusual fastening?

I'll tell you how I saw one made and you can decide if you want it. Well, it was in these same colors exactly. The coat was boxy and made of the heavy crepe like yours, or crepe de chine. It had a four-inch band of the blue on the bottom of the coat, and it had collar and cuffs of the blue, too. Then it was fastened over the bust and a ornament made of embroidered wool; you know, that open coarse rose design, and hanging from it was a fringe of the blue wool with wooden beads on the bottom.

The skirt to the dress was open and hemmed at the side and a box pleat laid in the front part at the place where the back and front met. The back gore was draped a little. A piece of the tan crepe was turned over at the top to form a belt. The lower edge of this was loose and [illegible] with blue. Underneath a piece of the blue that is narrow on the left side where the skirt opens and gets wider and finishes in [illegible] at the right side.

At the left where the belt meets it is finished with one of them ornaments, and lower down, so that it shows when the coat is on, is another ornament made the same way. You know that gives just a little touch of the fringe what's so stylish. It's easy to make the ornaments, and that twisted fringe out of the wool with the brownish beads sewed on ain't nothing to make, and a [illegible] could embroider it.

How long was the fringe? Why, I should think that the whole ornament might be ten or twelve inches. The rose was about four inches deep and the fringe eight. Well, and they had about seven strands of the blue wool and seven wood beads on each strand the size of a small [illegible], yes'm. I think you'll do it easy if you don't want the bother. If I was you I wouldn git me one of them little round hats and wear a veil over it, the kind what's thin over the face and has a chiffon border. You might as well wear one while they are new. Mebbe they will git common after while.

Ma'm? No'm, I don't think it's unpatriotic to git a few new clothes, though most everything else is. [illegible] Well, how did you know that I felt a little bad about that? I'll tell you. Before we come this morning a woman said to me: "I should think you wasn't very patriotic to git no new clothes when our boys are bad in need of cigarettes."

Well, it kind of hurt me, because I say anybody would rather be [illegible] most anything now. I got a [illegible]. Ma'm? No'm, you ain't ever heard of this one. He lives in Kansas. Well, he's got so patriotic that he won't let the family have hardly nothing. My land, he was stingy enough before and now he's got the best excuse in the world. And a whole lot of people have got the most out'n it being a savin' time to pinch their families. He said to me that it was his duty to buy bonds and so it was. But [illegible] to say self-sacrificing parents. It's a pretty good investment. But I noticed he didn't give nothing to the Y.M.C.A., and whilst he was telling the family they mustn't have no new clothes nor candy, he smoked the biggest and finest cigars he could git.

I says: "Cousin William, you are mighty reckless of small change with them cigars, ain't you? Why don't you quit it; mebbe you would sleep better at night and you could buy your children some Thrift Stamps."

Well, that didn't make no hit at all with Cousin William. He just as same as told me to mind my own business. But he hasn't quit telling the family what they ort to do to be patriotic.

I've been thinking a good deal about it and I've decided that if a body wants to go to extremes they can make themselves ridiculous by being patriotic as well as anything else. They can do a little [illegible] along with it. It's like [illegible] what was done in the name of liberty and like the man who wanted to push everybody into the church he belonged to with fire and flame to make them go through the door. Lonny says (that's my husband) the Bible says "Straining at a gnat and swallowin' a camel."

HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB
SYMPOSIUM.

AT THE Happy Thought studio the director, David Oliver Tobasco, is a rather busy man. He is trying to arrange a fit scenario for Endymion, the educated ourang-utang, who has just been added to the club zoo. He has one fresh from the pen of Rudyard Haggard which will answer admirably with some slight alterations by the gifted director. It is hoped to begin work before the camera within a few weeks.

Endymion himself is taking a lively interest in the proceedings and Prof. Galusha Garner can understand almost every chatter of the massive ape. He says Endymion has a handy vocabulary. He makes the same word do when he wants a banana, a cocoanut or a drink. This makes it convenient for the attendant, who is thus enabled to give Endymion whatever he guesses he wants. Endymion is developing into quite a sport. It was thought at first that when he arrived the studio could dispense with a night watchman. It was presumed that he could easily attend to those duties. But Endymion insisted that he belonged to the Day Workers' Union and positively refused to report at night. Now he has gone the limit and asked for a valet. He says that all movie stars have them and if he is to have the leading role in the next film production of the Happy Thought studio he must have a man to button him up and shave him. He declares that Charlie Fairbanks has nothing on him. If he doesn't get a valet he will go on a strike right in front of the camera. He says that he used to be the walking delegate of Jungle No. 1, Amalgamated Monkeys, and knows exactly what his rights are. If he doesn't have a man to feed him he will fight.

Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes, who is temporarily serving as companion for the ourang-utang struck the Old Resident for $18 to pay for a plug hat for Endymion. The pioneer made a roar and said that he had never paid more than $12 for a helmet for himself and he'd be dashed if he would pay more for one for this child of the jungle. The professor explained, however, that it was on account of the peculiar shape of Endymion's noodle and that the hat would have to be built to order. Endymion has a larger head than a Congressman and is brainier than most of them. It is likely, therefore, that in the forthcoming picture Endymion will be shown wearing an $18 bonnet. Meanwhile Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes is trying to dig up a valet for Endymion. He wants to get a man beyond the new draft age, as it is doubtful whether a valet for a monkey actor would be listed as an essential occupation. If he got a young man President Wilson might send for him the first week.

The studio will not pay more than $75 a month for Endymion's man unless he is prepared to also serve as an understudy. In the new picture Endymion appears as a jungle Socialist, who organizes a colony for the purpose of raising cocoanuts. In consideration of his services in selling the land the buyers give him annually half their crop. In a few years he manages to get control of all the cocoanuts in Sumatra and is able to make himself King or Chief Nut. The Kaiser hearing of his great wealth becomes jealous and comes with an army to attack Endymion. Endymion learns of the intent of the enemy and, filling a sack with cocoanuts, stealthily visited their camp in the night. By bribing each soldier with a nut Endymion obtains the promise of the army to go on a strike when the whistle blew in the morning. So at 7 o'clock when the Kaiser sounded the gong to start fighting the soldiers sneered and exhibited their cocoanuts. The Kaiser thought they were the new kind of bomb called the king killer and, hastily grabbing a bar of soap he cuts his own throat before the entire army. The soldiers then elect Endymion as their ruler and when they see the native girls in their Sumatra wrappers they decide to remain and work for Endymion. As for Endymion he marries the Kaiserine and lives scrappily ever after.

Some beautiful settings are to be shown, including one reel which depicts the growth of a cocoanut from the initial planting to the perfect nut. Endymion is a most intelligent actor and it is still predicted that he will be writing jazz songs inside of a month.

At the club symposium yesterday the secretary, Marjorie Evelyn Heartsease, reported that the organization had been invited to furnish a unit of farmerettes to aid in herding the bean crop of Ventura county. She thought it also possible that a bunch of lady cotton pickers be assembled for duty in the Imperial Valley, but it was feared that each one would want an attendant with a powder rag and a pitcher of ice water.

The sunny secretary said that she had tried on the farmerette uniform and thought it not unbecoming.

The Old Resident significantly remarked that he could easily imagine that and that on some folks he knew it might even be positively beautiful, even alluring. He thought when people were blessed with a figure they might show a little of it.

Whereupon Marjorie blushed and coyly kicked the pioneer in the slats.

Esmeralda Hooligan and Gladys Canby were the first volunteers in the farmerette section and were designated as a committee to gather enlistments. Incidentally, they will collaborate in writing the marching song of the farmerettes, for which the sunny secretary has agreed to furnish the music. It will be printed and sold—the proceeds to go to the fund for buying nut sundaes for movie queens.

The Happy Thought farmerettes are not grasping. All they ask is $3 a day and their board. The money will be used to purchase shoes for needy women—they being the needy women.

Applications for their services will be supplied in the order in which they are received. They are ripe for almost any venture, except running a snow plow on Mt. Shasta.

The sunny secretary reported that she had received an application for membership from Angelica Quart, who claimed to be a stepsister of Ezra Pound, and living in the same yard. She said that she was dying by inches, but would come in on foot if necessary.

"It dozen make any difference," interrupted the Cheerful Idiot.

"A pint of order," exclaimed Arthur Moore, with a wry face and evidence of a sham pain.

"I'll order a Quart," responded the Old Resident, decidedly, and Angelica was welcomed to their midst to the extent of 14 per cent.

Miss Quart submitted a sample of her wares, which was somewhat after the copious pattern of openwork verse, affected by her more famous half-brother. Here it is:

Beautiful but Blameless.

If I am beauteous
Oh, blame me not!
I might have had warts,
Freckles,
Tan,
Pimples.
But here I am, pink, pearly, and patrician.
But were I ugly,
I would still be beautiful;
For I have that within,
Which passeth understanding.
Gads!, But my insides are comely.
There I am,
Amiable,
Benevolent,
Courteous,
And so on,
And so forth.

There were fifty-seven other verses of a similar character, but the example cited was sufficient to establish the splendid reputation of this gifted daughter of a glorious race.

Angelica will be a notable addition to a glittering galaxy of genius.

John Godfrey Fortune, the Long Beach Telemachus, had a birthday recently and celebrated it going to the Neversink Cemetery and reading the unique literature assembled on the tombstones. From the choice collection of obituaries, he plucked this bouquet:

ON THE DEAD.

Here lies the body of Ephraim Bree
Who departed this life in a tempest of tea,
He delighted in telling his wife she talked rot,
So she smashed in his skull with her earthen teapot.

Here lies the body of Timothy Doyle,
Who left this fair earth on account of a boil
On the end of his nose, so he stuck in a pin;
Blood poisoning set in, 'twas the last of poor Tim.

This is in memory of Mary Ann
Tripp,
Who lies 'neath this stone because of a tip.
She was out in a boat with a brainless young limb,
When he tipped the boat over Mary
Ann couldn't swim.

Reflect, all ye who pass this stone,
On the sad end of Thomas Doane.
He interfered twixt man and wife,
Thus came in contact with a knife.

Anaconda Skinner, the shrinking sunflower of the underbrush, also had been doing some window shopping in a neighboring graveyard and exhibited this catch with some glee:

"Here lies the body of Nicholas
Kent,
Who never was known to spend a cent;
If there's any charge for Gabriel's tootin',
He'll go to hell as sure as shootin';
If Peter should ask him for a penny
He'd say: 'I'll be d—d, but I haven't any.'"

Pythias Jonathan Pillsbury, the cheerful chatterer of Chatsworth, also asked for admission to the club—provided the dues were not excessive. After buying Liberty Bonds, paying the preacher and sitting in the Sunday Morning Poker Club, there wasn't much left for dissipation. He sent a little sample of his war poetry. He said he had shown it to Lucinda Terwilliger, his sweetheart, who sings bass in the choir at Watts, and she said it was fine.

She meant fine and imprisonment.

Here is a fragment from the stock:

"There was a wild beast called the Kaiser,
Who would drain America dry, sir;
But over the top
Our Sammies did hop,
And blew the old geezer sky high,
sir."

Tommy Tomtom Thompson, the teasing tinkler of Tolusa, who writes songs on topics of the times, was opened up with a depth charge and gave forth this exhalation:

Forty Fat Commissioners.

Up in the north, in this land of sunshine,
Forty fat commissioners are standing in a line.
Forty fat commissioners—to do the work of five;
They claim this country as their own, and on it live and thrive.
Down in this Sunny Southland we have as many more,
A fact which makes the citizens feel mighty sad and sore;
And so the busy Mayor bravely
jumps into the fray,
And says: "Waste is the problem we are facing here today."
That the drain upon our business is continuous and great,
And demands a lessened pay roll for the city and the State.
That the useful man in service merits honor, rank and pay,
But with the drone in politics the law must do away.
Perhaps the best solution of the problem well might be
To put these drones in khaki for service 'cross the sea.

Some time ago it was reported that the Old Resident had wired $100 to Aggie Fish, who claimed to have been deserted by Jot Woof, the amorous blacksmith of Anaheim, and left stranded in a Topeka hotel. It was further said that he had heard nothing of her since, and that it was apparently merely another scheme of the scaly Fish woman to touch the old-timer's bundle for another century. Some of the club members began to josh the pioneer about it and would make a noise like an easy mark in his presence. Yesterday he had the laugh on them. There came a letter to his club, and when he opened it a brand-new note for 100 bucks fluttered to the floor. The letter was postmarked at Denver, and began by calling the veteran a dear old scout. Aggie admitted that Jot Woof had trifled with her affections and basely deserted her at the altar. She said that with the $100 sent her by the pioneer she had paid her hotel bill and dolled herself up so that she got a job as agent for the fund for buying curling irons for indigent Esquimaux dames. She sent him back his $100 out of her first week's collections, and added that J. Theodore Carnegie had found a great moving-picture story for her and would back her to the limit. She was going to have it filmed at the Happy Thought studio, and she asked the Old Resident to help her in hiring a bunch of actors for her support. One of the characters in the play was a Santa Claus, who looped the loop in an airplane and did other wonderful things, and she sought to have the Old Resident himself interpret this character. She thought that as a pioneer aeronaut he should be able to fill the part to perfection. Also his genial beauty would materially enhance the drawing qualities of the film. Since the incidental appearance of the old man as Cascaret in "Julius Sieze Her!" numerous tempting offers have been made to draw him more deeply into the movie game. Bolivar Morocco made a proposition to pay him $20,000 a week to appear in the tragedy, "Malted Milk, or the Pirate's Doom." He was also solicited to take the place of Bosco Carbuncle as Little Eva in the all-star case of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

But the Old Resident is not camera broke. Ever since he came out of the Joliet penitentiary, where he served his country for eighteen months because of his carelessness in collecting wives, he has been shy of the hens. It was just because of a tiny photograph that his seventh spouse got next to him, and so he has gradually grown shy of the photographer. Nevertheless, the old-timer films well, and it is quite likely that in the finals he will appear as Santa Claus with Aggie Fish.

Pearlie Gates, the brown thrush of the vista, favored the club with an announcement of the marriage of Mabel North to Silas W. West. She said that the combination moved her to song. It affected her in this way:

"What strange conditions here expressed,
What once was North is now turned West.
When Mabel made her apt selection,
She also changed her whole direction.
If by an heir this union's blest,
We'll find the son set in the West."

The department of knocks on the Kaiser is still running under full time. Carlotta Beans, the airy fairy of the Gerry dairy, submitted an offering, the first verse of which was like this:

"I hate to hate the hateful Huns,
'Cause I'm a poor despiser,
I'm loath to swear, but I declare,
I cuss the cussed Kaiser."

The Happy Thought band and orchestra has added further imperishable luster to its name through the acquisition of the original horn of Roland as a part of the collection of famous historical instruments. The fiddle of Nero is notable, but the horn of Roland is even more wonderful, as it was supposed to exist only in legend. To hear it in real life is a good deal like shaking hands with a ghost. This remarkable instrument will be played in the Happy Thought band by Oliver Towne, who has a uniform made in exact duplition of the armor worn by Roland at the battle of Ronces Valles. As Prof. Asa Hartz, the band leader, wears the armor of Charlemagne, it seems a wonderful thing to see the Frankish Emperor and his gallant nephew once more in their full panoply, marching down Broadway playing "You be the Papa and I'll be the Mamma."

That this is the original horn of Roland there can be no doubt. As near as can be made out the instrument was taken from Roland when his hand was stiffened in death. A finger-print expert certifies to the imprint of Roland, and there is a later impression of the thumb of Isaac Newton Roland, of Freeport, showing that the horn had been kept in the family.

The instruments was won in a poker game by Col. Bill Moody and afterward auctioned off for $1200 for the benefit of the Red Cross, the purchaser turning it over to the club as the proper repository. It is venerable and somewhat battered, but its tone is as clear as when it gave forth its clarion call in the death valley of the paladins. Its possession recalled the original legend which was briefly explained by Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes, curator and custodian at the symposium, yesterday:

"The French and the Dagos both have it. This Roland was one of the handiest scrappers that ever put on a mitt, and was the favorite nephew of that grand old geezer, Charlemagne. His uncle thought so much of him that he would have left him his shaving mug if he had croaked first. The old king had been running over Spain until his army's feet were calloused. They had taken everything in sight but Cordova, and Roland had been in on every mill. He had so much loot that his tent looked like the boudoir of one of the Follies. But Cordova was slow about giving up, and the besiegers got tired. The army wanted to go home and vote and see its wife. Roland and his bunch of handy mixers wanted to keep on fighting, but there was a peace party, and it was a large one. It seemed to be led by Ganelon J. Dub, who was a stepfather of Roland, but loved him about as much as Antwerp loves the Kaiser. He said the war could be settled by negotiation or a cribbage board, and so he was sent to try out his voice on the enemy. The foemen said they would do most anything if they could get the goat of Roland and his pet gang. This suited Ganelon clear down to the ground, so for a thousand beans and an acknowledgment that Charlemagne was the champion heavyweight of the world, he agreed to turn Roland over to them to play with.

"So Ganelon comes back and tells the King that everything is fine and the war is over. There is nothing to do but march back home, but to play safety, it would be best to let Roland and his pet huskies trail behind as a rear guard. So they fix it that way, and the big bunch heads for the old home and the rathskellar. The left-overs take things easy, go out on their own time, picking shamrocks and playing pinochle on the way. But on the second day out Orlando comes to the top of a hill and sees there's an army of 400,000 sassy Saracens down to see them off. They meant trouble too, for every guy had brought his shotgun with him. So Orlando hurries up and tells Roland about it and begs him to blow his bazoo. It seems that when Roland was a boy his royal uncle had given him a mouth organ and told him that any time he needed help if he would just play 'Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?' on it he would come to him if he had to do it on a crutch. So Orlando wanted Roland to blow his whistle while Charlemagne's hearing was still good.

"But Roland only laughed. 'It looks like a pretty good fight, but we can lick that bunch with our fingers crossed,' he said. 'It would be a shame to call uncle Charlie back to beat up these Indians. Go to it, boys.' So they went to it. Believe me that was some scrap. The things that Roland did to some of the star battlers of the Saracens was something frightful, but they kept coming up at the well known ratio of sixteen to one until Roland's guard was worn down to himself and fifty-seven other capable Pittsburgers. Every now and then one of them would beg Roland to blow his whistle, but he would always tell them he was out of wind or didn't know the tune.

"This couldn't last and finally everybody had croaked but Roland and he was all stove in and ready for the morgue. So just to show that he could do it he pulled out his whistle and sounded a note so loud and clear that it shook all the leaves from the trees in the vale of Vallambrosa. Charlemagne heard it way up on the Winchester road, twenty miles away. He came back with his army in time to hear Roland's last will and testament and then turned in and knocked the juice out of the Saracens."

It is this horn of Roland that now comes to the marvelous collection of the Happy Thought Band and orchestra. Other notable instruments of romance and history will be acquired when it is possible and representatives of the club are always on the lookout for treasures of this kind.

The Happy Thought Band and Orchestra, uniformed in armor of the knights of old and equipped with strange and marvelous instruments of great historical importance is the most wonderful organization of its class in the world.

Persons having knowledge of the existence and location of any trophies suited to its collection will do well to communicate with the club.

A NEW NATION BY JUGO-SLAVS.

State Planned a Year Ago by Serbs, Croats, Slovenes.

Many Southern Provinces to be Merged After War.

People's Greatest Desire is Freedom from Teutons.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. — The world is witnessing the birth of a new nation, that of the Jugo-Slavs, or Slavs of the south.

Whether the Austro-Hungarian empire will remain intact after the present war is a much-disputed question. The United States has announced definitely that it desires to see all branches of the Slav race completely freed from German and Austrian rule. To the minds of the southern or Jugo-Slavs this statement promises their long-hoped-for unity in a free state, Jugo-Slavia.

It is now over a year since members of the southern Slav nationalities—Serbs, Croats and Slovenes—met in London to map out a constitution and lay the foundation of an independent state for their peoples. The new state will include Serbia, Slavonia, Bosnia, Montenegro and the Slavic provinces held by Austria — Herzegovina, Croatia, Dalmatia, Istria, Carinthia, Carinola, Styria, Gorica and several smaller districts. Twelve millions of southern Slavs, if so many are left after the war, will inhabit the promised land, a country of some 90,000 square miles.

HARD TO COUNT.

It is almost impossible to estimate the present population of these provinces and countries. About one-third of Serbia's people are dead or in enemy hands, and the other Slavs have fared little better. The living—starved, ill, penniless, but kept up by faith in the Allies and hopes of peace and freedom—are the material of which the new state will be made. It rests with these people, bereft of all but an ideal, to decide the details of their government after the war.

One member of the Jugo-Slav council says: "Our aim is to get free from Austria. It is for the people to decide the exact form of government. A constitutional monarchy is best for our people because during our nation's existence it has always been a monarchy, and also Serbia and Montenegro have always preferred it. Eighty-six per cent. of our people are peasants and a monarchy is best for an industrial state." For these and other reasons it is believed by most Slavs in this country that a republican form of government will not be attempted.

The Russian republic, with its difficulties and tragedies, is cited by them as an unfortunate choice of the highest form of government by a people not yet ready for so great a responsibility. And so they say: "Freedom, yes; but not evolved in more upheaval than is necessary—freedom to work out our own development under the leadership of a wise patriot."

LONG PREYED UPON.

The history of the southern Slavs has been a succession of brave but mainly futile attempts to escape from the Austrian and Turkish yokes, and desperate defense against further encroachment upon their home lands. They have been the prey of each successive ruler with a trained army and nothing to fight. A Slav poet in a historic ballad stated truly:

"The tsars rob one another of the empire of the tsars,
And they yearn to slay each other with their gilded scimitars."

Even yet Serbian territory is looked upon covetously by more than one ruler, discontented with the extent of his kingdom. Many facts of history and diplomacy are produced by the Slavs to show that Austria, relying on Germany as an ally, seized upon the Archduke Francis Ferdinand's death as an excuse for war, so that the long-desired Serbian lands might be seized.

In the first days of war thousands of Slavs were forced by Austria into her army to fight against their Slav brothers with the Serbian forces. Over 120,000 of these Jugo-Slavs deserted at the first opportunity and went over to join the Serbs. One hundred and fifty thousand Slavs sent to the Russian front followed their example, in spite of knowledge of unspeakable treatment should they be taken back by Austria as prisoners. Nearly 1,000,000 Jugo-Slav soldiers are counted as dead, wounded or prisoners.

SICK OF OPPRESSION.

It is not for sentimental reasons that the Slavs are so eager for liberty from Austrian rule. The Teuton and Magyar elements, although in the minority as regards population, have always held control of Austro-Hungarian political and national matters, much to the disadvantage of the Slavs. Under a thin veneer of so-called liberty allowed to the Southern Hungarian provinces, they exert the force of an absolute monarchy oppressing all signs of Slavic patriotism and independence. Of the 750,000 Jugo-Slavs in America it is estimated that about 80 per cent. came here because of Austrian oppression.

In time of war this oppression is at its worst. Children and old men are conscripted. Subjects of all ages are imprisoned and interned for trivial offenses or for no offense at all. Austrian papers announce calmly that the people are dying of starvation in the streets and villages of Hungary. For these people, under Austrian rule, the Allies can do nothing, as there is small chance of gifts being allowed to reach them. The Jugo-Slav council reports that the Americans and other Allies are doing a great deal to help the Slavs in the Serbian army and on Serbian ground.

HONEST-MINDED FOLK.

The southern Slavs have never been able to cope with Teutonic diplomacy and blackmail. They are an unsuspicious, frank and sympathetic people, brave to recklessness in a fair fight, but at a hopeless disadvantage when suave Austrian politicians are juggling away their rights and liberty. One injustice against which they have long struggled is the prohibition of the use of their national language, beloved of all the southern Slavs of Hungary. The foundation of universities or even secondary schools in Slav provinces is discouraged, in many cases forbidden, so that for higher education the Slavs are forced to go to Prague and other cities where the language of their people is seldom heard. In many of the provinces German is the langu by the governmen in grade schools, Slavs may not grow through education insurrection throug ers.

On July 4 the Ju and dedicated their flag at Washington cross of the Serbs, of the Slovenes, and Croats were combined of a blue field in token interests and ideals of peoples.

German is the language prescribed by the government to be used in grade schools, so that the Jugo-Slavs may not grow too powerful through education or be stirred to insurrection through native leaders.

On July 4 the Jugo-Slavs unfurled and dedicated their newly designed flag at Washington. The white cross of the Serbs, checkered shield of the Slovenes, and eagle of the Croats were combined in the center of a blue field in token of unity of interests and ideals of the three peoples.

"The enemy can no longer succeed in dividing us," said the Serbian Minister at the celebration. "In this struggle we will all die or become free and united."

"Conscientious Objector" has Sudden Change of Heart at Camp Funston.

The receiving station here handles many strange cases, but it established its best record today when it took in an apparently incurable conscientious objector and turned him out a soldier, eager and willing to fight for his country.

The objector, bearded, with long unshorn locks, and voicing his opposition to war in any form, was sincere, apparently, in his religious beliefs and in his determination to refuse to bear arms.

It's a hard person, however, who can view the receiving station, with its barracks full of boys, eagerly waiting the process which will start them on their way to their country's war, without being touched. In the words of the recent spectator, "It gets you," and himself an occupant of one of the barracks, the objector gradually commenced to "get" the all-permeating feeling.

He didn't propound his religious views as he listened to the conversation of the boys in his contingent. When his turn came to enter "the chutes," as the receiving station proper has been dubbed, he entered with a serious mien and in deep thought.

He looked out of place with his flowing locks and beard. He may have sensed the many curious looks given him, but he said nothing.

He passed the medical examination as an excellent specimen of physical manhood and finally arrived at the place where the uniforms are fitted. He hesitated for a moment, then he advanced with determination written on his face and spoke for the first time since his entry.

"Give me a uniform," he said. "Where is a barber?"

Fifteen minutes later a fine, clean-shaven, manly looking chap reported.

"Well, I'll be jiggered," said the sergeant, after the former objector had left with his squad for the detention camp. "I've heard a lot through 'the chutes' would jar a man his religion, but I never thought to see it happen."—[Camp Funston correspondence, Kansas City Star.

PICKPOCKET ALARM.

Novel Invention for Protection of Pocketbooks the Work of a New Yorker.

An electrical pickpocket alarm by which a bell rings when a thief attempts to remove your pocketbook from your pocket has been invented by John P. Williams of New York City.

The electric alarm actuating device is made separate from the pocketbook or wallet and it is provided with a switch on the exterior, so that the owner can open the electric alarm circuit when he wishes to remove the wallet or other pocketbook himself, without starting a riot.

The inventor has provided a double wall on the protective pocket, holding the wallet or pocketbook, this wall containing two oppositely charged metallic plates, or other suitable arrangement of wires or conductors, separated by a layer of insulation and so connected with the battery and bell that should the thief try to pierce the wall of the pocket with any instrument or knife he will short circuit the two metal plates and thus cause the bell to ring.

When the pocketbook, or wallet, is placed in the protective pocket, which is firmly secured in the trousers or coat pocket by a clip provided for the purpose, it is caused to close the alarm circuit by the force of gravity, or in other words, by its own weight. The control switch is supposed to be opened while the wallet is being placed in the container, and it slides all the way down in the same, thus causing the contacts to be held normally apart by a spring arrangement. Then the switch is closed.

If the thief should now attempt to remove the wallet, the gravity actuated contacts will come together and ring the bell.

The inventor suggests two schemes, in one of which the bell as well as the battery is placed in the wallet protector case, while in the second type the bell and battery are placed in a separate container resembling a watch, and which may be worn in the vest pocket. In this case the alarm case is connected with the wallet protector switch by means of a fine flexible two-wire conductor.—[Electrical Experimenter.

Don't Embarrass Cripples.

"Our bearing toward our disabled soldiers hasn't been much tested so far," writes Caroline Avis in an article on the reconstruction of maimed fighting men in Everybody's for August.

"But already one has heard of the one-legged boy in khaki embarrassed beyond endurance by a street crowd of curious sympathizers; of the wounded man to whom a well-meaning stranger insisted on presenting money to show gratitude; of the soldier with an empty sleeve halted with inquiries for his story. All fine enough impulses in themselves, but holding the germ of disaster for the maimed man. To set the crippled soldier apart in a class by himself, to make him think of himself as a hero, or—if he is capable of that—to accept hero worship, to overwhelm him with sentimentality, or to offer even the most refined form of pity, is to do him incalculable harm. One expert says 'reeducation should begin upon the return of consciousness,' so dangerous is idleness and will [illegible] of despair between injury and restoration to health."

ous Russian Opera Singer at Orpheum

Carl Jorn,

whose beautiful voice will be heard in Los Angeles this week in arias from the great operas.

"Go to ——!"

ARL JORN'S MESSAGE TO THE GERMAN KAISER.

"YOU tell the Kaiser to go to h——!" This is exactly the answer that Carl Jorn, the famous tenor of the Metropolitan Opera House of New York, gave to Ambassador Von Bernstorff in Washington about two years ago before the United States entered the war. The singer had been summoned to the German Embassy to receive an order from the Kaiser to return forthwith to Berlin to sing for the royal personage. Unable to see why he should heed the command of the German ruler, whom he never did like anyway, Jorn gave his answer quickly and clearly.

The command in the first place was due to a mistaken belief on the part of the Kaiser that Jorn is a German. That is not so. Jorn is an American citizen, and before becoming one he was a citizen of Russia, having been born in Riga. Germany's ridiculous claim on him was based on the fact that at one time he had been a star in the Royal Opera of Berlin. But since Jorn has sung in all the capitals of Europe, he might as well have been claimed, under that method of reasoning, by England or by France.

Coming to America about eight years ago, Jorn took out his first naturalization papers two years later. Five years ago he made application for his final papers, and while the matter was being investigated, the United States declared war on Germany. Because of Germany's claim upon Jorn, his case created a little tangle, but he proved to Uncle Sam's satisfaction that he was not and never had been a German subject, and so he was granted his final citizenship papers, thus becoming in fact what he had always been at heart—an American. A letter from William Jennings Bryan helped him.

Then, just to prove that he thought his American citizenship worth while, he gave up several thousand dollars worth of contracts to sing for the Red Cross. He never declines to give his services for a worthy cause, particularly when it has reference to war work.

Of course, Jorn does not expect ever again to sing in Germany, but he doesn't worry about that. Although he loves to sing more than anything else in the world, he would sooner retire to the 200-acre farm he has purchased in Pennsylvania than pour out his liquid notes for the benefit of the Kaiser and his family.

He realizes that his German-sounding name causes confusion, but he is intent on proving he is as good an American as those boys who, despite the handicap of their Teutonic names, are fighting for the Allied cause "over there."

CANNERY WORK DONE BY WEALTHY WOMEN.

PAID MINIMUM WAGE IN WISCONSIN FOR AIDING IN LABOR SHORTAGE.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 3.—Wives and daughters of wealthy citizens in the Wisconsin pea-canning districts have entered the canneries to aid the labor situation. On Saturday they line up for their pay envelopes and receive a minimum wage for their ten hours' work.

Forty per cent. of the peas canned in the United States are put up in Wisconsin plants.

Earlier in the season pea packers expressed grave fears of a serious labor shortage, and pointed to the Food Administration's request for all the peas possible.

George P. Hambrecht, labor commissioner, after a conference with Food Administrator Hoover, sent labor commission employees into all homes and obtained pledges from women in all walks of life to work in the canneries if called upon.

Then a conference was arranged with the packers, who were informed that they would be provided with help if they paid the women a minimum wage, established a ten-hour working day except in an emergency, and then not more than twelve hours, and made proper sanitary arrangements.

The packers signed an agreement, the women who had pledged their services were called on; the response was most satisfactory, and the canneries now are operating with a full force.

Germania.

Medusa of the nations, see her stand
Implacable, detestate, treacherous, base,
Without a scruple and without a trace
Of honor, a sword within her murderous hand!
Secret and subtle, now with smilings bland
Wreathing the sleek insidiousness of her face,
Assassin and despoiler of the race
That, saith the word, the Eternal Master planned!

Shall she debauch the world with her foul creed
Of might transcendent, frightfulness supreme,
Her god a god as brutal as was Baal?
Oh, might we rouse from out this hideous dream,
To see some power omnipotent, at our need,
Smiting this monster till she cringe and quail!

When Twilight Comes.

When twilight comes, o'er all the penitential air
Of sweet, repentant day there falls the holy hush of prayer.
Far in the West one splash of vivid color glows,
Where careless day dropped down one crimson rose
Upon pale evening's dusky, loosened hair.

O fleeting time of all the radiant hours most fair!
Brief time when waiting souls the universal heart may share;
The brooding worlds their deepest truths disclose—
When twilight comes.

One candle lights the pale-green eastern sky; one golden candle gleaming where
The faint sad night lies dreaming. Pale priestly moths some ghostly solace bear
To suppliant blossoms in my garden. There the shrouded hearts of gold that shall unclose
With dawn's first kiss, a sweet expectance hold. Around them flows Soft-breathing peace. For to a garden, as of old, God doth repair—
When twilight comes.

The Patio.

I have grown weary of the mesa's splendor,
The goldent desert and the wind-swept height.
Draw the soft curtains from the narnow window,
Leave me the quiet patio tonight.

Here the clouds rest above the gray cathedral,
While the sky mellows with the sunset glow.
Here the brown leaves may stop and rest a little,
Where the brown robins softly come and go.

Gray poplar boughs grow grayer in the twilight,
The cedar top points ever toward its star.
Slowly the dusk enfolds the walls and chimneys,
Softly the moon mounts, graciously afar
Glows the dream beauty of the night's deep purple,
And I grow peaceful as the poplars are.

Tomorrow I shall seek the vast horizons,
Shall dare the cliffs, the peaks, the dizzy light,
Shall drink the wind on bleak and lonely mesas.
Give me the tender patio tonight.

Tired.

It would seem good if I could git
As tired as what I used to be
When I'd sprawl out, out on the grass,
An' father would come out for me
An' pick me up an' lay me down
In mother's arms, all in a heap,
An' say to her, "The little toad
Is tired out an' fast asleep."

An' she would loose my buttons and
An' she'd git my nightie clean an' white
An' sort o' coax me into it,
An' kiss me an' tell me good night,
An' lug me off upstairs to bed,
An' stand an' look at me awhile,
Then she would look at father, and
The both of them would sort of smile.

Plum tired out with too much play,
Too sleepy even to undress,
And then a little snugglin' up,
An 'then a little tenderness;
It would seem good if I could get
As tired as what I used to be
When I'd sprawl out, out on the grass,
An' father would come out for me.

Hand-painted Lingerie.

The prediction for future feminine frilliness comes in the form of promised hand-painted lingerie. Just how this artistic feat is to be accomplished we are not told, and this makes it all the more interesting since the human mind loves to dwell upon mystery in whatever shape. We have seen the oriental robes of silk, hand painted daintily in floral effects. Will the forthcoming lingerie resemble this? Or, will the work be done in panelling and applied to the fabric of the garment? The clothes Sphynx answereth not, but girl artists are getting out their palettes in order to be ready when this latest of fashion's fads arrives.

Fashion's Frifles.

A dotted and frilled collar with cuffs to match is charming on a gown of serge.

A good voile waist has a square tucked collar and a front panel of horizontal tucks.

Some of the most charming of present-day garments are the little bibbed aprons.

Color is more fashionable than ever before in the clothing of even little babies.

Marquisette, to make a really charming gown, should be embroidered in fine steel beads.

Flesh-colored crepe de chine is as often used for infants' dresses as for their mothers' chemises.

A baby's bewitching cap can be made of rows of puffed net separated by insertions of tatting.

A girl's navy serge frock may have facings of red or Copenhagen blue with charming effect.

A guimpe, collar set or organdie may do everything toward giving a new effect to an old dress.

A parasol which is really stylish is of beige silk lined with green, and has a big hooked rustic handle.

Many blouses have a charming neckline which is the result of the collar and yoke being cut in one piece.

Now that all woolens have become so precious, many an old serge frock will be brought out and remodelled.

A few charming hats have long, sweeping plumes, which seem to weigh the hat down very much on one side.

Oxfords and pumps made of combinations of leather have lately been taken up by the well-dressed people.

Now that women are working every minute of the day, aprons of every conceivable sort are in fashion.

CHILE TO INCREASE PAPER MANUFACTURE.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The shortage of paper has led to a government investigation of the paper manufacturing possibilities in Chile. Paper manufacturers of the republic have held several conventions to ascertain the capacity of their factories and grades of paper that can be manufactured in the country.

There are now in Chile nine paper factories, with a total production of 7,500,000 kilos (of 2.20 pounds) annually. They are capitalized at 3,500,000 pesos and employ 400 men.

The newspapers of Chile have been alarmed at the scarcity of print paper, due to the shortage in the United States and the lack of vessels to transport what paper could be obtained in this country and elsewhere in the world. It has been developed that the big factories in Chile can make print paper out of the raw material obtainable in Chile, and they have already begun the output. This will be increased as rapidly as possible. In the southern part of the republic vast acreage of timber land produces sufficient pulp wood to supply the needs of the manufacturers for many years.

After Seven Years.

THE CLARKES ARE BACK HOME FROM THE ORIENT.

HOME again from seven years of theatrical touring, mostly in the Orient, are Harry Corson Clarke and his wife, Margarte Dale Owen, both of them noted on the stage. They were lionized in most countries, bombarded by Zeppelins in London and nearly killed during the troubles in India. With Lillian Nordica, they were guests at Lord Denman's Governor's ball in Melbourne, the last time that the illustrious American singer appeared in public.

"We represented the American stage, Mrs. Clarke and I," said the actor in narrating this. "Mme. Nordica represented operatic America, and Lew Waller and Madge Titheridge the English stage. That was in 1914, if I remember correctly. Nordica wore the famous emeralds that had been presented to her by the Czar of Russia. She was radiant, queenly."

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke are planning to establish a permanent home in California, though without giving up the stage. Clarke said:

"It was seven years ago next January that I left California. We did every bit of the Hawaiian Islands. Then I sent my American company back, and Mrs. Clarke and I went to Australia, where we remained two years. We had two theaters, the Bijou and the Majestic, in Melbourne. With our stock company we toured Australia and New Zealand. Then we dismissed our players and proceeded through Java, New Guinea, the Celebes, Straits Settlements and Ceylon, occupy a year on the tour to London,

"In Java they called me the 'Orang comedie,' meaning comedian, or anything funny. With a big company we toured England and Scotland and made a flying trip to Panama and the Canal Zone, returning to England, then back to India and the other Oriental countries. We carry souvenirs of Zeppelins that nearly got us in London.

"On the oriental trip we followed Tim Frawley and his company, but couldn't overtake them. Tim left a splendid reputation all through the Orient. From July 6 until our arrival here we were unable to get any news or mail from home, and the first thing I did upon arrival in San Francisco was to telegraph my mother in New York and ask her if she was still alive. She replied that she was, and I certainly was mighty glad to know it."

Clarke said that the English language is generally spoken all along the route that he traveled, that the patronage of the drama is large, and that the people in all countries, especially Australia, are very fond of it.

Exemption from duty upon entry into Canada is granted for machines for agricultural purposes when brought by settlers, and if actually owned abroad by the persons who enter them for at least six months before removal to Canada.

Traits.

WHAT ANIMAL ARE YOU? ASKS DOROTHY PHILLIPS.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS, the emotional star, while not a Theosophist, has a pet theory that the human race is not so far removed from its brute ancestors, but that in every person, man or woman, can be traced a resemblance to some lower animal.

She does not believe that departed human souls return in the form of beasts of the field or birds of the air, but her idea is that every human being has a series of traits that ties him or her up definitely with similar traits of either some one domestic or wild animal.

In "The Mortgaged Wife," Miss Pillips persuaded her director, Allen Holubar, that her theory could be worked out on the screen. To humor the well-known star, Holubar did so, and each of the four principal characters is portrayed as an animal.

Miss Phillips, as the bride of defaulting bank teller, is seen as "The Lamb;" her sneaking, worthless husband as "The Coyote;" the master financier, to whom she is mortgaged to make good her husband's $50,000 defaulting, as "The Panther;" and his secretary, who is in reality a German spy, is designated as "The Fox," because of his shrewd cunning.

New York critics who saw this picture in preview have commented favorably on this sensational innovation, and Miss Phillips is happy over the fact that her theory has been partially proven, on the screen at least.

"The Mortgaged Wife" shows Miss Phillips in an entirely different sort of a role from her past releases, and promises to add greatly to the prestige she already enjoys in the world of films.

CORPER AND TWITCHEL WRITE MUSICAL COMEDY.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

NEARLY everybody writes plays and almost nobody gets produced. Of course, there are exceptions, which same keeps everybody at it. The hope that springs eternal in the human breast amounts to madness in the playwright.

After having been like nearly everybody else for many years, Mike Corper, former manager of the Burbank Theater for Oliver Morosco, and now an independent play broker with offices in the Majestic Building, has suddenly become unlike nearly everybody else by getting himself produced.

Mr. Corper is not entirely to blame. The plot responsible for his bursting into fame was first conceived by Waldo Twitchel, a young man burning with ambition, who started out by being born at Las Vegas, N. M., and wound up by receiving a high literary education in one of the large eastern universities.

Young Twitchel returned to New Mexico to find that his father was still hopelessly addicted to being chief counsel for the Santa Fe Railway, and he decided to profit by this baleful example of his elder and carve a career for himself in a line where success would be less tainted with wealth. Accordingly he wrote the scenario for a musical comedy and brought it to California, rich in ideation and wholly innocent of lyrics and notes.

He nearly fell into my clutches, for Paul A. F. Walter, dean of New Mexican letters and executive editor of El Palacio, the most beautiful and probably most useful magazine in America, gave Twitchel a letter to me, in which he said that the young man's musical [illegible] destined to bring [illegible] desolate lives of people [illegible] New York, and that Los Angeles critics ought to do what they [illegible] by way of recommending [illegible] of sanity to that money-mad [illegible]

Anyway, the Oliver Morosco of San Francisco opened the doors of the Cort Theater there to "Up In the Air," by Mike Corper and Waldo Twitchel, and the same will be seen and heard at the Cort the week beginning August 18.

If our northern suburb finds it an agreeable production, it will be brought to Los Angeles for metropolitan approval, and both young men have an army of friends in the Southwest who are waiting breathlessly to hear the worst.

LAZINESS IS HENRI DE VRIES S GREATEST ASSET

CONTRADICTING all the maxims ever written regarding the crime of laziness and upsetting all the theories on the subject, Henri De Vries, who appears in the spectacular one-act drama, "Camouflage," avers that he owes his success to the fact that in his youth he was considered the laziest boy in his neighborhood in the little Dutch village whence he comes.

Ever since he can remember, De Vries says, his one constant thought has always been how to live with the minimum expenditure of physical effort. When he was a boy, it was his job, among other jobs, to water, feed, curry and otherwise play nurse girl to the family horses. At first he liked his work, then, when it began to bore him, he started to look round for a way of relieving the monotony.

He finally rigged up a most remarkable contrivance which he assured himself and his parents would take care of the horses automatically. Something went wrong, however, at the trial, and the thing, instead of feeding the horses with oats and currying them with the currycomb, turned around and curried them with the oats and fed them with the currycomb, nearly choking them to death. Thus ended his first experience as an inventor.

But the fire of inventiveness, which till then had smoldered unnoticed in the boy, suddenly broke forth into flames. It being his duty to carry water to the house, he immediately fell upon the scheme of building a sort of trolley system so as to eliminate his work. The idea succeeded, and thenceforth he carried no more water. But there still remained the job of hauling up the heavy buckets from the well, and he circumvented this by building an arrangement based on the Archimedean principle, which, though it did not eliminate his work entirely, so reduced the effort that a child of 5 could have done it just as well.

De Vries's parents took heed of the boy's inventive genius, and sent him to one of the big [illegible] technical schools, where he developed his talent until he became recognized as one of the youngest inventors of Europe. Several years ago the stage fascinated him, and he became an actor with acknowledged success. He found that he could utilize his technical talent to good advantage, and he has been doing so, "Camouflage" being his latest creation.

Louis Gottschalk, well known in musical circles, and recently associated with Lasky, has severed his connections with that organization in order to act as co-director with the author, in the production of the Harold Bell Wright films.

Their Propaganda Pictures.

Not only are most of the Artcraft and Paramount stars busy on feature pictures these days, but they're also finding time to make propaganda pictures for the government. Doug Fairbanks has just finished one. Fred Stone is starting another, and Roscoe Arbuckle is beginning one that was written for him by Adam Hull Shirk. Bill Hart is doing a patriotic western.

A Double Heroine.

Josie Sedgwick, Triangle star, who does some excellent work in the Triangle production, "Wild Life" featuring Bill Desmond, posed for the final scenes of this photoplay under the most painful circumstances. Just when the picture was about half finished, Josie suffered a slight fall, resulting in what appeared at first to be only a sprained tendon, but which later proved to be a broken ankle. This mishap threatened to tie up the production indefinitely, as Josie's role was vital to the plot and she could not be doubled. But this brave little lady, despite her doctor's orders and with her ankle in plaster, came to the studios, and although she suffered excrutiating pain, worked in the final sets and thus enabled Director Otto to finish the picture within the scheduled time.

subject of masterpieces of great artists, is well shown in the celluloid adaptation by Allan Dawn, who has also directed the production. Needless to say, the photoplay is filled with many thrilling situations, abundant comedy and a plethora of Fairbanksian stunts which make this offering one long to be remembered. The leading lay is Pauline Curley, a beautiful and talented acrtess; Tully Marshall and Frank Campeau are also in the cast.

Alhambra.

"A Romance of the Underworld,' a tense story of human interest and thrills, will be the attraction at the Alhambra beginning today. The picture was produced under the direction of James Kirkwood, and was adapted from the play of the same name by the late Paul Armstrong, and stars the young and beautiful Catherine Calvert, who played the leading part in the stage production. Play and picture deal with scenes and events of New York's great underworld. The story, told in six thrilling reels, has as its principal character a young and innocent girl, Doris Elliott, whose life is suddenly transplanted from the saintly seclusion of a convent to the wicked, yet, picturesque surroundings of the underworld. Unknowingly, she falls in with a gang of "dope" fiends and political heelers, dominated by an unscrupulous boss, Mike O'Leary. It is a terrible shock to her when she discovers that her brother, Richard, is a member of the gang. Mr. Armstrong knew his New York as perhaps no other man ever knew it, and he has brought it all to us in this thrilling tale of its people.

Kinema.

Elsie Ferguson, in Robert Chamber's "The Danger Mark," at the Kinema this week, is an exceedingly fine Elsie Ferguson picture in more ways than one. She plays the leading role so capably that the play as a screen play is entitled to be classed away above the ordinary. In less competent hands, the sensational Chambers story would have been sure to shock the spectator. Handled by Miss Ferguson in rare style, however, these biting scenes are put over with consummate skill. "The Danger Mark" is good entertainment, for it follows the novel, which was an American best-seller. The story, as many readers know, tells of a young heiress, who inherited a failing that brought about the downfall of both her father and his father before him. Hedged round by luxury, a watchful mother attempts to shield her from the skeleton in the closet, until the day of her coming-out party arrives, and then, in startling manner the rattling bones of the dead past issue forth to cast its blight. From then on a terrific battle takes place, which is eventually won by the woman.

Superba.

Give! Give! Give! That was the identical cry of two beautiful women. One demanded the things of luxury, fine clothes, jewels and wine. The other demanded fidelity, pure love and trust. The first woman was a serpent-like parasite basking in light of decent society. The other woman was a wife—a good wife, the woman he had sworn on the altar to love and cherish. Ralph Carter, a bank clerk, was torn between two loves, one false, the other good. He was beset on all sides by money wolves who demanded payment for what he had embezzled. He mortgaged his wife. If you would see a photodrama that has startled spectators by its brilliant daring, see Dorothy Phillips this coming week at the Superba in "The Mortgaged Wife." She is seen as a bride given in pawn to another man by a scoundrel husband who would secure his own freedom at the expense of the woman who loved him. Dorothy Phillips again proves her versatility in this newest Superba offering. With her is a supporting cast including William Stowell, Albert Roscoe, Edwin August, Sam De Grasse and other notables.

Symphony.

"Opportunity," a comedy-drama of everyday life starring clever Viola Dana, will be the coming week's feature at the Symphony, along with Harold Lloyd and beautiful Bebe Daniels in their latest comedy, "Bride and Gloom," and some new views from the battlefields of France in the Pathe News. "Why shouldn't a girl attend a prize fight?" That is the question that starts the trouble—and fun—in "Opportunity." And as Mary Willard, a "tomboy" who follows the manly art of self-defense, Viola Dana can't see any reason and attends a fistic bout dressed up in her brother's clothes. It is while watching two fighters pummel each other that her opportunity is presented to her. Believing her to be a boy, she is taken in custody by a business rival of her father, who decides to give "the wayward boy" a chance in life. The girl's father, fearing that she has been kidnaped, notifies the police, and detectives are put on her trail. A series of complicated situations arise from this point on.

Miller's.

William Farnum, one of the most popular moving-picture stars, will be seen at Miller's beginning today, in his biggest hit, "The Plunderer." Here is a picture everybody will like because it is of a type that is thoroughly human. It is the story of a fight for gold and for the love of a pretty and daring girl. William Farnum shows his wonderful dramatic ability from beginning to end, and he fights the bad men of the West with a vigor that makes you hold on to your seat for fear he'll lose his struggle for what is right. "The Plunderer" is a picturization of Roy Norton's well-known novel, and those who have seen it say that it is even better than the story and that William Farnum makes the hero, Bill Matthews, a living, breathing personality who will win the hearts of every one in the audience. Mr. Farnum's supporting company includes Harry Spingler, William Riley, Hatch Claire Whitney, Elizabeth Eyre and other favorites.

Garrick.

A seven-course banquet of fun will be on the Garrick menu for the coming week, with Fatty Arbuckle and little Baby Marie Osborne acting as hosts. The corpulent comedian will serve many morsels of mirth in his latest Paramount comedy, "The Cook," while the "Little Mary Sunshine" of the movies will dispense fun in her delightful comedy drama, "Cupid by Proxy." Fatty Arbuckle has the title role in "The Cook," and dressed in his neat cap and apron he is naturally funny, but when he starts to supplying "eats" to his guests in the picture, the real feast for the Garrick patrons begins. Fatty is a regular cook, though, and his bill of fare should prove beneficial to theatergoers, as an old proverb advises every one to "Laugh and grow fat." "Cupid by Proxy" is declared to be a most interesting story, containing many comic and dramatic situations that give Baby Marie Osborne unlimited opportunities to display her talent as a versatile screen star.

Palace.

The Kaiser should see William S. Hart in "Selfish Yates" at the Palace this week. In scenes replete with rapid-fire action and thrills the picture drives home the point that true happiness is found only in doing good to others, and the man who exclaims, "To hell with the other fellow," will never experience the great joy of living. This remarkable screen story was directed by no less person that the popular star himself, under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. As usual Hart is supported by an excellent cast, his leading woman being beautiful Jane Novak. Following the Hart drama, a screamingly funny Charlie Chaplin film, "Musical Tramps," will be presented, after which Chester Gonklin and Mack Swain will amuse all with their antics in a corking Keystone comedy.

De Luxe.

Douglas Fairbanks, who appears in "Say Young Fellow," at the De Luxe this afternoon and evening, and on Monday, has been rightly termed the greatest optimistic force in the field of the silent drama. In this latest and best film production he laughs his way through a stirring drama filled with typical Fairbanks philosophy and fun, in which he is seen as a cub reporter on a large morning paper. The way in which he goes after his "story" is enough to inspire any young man who has great tasks ahead of him. The story is replete with action, fun and thrills. Manager Schaffer announces the following attractions: Tuesday and Wednesday, "The Biggest Show on Earth," Enid Bennett star; Thursday and Friday, "The Doll's House;" Saturday, "Up Romance Road," and next Sunday Jack Pickford in "Mile-a-Minute Kendall."

HOW LAWRENCE GRANT PLAYED GERMAN KAISER.

"WELL, there's no harm done, anyway, and he got a nice ride for his troubles."

"But, sergeant, he says that the scene is no good and we've got to take it over again."

"If that's so, Corp. Manley, you tell Mr. Lawrence Grant to call tomorrow. This machine and its little pilot are about to retire for peaceful slumber."

"All right, sir."

So Corp. Manley walked across the big field where Kaiser Wilhelm stood twirling his mustache and shaking the dust off his brilliant field uniform. "Willie" had just taken a ride in an American battleplane, and he confessed that the experience was his first. He was all upset. He had been captured by a detachment of the American Aviation Corps, and he was not at all sure about his future destinies. It was a sad world, for all these American boys had one thought in their minds. "To Hell with the Kaiser!" Willie was much afraid of being delivered to His Satanic Majesty of the lower regions.

Corp. Manley seemed to be on good speaking terms with the Kaiser. He patted him on the shoulder and explained to him that he could take another ride tomorrow. The service corps could not oblige again this day.

So Kaiser Wilhelm (Lawrence Grant) said good-by to the corporal and seemed satisfied. As the German Emperor walked across the field, his sword glittering in the fading sun, Corp. Manley cast a wistful glance at his retreating figure.

"Oh, boy, but I wish you were the real Kaiser! You certainly look like the old Potsdam monster. Here I've captured you twice today, and I've got to do it all over again tomorrow. And the boys are certainly itching to get at the real thing. Why, they'd go through a brick wall after seeing the pictures you took!"

Corp. Manley felt very sad. For two weeks he had been working in a picture called "To Hell with the Kaiser," some of its important scenes being filmed with the kindly co-operation of the United States government. Fifty American battleplanes did some buzzing and bombing when they set out to get the Hun leader, and Corp. Manley went along every time.

Seeing the Kaiser play his hellish tricks every day made Corp. Manley eager and anxious to get a whack at him. It wasn't Lawrence Grant's fault that he looked so much like Wilhelm, but the corporal certainly felt like driving his bayonet through the actor. Mr. Grant seemed to sense just the importance of the corporal's feelings, for always he would keep a watchful eye on the soldier. Today the airplane had refused to work just according to Hoyle, so the Kaiser had to be captured again on the morrow.

"And the funny part of it all," mused the corporal, "is that this man Grant is an Englishman. An English Kaiser, don't yer know."

Lawrence Grant, who was born in England, and who had visited Berlin on many occasions, was the final choice of the Metro Corporation for the impersonation of the role of the Kaiser in their big patriotic picture, "To Hell with the Kaiser."

Corp. Manley's name doesn't appear on the programme, but he's there, heart and soul, with 1000 other American boys who helped during the filming of the production.

A BAS THE SOB ENTER COMEDY.

'scapes by land and see," that thrill and thrill again. But for the spectator who can see it there is also a rich and merry vein of satire—one sees the author with his tongue in his cheek. And then for those who love humor of the obvious sort, there are comedy surprise situations and action as full of pep as a fighting bull-pup in training, and there are crisp and brisk subtitles which make the plot fairly snap and crackle along on its way.

But while an ironic fate is supposed to deny a film hero real heroism, Russell is known as a doer of deeds of valor off screen as well as on. It's not from himself I know it, either, but by chance from friends in Santa Barbara, who tell various stories in which Bill figures as an off-stage hero, one of which is the truth about his fire fighting in the Mission Canyon up there.

It was several months ago when there occurred one of the biggest forest fires that the Santa Barbara Mountains have ever known. Hundreds of fire-fighters battled for days with the red demon. Russell had been out of the city, but when he returned to find the fire raging in the canyon, threatening the mission, he pulled off his coat and drove his big red car as near as he could to the blaze, seized the wet gunny sacks provided and started in to do his bit. Then somebody cried out, "There's a woman and two children in that cabin over there! It's almost surrounded!"

Bill waited to hear no more, but running back to his panting Cadillac Six, he stepped on her hard, and while the flames blistered the sides of his car, he crossed the bridge which already had caught fire. But he reached the cabin in time. He found the woman and her two children huddled panic-stricken and half-stifled with smoke on the floor of the front room. Grabbing the youngsters one by each hand and bidding the woman follow, he fairly hurled them into the car, threw his big coat over them, and flew back to safety across the blazing bridge.

Of course, Bill's hair and clothing were singed and his skin badly blistered. And if you had seen him do that in a picture, you'd just say, now, wouldn't you?—"Oh, fudge! Picture heroes never really do anything like that!"

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

The Financial World, New York, tells a story of an unnamed patriot, owning a block of stock in a machine gun company who is paying every cent of his war profits to the Red Cross and other war activity organizations. His extra dividends were $300,000 before the United State entered the war. All this money was turned over to various voluntary organizations when the United States joined the Allies and all the extra dividends since then have gone the same way.

More than 200,000 colored women are awaiting call to go to Europe as Red Cross nurses, and although they have not been permitted to go heretofore, some have been sent, and others will be. This is the statement of Mrs. Edward Cannady, Portland, Or., who was a delegate to the convention of the National Association of Colored Womman's Clubs held in Denver recently. Mrs. Cannady is chairman of the department of public posters and prints of the national organization. "Those who, years ago, thought and said the colored woman had no ideals, that morality was foreign to her," said Mrs. Cannady, "that she would never accomplish anything worth while, needed only to glance at the mass of notable women gathered at their convention in Denver, and if any trace of that belief still lurked in their minds, it would have instantly been dispelled." Mrs. Cannady is associate editor of the Advocate, the colored people's paper in Portland, and has been in the forefront in war work among her people. She has been identified with the Red Cross auxiliary and is chairman of its knitting department.

Miss Thyrza Chambliss, daughter of Dr. E. L. Chambliss, Kansas City, has enrolled in the United States Student Nurses Reserve. She is the third and last of Dr. Chambliss's children to enlist in the cause of the Allies. When Eaton R. Chambliss, the elder son, found that an accident which cost him two fingers would keep him out of the army, he went to work making munitions for Uncle Sam at the Dupont Powder Mills, Nashville, Tenn. E. Lawrence Chambliss, the younger son, enlisted in the Regular Army last year and is now at the field hospital headquarters of the American Army in France.

There is a practical common-sense purpose in the gift of $1,500,000 just made to the University of Chicago by La Verne W. Noyes, Chicago philanthrpoist, who, by the way, was born in New York State. The fund is to be used in the education of soldiers and sailors and of their descendants after the war. In addition to providing free tuition for these the fund is to perpetuate instruction in American history and the public duties of citizenship. These are subjects upon which coming generations of Americans cannot be too well informed. Mr. Noyes's gift is inspired by an intelligent and patriotic purpose, and is likely to find many emulators among wealthy persons who desire to devote their millions to causes that will permanently promote intelligent and public spirited citizenship.—[New York Herald.

HOW AN IRISHMAN FISHED FOR WHALES.

George Hackenschmidt was a pretty strong man and many are the tales told of his wondrous feats of strength. But the Russian lion was a weakling compared to a certain man who lived on the southern coast of Ireland.

It is said of this particular Irishman that when he went fishing for whales he always used a three-inch hawser for a line and a 600-pound anchor for a hook. He'd bait his hook with a couple of sheep, or maybe a calf, whirl it around his head two or three times and send it sailing out into the ocean.

We forgot to mention that he usually used an old cannon or something for a sinker.

Atlas used to do a pretty neat little turn in holding the world on his shoulders. But it must be remembered that in his time the world wasn't as heavy as it is now. There weren't so many people and practically no heavy machinery, and big guns and monuments and bridges and Wilbert Robinson and Bill Taft and others.—[Kansas City Star.

$50,000 a Year
Writing Photoplays

Hoover Photo

Miss Frances Marion,

WHO has given up a salary of $50,000 a year writing scenarios for Mary Pickford to accept a commission from the U. S. Government to tour the battlefields of Europe for a series of human-interest stories. These stories will be published in various magazines throughout the world. Every cent earned by her writings will be donated to the Allied fund for the care of wounded soldiers.

Miss Marion began her screen career as a free-lance scenario writer and rose in a few years from comparative obscurity to a position of eminence in the motion-picture world.

The Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing has been enthusiastically indorsed by Miss Marion, who points out the wonderful opportunity in this new field for intelligent persons. Just before departing for France, Miss Marion said:

"I take pleasure in giving my unqualified approval to the Palmer Plan of scenario writing, for the following reasons:

"Frederick Palmer, himself a successful photoplaywright, is giving to his students the benefits of his actual studio experience;

"He is assisting those who are inclined toward creative writing to evolve their ideas into presentable form, thus assuring them of having their manuscripts read and seriously considered for production;

"He is giving definite and valuable aid to producing companies in an endless search for stories and ideas;

"There is an unquestionable opportunity for any one with ideas plus training in the elements of photoplay construction, for there is always a market for clever new stories. There is no reason why clear-brained men and women cannot write and sell photoplays, if they put into practice the advice contained in the Palmer Plan."

TWO WAR NOVELS OF SURPRISING TONE.

Those Who Care for Contrasts may Find One Between "The Pretty Lady" and "Khaki."

THE PRETTY LADY. By Arnold Bennett. George H. Doran Company, New York.

Reports say that English critics are rather agitated over Arnold Bennett's latest novel. It is not thought to be the proper kind of a war-time novel. A prostitute is the heroine and the man who makes a mistress of her the hero; also the author has shown an inclination to satirise certain phases of war work, such as private hospitals and charitable functions. He is scarcely recognizable as the Arnold Bennett who, in the early days of the war, lumbered hotly into the forum to cudgel George Bernard Shaw over a lack of respect for Britain's patriotism. Mr. Bennett has grown somewhat cynical: Lady Queenie, with her florid nonsense and aggressive meddling in war work may be taken from life, but she is taken cynically; so with G. J., the retired attorney who is making big money out of war industries and serves on hospital committees and installs a prostitute in a private apartment, and Concepcion, the bizarre South American, is perhaps introduced to show what kind of women have political influence.

The very idea of Arnold Bennett growing sensually realistic is sufficient to give one the shudders. There is no fire, no imagination in him. He sees a thing and writes it down. He hears a remark and sets it in his notebook to be transcribed. When I say he has no "imagination" I mean in the imaginative sense. He has introduced a "mystic" soldier into this tale, and the very small incidents of a "supernatural" aspect are soggily incredible. Their presentation is arbitrary, willful: Christine leaves a supposedly gay dinner party to wander on the streets because she feels that she has heard the mystic soldier call her name, and sure enough she bumps into him, though he has not been thinking of her. No atmosphere, nothing that appeals to the psychic sense, lifts the reader to sympathy with this spiritual miracle. And Arnold Bennett conveying intimate and not pleasant sex phrases is in the same way cold, uninspired. I fancy that he does not wish to be otherwise, and perhaps thinks that reticence, which he has to some extent used, very well takes the place of his own imagination by propelling that of the reader to fill up in an inevitable manner the gaps.

"Truth" is one of the words that may be conferred on "The Pretty Lady." That is supposed to be the highest critical encomium bestowable; but it is significant that "truth" is never applied by the aggressive admirers except in defense of the gross, the brutal, or the raw and red sores of life. But not even here should Mr. Bennett have "Truth" conferred unqualifiedly upon him. He has shrunk either from the public or the censor in filling in his story.

One is likely to have sympathy for Christine, "the pretty lady," who is wiser than most of her class and scarcely looks more innocent than she believes herself to be; and the author has perhaps inadvertently given her a gloss of romance, but virginal prostitutes are old and frayed "properties" in the author's stockroom. Mr. Bennett makes his character "human" by giving them disagreeable qualities; as for instance, the men upon whom he most bestows his pains are inevitably cads. I do not mean that "Christine" is the most valuable, the most artistic or anything of the kind, of Mr. Bennett's heroines. But she is probably the one that will more nearly arouse affection in the reader. To arouse affection for ladies of the kind is no literary feat: old and new books, and particularly those out of the French, are filled with such effect.

G. J. Hoape is rather obscured for a Bennett character, though, of course, one knows pretty much all about him. He is eminently respectable and loves music; also physical comforts. What there is about him that causes all the women in the tale to love him madly is neither shown nor suggested by Mr. Bennett. Hoape is sorry for the men who are being killed, but pleased that profits accumulate in the factories where he has an interest; he joins a hospital committee to give to his conscience the appearance of doing his "bit" and is flattered when people speak of his "efficiency." He has disliked, even despised, Lady Queenie, the ruling daughter of a proud, influential family, but it is no sooner conveyed to him that Queenie loves him than he immediately pictures the prestige to which the marriage will raise him, and he counts on it. He is very "human" in the Bennett sense, but it is with difficulty that one can put aside contempt for such males as Bennett creates—or rather portrays—and appreciate the artistry that finds its highest testimony in arousing that very contempt.

"The Pretty Lady" is the least prolix of any of Mr. Bennett's serious novels, and structurally is definite and appreciable. Christine's vacillating devotion to and fear of the Virgin—Christine is Catholic, but tries to be Protestant so as to escape confession—is the assoiling feature of the story that would otherwise be much too drab and profitless for even many who admire technique and are not averse to "truth."

In a letter to his publisher, George H. Doran, Arnold Bennett refers with some asperity to the English attacks on his latest novel, "The Pretty Lady." "A few of the lower class of papers have gone for it," he says, as being "pornographic" and "unsuitable for war time." The "better class" have treated it well indeed, says Mr. Bennett. But he complains that "some of the good reviews have said that it is decadent and cynical, and that it gives an entirely ruthless picture of heartless people in London."

He then requests that particular note be taken of the statement that "the war had a good effect on the three principal characters, namely, Christine, Concepcion and G. J., all of whom do what they can"; and he requests his publisher to insist that the book does not "portray heartless people" and declares that "the book is emphatically not cynical."

In which case Mr. Bennett rejects whatever compliments can be conferred upon him for "The Pretty Lady": if the book is not cynical it is simply stupid; if "G. J." in particular is not designed as a selfish cad then the author by an inadvertence has created the one character study in the book who, repugnant as he is, seemed a masterly achievement. Mr. Bennett may find what solace he can between the conjecture that he did not realize what he was writing and the inference that an angry public has made him forswear his motives.

"Khaki."

Freeman Tilden has done it. It had to come, of course. And he has put it over. What I am talking about is the sentimental war novel, the good old gripping, weepy, stirring story that will make one feel a fool for permitting one's eyes to get dimmed. If one is at all intellectual —as all book reviewers are—one will at once perceive how cheap and tawdry is the mechanism; the pathos is palpably put on as one sloshes buckets of paint at a wall; and from a critical inspection it looks like an elaborate scenario for a Cohan war drama. But Mr. Tilden puts it across. That is the important thing to remember. One has to be on guard and constantly remind oneself that it is cheap and bunk and all that—but when the news comes back to the dull little burg of Tredick that Miss Prudence has gone down with the Red Cross ship, well—you'll choke up, too.

Theoretically I have only utter contempt for such books as "Khaki"; and for the matter of that, I am sure that Mr. Tilden, theoretically, feels the same. The man who some years ago was desperately trying to hew an entrance into the hall of fame with cynical satirical stories is the author of "Khaki." This war has done something to more of us than live in Tredick: it has made us sentimental, and, after all, it would be a cheerless old globe without emotions responsive to band music, moonlight serenades and the trials and joys of those people with whom the pages of fictions are peopled.

Tredick is merely a microcosm of America. In Tredick people said, "War is a terrible thing" and "He will keep us out of it," and mass meetings were held to pass resolutions for permanent peace, and the declaration of war was annoying, and war loans did not look like the best investments. But Tom Gilstar, the "coward," put on the khaki; and Miss Prudence, the Hetty Green of the village, flamed up at the mass meeting and went to war; and Sheridan Gilstar, who had been a soldier in the Philippines and become a crook, daringly undertook to clean his record so that he could honorably resume the khaki. But everybody was concerned with his own business and personal affairs. War was remote—far away—it would never come near. Then the Red Cross ship was sunk by the Huns and Miss Prudence went down, and Mr. Greenberg, the young Jew merchant she had befriended, threw up his store, enlisted and climbed on a soap box. Cheers and tears. Tredick had awakened. Everybody wanted to enlist. Girls decided to go as nurses. Old men pleaded for the khaki. Young ones leaped for the chance to wear it.

There is something more of a plot than that; but that tells the story. And it is a story that grips. It gets down to the roots of sentiment; emotions bubble—one may know it is all silly and balderdash, but one doesn't feel it. And I am perfectly aware that this is not a criticism—it is a confession.

"THE POETS OF FRANCE."

THE POETS OF MODERN FRANCE. By Ludwig Lewisohn. B. W. Huebsch, New York.

Prof. Lewisohn begins with a vigorous introduction in defense of new artistic forms. "The pang of beauty, the exaltation in truth, the vision of the tragedy of life arise, in the fullest sense, only when the individual liberates himself from the tribe and faces the universe." Conventional verse "becomes strangely hushed and inarticulate in the course of time." And the author intimates that the world could do very well without those critics who explain: "It's beautiful, but it isn't poetry!" "It's powerful, but it isn't a play"—"as though in some quite transcendental sense, there were a divine, Platonic, archetypal idea of poetry, of drama, which it is the duty of the artist to seek, at least to approach."

In discussing the poets of modern France Mr. Lewisohn finds space in a small volume to speak of more than thirty and has given specimen translations. And though modestly saying that these translation of poetry have "not always even approached my own ideal of what a translation of poetry should be," he lays it down that the "translated poem, in brief, should be such as the original poet would have written if the translator's language had been his native one."

The author has also incorporated a biographical sketch of the poets and a bibliography, which makes "The Poets of Modern France" not only acceptable to who know little or nothing of them, but very desirable for whoever wishes to continue the study of them.

AUBREY BEARDSLEY.

An Essay on His Art by Arthur Symons, Together with Examples of Beardsley's Drawings.

THE ART OF AUBREY BEARDSLEY. By Arthur Symons. Boni & Liveright, New York.

The appearance of this book in the Modern Library makes available at the modest sum of 60 cents not only very striking examples of Beardsley's unique drawings, but also one of the best essays by one of the best essayists. Mr. Symons writes instinctively for the cultivated mind; he addresses himself without arguments to those whose sympathies are presupposed by their fingering of his pages and he gives generously of reflections and observations. He has the unusual quality of enthusiasm without being an advocate, at least an advocate in the sense that, say, Swinburne was; and it seems never to diminish his appreciation for him to be aware of the subject's weaknesses, or rather frailties. He brings to criticism much the same precision of expression that fastens to paper tenuous, evasive ideas—giving a sense of exploration and discovery without the least sensationalism—that Henry James perfected in fiction. A personal sympathy as well as esthetic enthusiasm combined in the writing of Beardsley, whom he knew well.

Mr. Symons is distinguished by one of the rarest of faculties; one that certainly inspires admiring envy in every person attempting the essayical form, and that is by the felicity of his opening sentences. True, they are not superior to those that follow, but the embarrassment of beginning a formal essay has led countless hundreds into triteness that was immediately discarded. A biography, minus dates and places and other inessentials, is in the first paragraph:

" . . . Aubrey Beardsley ended a long career, at the age of 26, in the arms of the church. No artist of our time, none certainly whose work has been in black and white, has reached a more universal or a more contested fame. . . . He had the fatal speed of those who are to die young; that disquieting completeness and extent of knowledge, that absorption of a lifetime in an hour, which we find in those who hasten to have their work done before noon, knowing they will not see the evening. . . . He seemed to have read everything and has his preferences as adroitly in order, as wittily in evidence, as almost any man of letters; indeed he seemed to know more, and was perhaps a sounder critic of books than of pictures; with perhaps a deeper feeling for music than for either. . . . Generally choosing to be paradoxical, and vehement on behalf of any enthusiasm of the mind, he was the dupe of none of his own statements, or indeed of his own enthusiasms, and, really, very coldly impartial. . . ."

As "the satirist of an age without convictions," Beardsley worked with scarcely a consciousness of what he was trying to do. Though eager for fame and enjoying it, he despised the public and perverted a technical perfection to play tricks on that public which would praise the wrong thing, no matter what he did. He was without what Mr. Symons calls "the very sense of respect;" and "with the power of creating beauty, which should be pure beauty, he turned aside, only too often, to that lower kind of beauty which is the mere beauty of technique in a composition otherwise meaningless, trivial or grotesque, . . . doing it with infinite pains, to his own mind conscientiously, but doing it with that lack of reverence for great work which is one of the most sterilizing characteristics of the present day." Meaning the "day" upon which the essay was written—not 1918.

It is in discussion of the evilness and diabolical qualities which many complained of in Beardsley's work that the essay attains a philosophical penetration. Mr. Symons is disposed to think there is very little evil among the artists of the world—that the very fires of creation burn away the impurities. "Evil itself, carried to the point of a perverse ecstacy, becomes a kind of good, by means of that energy which, otherwise directed, is virtue; and which can never, no matter how its course may be changed, fail to retain something of its original efficacy. The devil is nearer to God by the whole height from which he fell than the average man who has not recognized his own need to rejoice or to repent."

"It was a common error at one time to say that Beardsley could not draw. He certainly did not draw the human with any attempt at rendering its own lines, taken by themselves; indeed, one of his latest drawings, an initial letter to 'Volpone,' is almost the first in which he has drawn a nude figure realistically. But he could draw with extraordinary skill, in what is, after all, the essential way; he could make a line do what he wanted it to do, express the conception of forms which it was his intention to express; and this is what the conventional draughtsman, Bourguereau, for instance, cannot do. The conventional draughtsman, any academic student, will draw a line which shows quite accurately the curve of a human body, but all his science of drawing will not make you feel that line pathetic, as in the little, drooping body which a satyr and a Pierrot are laying in a puff-powder coffin, in the tail-piece to 'Salome.' And then, it must never be forgotten, Beardsley was a decorative artist, and not anything else. From almost the first he accepted convention; he set himself to see things as a pattern." Beardsley has accepted the convention of nature itself, turning it to his own uses, extracting from it his own symbols, but no longer rejecting it for a convention entirely of his own making. And thus in his last work, done under the very shadow of death, we find new possibilities for an art conceived as pure line, conducted through mere pattern, which, after many hesitations, has resolved finally upon the great compromise, that compromise which the greatest artists have made, between the mind's outline and the outline of visible things."

WAR BOOKS.

BY HARRY CARR.

"Gen. Foch—an Appreciation."

The great commanders of the past had to be taken more or less for granted. Their capacity was seldom known; they were taken on faith and sent out to show what they could do.

In these days of intensive military education a commander has been well assayed before he is given important commands.

This is especially true of Gen. Ferdinand Foch, the generalissimo of the Allied armies. His theories of war-making, his ability to handle men, his temperament were known to war offices before war was declared. The information is now being passed along for civilian consumption.

In "Gen. Foch—an Appreciation," published by Houghton Mifflin Company, Maj. R. M. Johnston, U.S.A., has given a fascinating glimpse of this great Frenchman.

At the outbreak of the war Foch was occupying the highest post of honor in the French army—the command of the Twentieth Corps at Nancy. He had been the schoolmaster of the French army. Born August 4, 1851; entering the Ecole Polytechnique in 1871, the Ecole de Guerre in 1884, a brigadier-general in command of the artillery at Orleans in 1907, commandant of the famous Ecole de Guerre, Gen. Foch had already had a distinguished career when the war broke out.

At the outbreak of hostilities he commanded the Ninth Army Corps, which bore the terrific hammering of the Prussian Guard at the Marne. After the Marne there began that dramatic race for the channel which, had the Germans won, would have probably decided the war in favor of the Kaiser. In this great crisis it was Foch who was selected to check the German advance.

During this terrible race occurred an incident which has been made famous in all armies. The French general in command of the cavalry sent word to Foch that his soldiers could not hold the banks of a river where they had been stationed. Foch sent back this immortal dispatch: "You will immediately reoccupy the banks of the Aire; you will line them with your machine guns and artillery. You will hold the enemy there tomorrow. When your guns have all been destroyed or captured you will report to headquarters for further instructions." The line held.

Afterward, on the Somme, Foch had command of the French forces which fought side by side with the British. At the time of the offensive of March, 1918, it was he who came to the rescue of the harassed English troops, saved Amiens, then turned northward and dropped troops out of the sky, so to speak, for the relief of Mt. Kemmel. One of Foch's greatest characteristics as a commander is his almost miraculous ability to produce troops where needed.

The suggestion that a French officer command the French-British forces was a sensitive point with England. Probably the supreme command would have been yielded to no other officer. By his tact, courtesy and his service in many fights alongside British troops Foch disarmed suspicion and jealousy.

As a theorist Gen. Foch is an ardent advocate of the offensive at any cost.

During his years of service as head professor at the Ecole Gen. Foch thoroughly inoculated the younger French officers with this theory. Since the outbreak of the present war he has been the foremost student of the technique of trench warfare; and it is well known that the French officers generally favor the war of position (trench warfare) whereas the Germans pin their faith to a war of movement.

In his writings before the war Foch expressed the opinion that the Germans would come through Alsace-Lorraine, not Belgium; but the author believes this opinion was afterwards modified. As a great strategist Gen. Foch was unique for his insistance upon the superimportance of morale. The following maxims give an idea of his military faith:

"The victory will always go to those who best deserve it by the greatest strength of will and intelligence."

"Every soldier must see his general—must feel himself in communication with him, and never be allowed to consider himself merely a poor pawn maneuvered by an unknown power."

"A battle lost is only that which you think you have lost. No battle was ever actually and irretrievably lost."

"A battle won is that in which one does not admit himself conquered."

"Victory is the will to win."

"On the Fringe of the Great Fight."

Col. George G. Nasmith, C.M.G., the author of this book, published by George H. Doran Company, accompanied the Canadians to the war front as a scientist—a chemist and sanitary expert. His story is frank and naive. It has the charm of an agreeable conversation with an unusually well-informed man. He tells what there was doing at the theaters in London and what Paris thought of the "dirty Belgians" and how the delegates to the War Allies Sanitary Commission in Paris could understand the French of all the speakers better than they could the French of the Frenchmen.

He gives some very interesting information on lines not hitherto covered by war writers. A wealth of entertaining personal anecdote enlivens the book; as, for instance, the one old Belgian woman who refused to leave a town under bombardment by German shells. They found her industriously wiping the dust from her front windows and tried to get her away. She replied that she had lived there for eighty years and that she was going to die there. If the Germans kept getting her windows dirty with their shells it was all the more reason why she should stay and clean them.

Some Russian Experiences.

"What happens when you are caught?" asked Sonia E. Howe of Russian soldiers escaped from German prison camps ("Real Russians," J. B. Lippincott Company.) "It is bad, very bad," they said. Perhaps the greatest hardship the prisoners of war have to endure is the perpetual torment of being asked to go to work in munition factories to help their enemy. For refusing they are persecuted and punished. I was told by some soldiers that in one instance 300 men thus persisted in their refusal and, infuriated by their firmness, the German officer shouted at them: 'Let him who has the courage to die for his convictions step forward.' Forty men did so. They were led away and their comrades considered them as good as dead."

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

Mr. Wells Flies to Heaven.

In the later installments of the H. G. Wells serial on education in the New Republic there is to be an interview between a young aviator and the Lord High God. In that interview the Lord defends Himself against the charge of autocracy and takes pains to put the young aviator in his proper place. Mr. Wells continues to fly in the face of Providence.

Hafiz, "Popular Poet."

Who is the most popular poet in the world? Probably few people asked this question would answer correctly. He is the Persian poet, Hafiz, whose songs and lyrics, although not widely known in English, have been translated into most of the languages of Europe. His popularity, however, is due to the fact that he was not known merely to the literary classes, but was and is really a poet of the people. He was sung by the camel drivers in the desert, the tillers of the soil, the boatmen upon the Red Sea. In making a new translation of "The Songs of Hafiz," published by the Four Seas Company, Mrs. Edna Worthley Underwood took this fact especially into consideration and tried to preserve the flavor and character of the original Persian, even sacrificing a rhyme occasionally to preserve intact the exact meaning. Her translation was made after she had been interested in Hafiz by an old Persian who owned many rare and unusual editions of his favorite poet.

"Zella Sees Herself."

Alfred A. Knopf has in train for publication in September a new novel by E. M. Delafield, author of "Zella Sees Herself." It is said to be a satiric sketch of the woman volunteers of England. Miss Delafield is herself engaged in war work, and does not spare with her keen shafts of humor some of those with whom she has come into contact.

"The Third Estate."

"The Third Estate," a new novel by Marjorie Bowen, which E. P. Dutton & Co. have just brought out, is a thrilling story of the French revolution in which Danton, Robespierre and Camille Desmoulins are among the characters. Some of the stormiest of the days of the National Assembly, the taking of the Bastille and other momentous occasions have their vivid place in the story as part of the development of the dramatic tale of the hero.

Rupert Hughes Film a Success.

"We Can't Have Everything," the recent novel by Capt. Rupert Hughes, has just won success as a motion-picture. With an excellent cast, "We Can't Have Everything" is said to have proved its title untrue and given everything to the audience. In his latest book, published by the Harpers, "The Unpardonable Sin," Capt. Hughes has taken his readers far away from scenes of luxury to war-devastated Belgium. Here his characters exact a drama, founded on facts in his possession, in which a young American girl faces a world of horror as she searches through wrecked towns for her loved ones who were visiting in Belgium at the outbreak of the war.

Willard Wattles.

Willard Wattles, whose first volume of poetry E. P. Dutton & Co. will publish early in September, three or four years ago selected and edited a volume of poems about Kansas which was published under the title "Sunflowers." The first edition of a thousand copies was printed by the press of the local paper of a Kansas town and was exhausted in two months. A Chicago publishing house took over the enterprise and brought out a second edition of 2500 in the fall of 1916. These were all sold in a short time and by the end of last year a third edition had appeared which is now near the end. The volume contains a great variety of poems written by Kansas or about Kansas by poets from other parts of the country. Mr. Wattles's first volume of his own work will probably be entitled "Lanterns in Gethsemane" will contain a series of lyrics written in a sequence and dealing with modern religious ideas and emotions as these have evolved through the stress of modern times from the early Christian beliefs. Some of them have appeared in leading magazines. Mr. Wattles is now at Camp Funston, Kansas, where he has recently been transferred from the ranks of the infantry to the Medical Corps, and is taking the training for first aid to the wounded in the front lines of battle.

Ralph D. Paine and the Fuel Administrator.

Mr. Ralph D. Paine, author of "The Fighting Fleets" and "The Call of the Offshore Wind" has been called to Washington by the Fuel Administration to help in the work of rousing the men in and about the coal mines to the vital need of putting forth every effort to meet the fuel shortage. Mr. Paine is especially well fitted to do this, since he was for five months on service with all branches of the navy, and knows, better perhaps than any other civilian, what an important part fuel plays in the success of our forces at sea. The Shipping Board made a similar request for Mr. Paine's service, but as he puts it, "King Coal beat them to it."

"A Village in Picardy."

"A Village in Picardy" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) is an account by Miss Ruth Gaines of reconstruction work in the devastated regions of Northern France and in particular of what has been accomplished by the Smith College Unit in the village in which they have been working. "Loving it back to life," is the description of their achievement given by Lieut. Coningsby Dawson in his recent book, "Out to Win." Miss Gaines tells how their solicitude, care, affection and practical measures have brought new hope and energy to the despairing remnants of what had once been a happy and prosperous village. The book has an introduction by the president of Smith College. Miss Gaines is the author of "Treasure Flower," a story of child life in Japan, and co-author of "The Village Shield," a tale of life in modern Mexico, both volumes in the "Little Schoolmate" series of books for young people; a series which aims to acquaint young readers with the character and conditions of child life in other countries whose offspring are "little schoolmates" all over the United States.

Charles Norris.

The New York Sun says of Charles Norris's new novel, "Salt, or, the Education of Griffith Adams" (E. P. Dutton & Co.,) which is already in its second edition, a month after publication: "'Salt' is sure to be successful. Not so much because it is a good thing well done and a great many people will like it, as because a great many more will not like it—will, in fact, be badly shocked. If Charles Norris, who is the husband of Kathleen Norris and the brother of Frank Norris, and so has fallen quite naturally into the way of being talented, had dealt with the tinsel and gauze of a reckless four hundred, or with the squalor and vice of a recognized underworld, it would have caused sorrow, perhaps, and regret, but not horror. But he has shaken the foundations of that class which is, in turn, the foundation of our national life until the whole structure topples; and that this has been done only after deep and earnest thought renders the shock proportionately greater."

"A Dairy of the Russian Revolution" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) exhaustively chronicles the turbulent political upheaval during those few weeks of the spring of 1917 when all Christendom rejoiced. Had he continued his chronicle he would not, could not, have ended with such an optimistic note. Russia has gone to the dogs. As the title implies in Florence McLeod Harper's "Runaway Russia" (The Century Company,) incidentally, entertainingly and vivaciously written, one of the few books on Russia that is pleasant to read for reading's own sake, there is no great amount of hope for Russia's recrudescence in this war. Mrs. Harper is not so historically valuable as many a duller writer; but one probably learns more about real Russia than elsewhere, as the book is filled with incidents and observations. One in particular on Botchkarova of the—and Mrs. Harper has much to say of the women soldiers—"Battalion of Death" offers a suggestion directed to the understanding of those versed in abnormalities, physicians and lawyers. Earnest Poole in "The Dark People" (The Macmillan Company) tells of the revolution from the personal point of view and attempts the difficult feat of presenting a kind of study of national psychology. Toward that end most of his observations are between quotation marks, which makes it none the less interesting and the more valuable to the student who wants "first hand" material. He wisely refrains from assuming that he knows anything definite about Russia, that is, of deep, deep currents of Russia.

"LIFE IN A TANK."

In his story of "Life in a Tank" (Houghton Mifflin Company,) Capt. Richard Haigh, commander of the British tank "Britannia," tells of the preparations which a certain British officer made before going into action. He needed no material preparations against the possibility of death, Capt. Haigh says, but a prisoner—that was different. He saw that he was supplied with a cheque book, some cigarettes and a razor. "The cheque book was for use in a possible gray prison camp in the land of his enemies. Cheques would some time or other reach his English bank and his people would know that he was, at least, alive. The cigarettes were to keep up his courage in the face of whatever disaster might befall him. And the razor? Most important of all. The razor was to keep, bright and untarnished, the traditions and prestige of the British Army!"

THE WILL TO WIN WINS.

Capt. Knyvett gives the following tips on "going over the top" in "'Over There' with the Australians" (Scribners):

"There are only two things that it is essential to remember when you go into a bayonet charge. The first is that the most determined man will win. If you go into a bayonet charge with the idea of disarming your opponent and taking him prisoner you will most certainly be killed. But if you are quite sure in your own mind that you are going to kill every man who comes against you, you will do it. Your determination impresses itself upon the man you attack and he will be beaten before you reach him. The other thing that it is wise to remember is to make your opponent attack you on your left side. If he attacks you on the right you have to parry him and then thrust, but for an attack on the right side the action of parrying will bring the toe of your butt into his jaws or ribs, disabling him, and it is a good thing to use your knee at the same time."

Unable longer to endure the sight of many volumes dealing with Germany and its culture in her library, Mrs. William E. Day of William E. Day of Wilmington, Del., carried them into a lot near her home recently and applied a match to the pile. As the flames attracted neighbors, Mrs. Day announced what she was burning and said she "wished she had the Kaiser to put on the pile."

KAISER'S OPINION OF STEEL MASTS.

The Germans talked war and thought in terms of war as early as 1912, when Mrs. Thomas J. Usher of Detroit spent two years in Germany with her uncle, Dr. Arthur N. Davis, who for fourteen years was the Kaiser's dentist.

"When I was with my uncle, I often saw the Kaiser," Mrs. Usher says. "On days when the Kaiser had an appointment with my uncle, the streets around the house would be cleared of traffic for two hours before the Kaiser's arrival, and secret service men placed about.

"My room was at the front of the house, and I would watch the approach of the Kaiser and his attaches. Usually three motor cars came with him, but when he advanced to the house all attendants were several yards behind. He came alone, a striking figure, resting his hand on his sword."

It was the first month of Mrs. Usher's stay in Berlin that she first heard the Kaiser talk. It was at the time steel masts were introduced as a feature of the American battleships. When the Kaiser's opinion of the masts was asked he laughed and said, "Well enough for a tea party or as a trellis for vines, but for war——" and shrugged his shoulders as though in one gesture he was giving his idea of the American Navy in general. — [Detroit News.

Foresight.

An irascible and not very judicial person had been listening to a lengthy argument on whether Ireland should or should not have home rule. Finally he could contain himself no longer and burst out: "I wish they'd give 'em home rule and then give me the motion-picture rights."—[Outlook.

—Please allow us as much time as possible for the delivery of Clearance merchandise, which will be delivered as quickly as possible.

—Please do not send telephone or mail orders. And if you are a dealer please do not expect to participate in Clearance offerings. Please understand the spirit in which Bullock's reserves the right to limit purchases.

Today is the last day of the Allied War Exposition at Exposition Park. Visit it!

—and again, a Monday, the day that has the habit, during Bullock's 12th Clearance, as during every period of the year—of forming its own precedent and of creating prestige

—So that one should not be surprised when this particular Monday takes affairs into its own hands without an Aye! Yes! No! or a Wherefore—and in

The First Price Advertisements of

"The One Sale of the Year"

—Announces a range of values, with ultra conservatism that could be proclaimed with Trumpet and Huzza. For it is to be a great Monday—in every sense of the word—a Monday in which many discoveries will be made—of low prices—yes! And of values, that all depend upon quality as well as upon price—that all measure up to that standard which is of Bullock's—and known among friends; and of sincerity in service—

—It should be your Monday—It will be if you will that it should—And you will WILL that it should be your Monday if you will take from this print even a modicum of that which it means—without exaggeration, but also without underestimation:—If you will remember that every section on every floor is heart and soul in this event;—if you will keep constantly in mind—the personality, the difference, and the realness of Bullock's 12th Clearance—"The One Sale of the Year."

—An afterthought—which is a repetition and may be important in its bearing as "an emphasis:"—It might not be amiss to repeat that Bullock's Clearance is NOT confined to a clearance of Bullock's stocks alone. Long ago, this event outgrew the possibility of such limitation. Now Bullock's Clearance extends itself as an outlet for the clearance of many manufacturers—importers—distributors of repute—and not a few purchases were made months ago, since which time persistent advances have multiplied and remultiplied their importance.

—And so, Monday there will be much for you tobuy—much that has not been out before—much that should be very tempting at the prices that will prevail. Will you come?—Won't you?–Watch the windows and see—

Take for example, the Rugs—both Wiltons and Body Brussels (certainly you know how prices have ascended and how output has descended in rugs—yet here are 11.3x15 ft. Wiltons as low as $97.50 and 10.6x10.6 Body Brussels as low as $49.50)—and Worsted Wiltons (beautiful two-tone effects) 9x12 and 8.3x10.6 at $59.75. Rag Rugs at—listen, if you need a rag rug don't ignore this opportunity Monday. And 500 1 and 1½ yard carpet samples will go at 75c, $1.25, $2.25 and $2.95 (Axminsters, Body Brussels, Velvets and extra quality Wilton samples)—on the 6th floor.

—The TRUNKS—a carload of them there was—a carload of wonderful Wardrobe Trunks—registered, insured and guaranteed for 5 years—as little as $49.75—and the Bullock Wardrobe at $37.75—Dress Trunks at $11.95 (most unusual)—Fine Leather Bags at $9.95—Women's Enamel Hat Cases, $6.95— Oh, this is the time to buy luggage! When will you again be able to secure such values in trunks, bags, etc? Do not make the mistake of not seeing this great and good accumulation of luggage at the tiny prices at which it may be had during August—5th floor.

—Of the Furniture, (one examines the price carefully to be sure)—why, these furniture values are simply incredible,—and if you doubt it, then come Monday to see this Mahogany Bed Room Suite of 6 pieces at $147.00 (Queen Anne period)—the Ivory Enamel Beds, (twin sizes) $17.50, others as low as $9.75 (in full or three-quarter size), the magnificent Overstuffed Davenport at $97.50—Sample Box Mattresses at $15.75—and Chairs, odd pieces, and suites at proportionally unexpected prices—This is an opportune time to dress up your home—the Seventh Floor—

In black, white and good color assortment. "Then wonderful all silk stockings at $1.35—really marvelous values in a beautiful heavy quality. MAKE NO CHANGE

UNTIL YOU HAVE CONSULTED

CLARKE,

THE MASTER PSYCHIC.

Every day a stream of people pass in and out of his office on Alvarado street, some go away smiling, others more hopeful than for years, for this marvelous psychic, who sees all and tells all without asking a solitary question, is always able to restore the wavering faith in others and give them back that self-confidence which makes for success. He helps you gain what you wish at once, almost immediately removes the cause of any bad luck, bad habits, sickness, trouble or failure. He helps you win back the love you have lost.

"CHARACTER IS DESTINY."

What caused the world war; what caused the renewed movement for universal suffrage, for prohibition and other reforms? What caused and is causing the many books and essays to be written on applied psychology, which are revising our entire conception of man's accountability and responsibility, was that at the close of the nineteenth century the dogma of liberty was overthrown and man was shown to be governed by law and had no freedom of will. Human nature is like that of metal which melts at a certain temperature. The trained psychologist teaches you how to remove the dross from your life so you can stand the fire and acid test.

Thousands of the best people of this city and surrounding country have consulted the master phychic, and are amazed at what he is able to tell them. He not only gives you more help, more knowledge and power than any other psychic, but more than all other mediums and psychics combined.

All are welcome to his beautiful home, opposite Westlake Park, where they may read all the inspiring books of his large library, whether they wish to have a reading or not. Those who wish to take up character reading as a pastime or profession will find all the latest books on palmistry, astrology, graphology, card-reading, phrenology, the science of names and numbers, etc., at the circulating library, for loan or for sale.

Today new opportunities are at hand. You may be able to get a better position, better salary or business, dispose of your property to advantage. The time to do things is now. Call at once. Readings daily and Sunday 10 to 7. Low fee—50c.

For appointment Phone Wilshire 2956.

The only member of INDIA'S MYSTIC BROTHERHOOD to ever visit this country. First in America to introduce this MYSTERIOUS ART employed by PROPHETS OF OLDEN TIMES. His remarkable disclosures are pronounced "PHENOMENAL" by thinking people who have consulted him. Any Clairvoyant can tell your name, the past and present. WANTED—
AUTO MECHANICS.
IGNITION EXPERTS.
TRACTOR ENGINEERS.
VULCANIZERS.
MACHINISTS.
OXY-ACETYLENE WELDERS.

Highest wages in the history of the country now being paid. There is an industrial famine for trained mechanics; the wage scale has increased from 25 to 200 per cent., and the demand will not subside until production has caught up with the demand. This it will not do until years after peace is declared. Far-sighted business and professional men are turning from lines already crowded and unprofitable to take up the more lucrative industrial vocations. Our enrollments from these classes are steadily increasing. Men of 50 and 60 years, but with the spirit of youth, are taking up mechanical lines. Boys from 13 to 19 are taking our courses. Practical-minded parents are insuring them against exigencies which might throw them on the world helpless to earn a living. Can you not see the trend of things? The mechanical age has arrived. We want to talk this subject over with you. Visit our school, see our facilities for teaching; talk with our instructors and students.

WHEN WE SAY "REBUILT" WE MEAN IT—

Lots of trucks are "rebuilt" with a bucket of paint and a brush.

When we say REBUILT, we mean REBUILT.

You don't have to take our word for it.

You can come and watch it being done.

Our rebuilding shop is right in the rear of our showroom.

Before we advertise a truck as REBUILT, it has been gone over from end to end and every worn part replaced.

The man with the paint brush works last and not first.

Of course, we ask more for these trucks than you will be asked elsewhere.

They're worth more.

We've got these models on hand now. REBUILT, too.

GERMAIN'S REMOVAL NOTICE.
About the first week in August we move our retail store to the main floor of the Kerckhoff Bldg. at the N.E. CORNER SIXTH AND MAIN, where we will be better able to serve our large and ever-increasing patronage. We will be located just opposite the P. E. Station, where you can place your orders quickly and conveniently "on your way home."

SEASONABLE SUPPLIES.
CONKEY'S LICE LIQUID is sure death to mites. Paint it on roosts, in nests and in all crevices. Mites simply cannot live where this liquid is used consistently.

CONKEY'S LICE POWDER will rid hens of lice. Dust them carefully, and place a little of the powder in nests.

CARBOLA—a paint and germ killer combined. Carbola should be used both inside and out on poultry houses, garages, rabbit hutches, etc. It is an efficient, economical paint that will not flake or peel off. Makes everything white, clean and ABSOLUTELY SANITARY. Kills germs and drives away vermin.

FRENCH'S POULTRY MUSTARD FOR MOULTING HENS.
French's Poultry Mustard will take your hens through the moulting season and place them in fine condition for winter laying. It tones up the system, increases fertility and stamina. Should be used throughout the entire year.

DON'T WASTE WATER.
If you install Water Boys (the sanitary automatic fountain) you will have fresh, clean water before your hens all the time without wasting it. Can be attached just like a faucet to any pipe. Send for folder.

PRESERVE EGGS NOW.
By using E. Z. EGG PRESERVER you can keep eggs in an absolutely fresh condition for months. Buy a crate of eggs now and preserve them by the E. Z. method—and you'll have fresh eggs in December at 20c less than the market price.

FACT AND COMMEN

There is apparently some for believing that the recent what the government did and d want and expect with respe building, development and g investment activity has not without its good effect in Lo geles.

There is no more patrioti than this one and there wer doubtedly many persons here before Mr. McAdoo's statemen prevailing impression that in s were willing to expend their m necessary investments now the government, through Mr.

Adoo, has made it plain that no desire to hold back any

Things have picked up, ten and the creation of an uncalle

buy Liberty Bonds or War Sa
Stamps or contribute to the Cross unless they are steadily

all business, investment and deve rectly contributing to the pros being without jobs. As long as impression prevailed that this of complete retrenchment activity upon which so many w salary, commission and profit e should languish.

There is another bond issue c of all. Los Angeles, needless say, is going to go over the to

Just how great a proportion those holding back on building

Automobile Trucks and Trailers.

WHEN WE SAY "REBUILT" WE MEAN IT—

Lots of trucks are "rebuilt" with a bucket of paint and a brush.

When we say REBUILT, we mean REBUILT.

You don't have to take our word for it.

You can come and watch it being done.

Our rebuilding shop is right in the rear of our showroom.

Before we advertise a truck as REBUILT, it has been gone over from end to end and every worn part replaced.

The man with the paint brush works last and not first.

Of course, we ask more for these trucks than you will be asked elsewhere.

They're worth more.

We've got these models on hand now. REBUILT, too.

GERMAIN'S REMOVAL NOTICE.
About the first week in August we move our retail store to the main floor of the Kerckhoff Bldg. at the N.E. CORNER SIXTH AND MAIN, where we will be better able to serve our large and ever-increasing patronage. We will be located just opposite the P. E. Station, where you can place your orders quickly and conveniently "on your way home."
SEASONABLE SUPPLIES.
CONKEY'S LICE LIQUID is sure death to mites. Paint it on roosts, in nests and in all crevices. Mites simply cannot live where this liquid is used consistently.
CONKEY'S LICE POWDER will rid hens of lice. Dust them carefully, and place a little of the powder in nests.
CARBOLA—a paint and germ killer combined. Carbola should be used both inside and out on poultry houses, garages, rabbit hutches, etc. It is an efficient, economical paint that will not flake or peel off. Makes everything white, clean and ABSOLUTELY SANITARY. Kills germs and drives away vermin.
FRENCH'S POULTRY MUSTARD FOR MOULTING HENS.
French's Poultry Mustard will take your hens through the moulting season and place them in fine condition for winter laying. It tones up the system, increases fertility and stamina. Should be used throughout the entire year.
DON'T WASTE WATER.
If you install Water Boys (the sanitary automatic fountain) you will have fresh, clean water before your hens all the time without wasting it. Can be attached just like a faucet to any pipe. Send for folder.
PRESERVE EGGS NOW.
By using E. Z. EGG PRESERVER you can keep eggs in an absolutely fresh condition for months. Buy a crate of eggs now and preserve them by the E. Z. method—and you'll have fresh eggs in December at 30c less than the market price.

FACT AND COMMENT.

There is apparently some reason for believing that the recent statement by Secretary McAdoo as to just what the government did and did not want and expect with respect to building, development and general [illegible] activity has not been without its good effect in Los Angeles.

There is no more patriotic city than this one and there were undoubtedly many persons here who, before Mr. McAdoo's statement, refrained from any form of investment simply on account of the then-prevailing impression that in so doing they were living up to the administration's wishes and helping [illegible] in his war programme. By the same token, it may well be that the increased number of important real estate transactions and the number of new building projects of some magnitude announced in recent weeks mean that people are more willing to expend their money in necessary investments now that the government, through Mr. McAdoo, has made it plain that there is no desire to hold back any community's normal development.

Things have picked up, temporarily at least, and, although it may be merely a case of a number of investors having by mere coincidence, decided all at the same time to go ahead with improvement and other [illegible], it would seem logical to put two and two together and attribute the manifestation, in part at least, to a better feeling created by the significant word from Washington.

It is fortunate if this is true. The [illegible] of the government that people should refrain from indulgence in speculation and unnecessary development operations is one thing and the creation of an uncalled-for condition whereby a considerable part of the investment and improvement activity upon which various communities depend for their normal prosperity would be done away [illegible] another. Most people can't buy Liberty Bonds or War Savings Stamps or contribute to the Red Cross unless they are steadily employed and a general curtailment of business, investment and development enterprise excepting that directly contributing to the prosecution of the war would result in many [illegible] without jobs. As long as the [illegible] prevailed that this kind of [illegible] retrenchment was [illegible], it was inevitable that the [illegible] upon which so many wage, commission and profit earners [illegible] for sustenance and a surplus should languish.

[illegible] another bond issue coming and it will be the biggest [illegible] Los Angeles, needless to [illegible] to go over the top in [illegible] style. The better [illegible] conditions are when this issue is [illegible], the more readily and [illegible] it will be taken up. Los Angeles will have more reasons than [illegible] before, to be grateful if the [illegible] picking up of realty sales and [illegible] operations turns out to be [illegible] more than a flash in the [illegible]

[illegible] how great a proportion of [illegible] holding back on building and [illegible] of all kinds have done [illegible] of a belief that Uncle [illegible] was discouraging every kind of [illegible] cannot, of course, be even [illegible]. Unquestionably they are outnumbered by that other class, [illegible] of those who crawled under cover with the first signs of business dullness four years or more ago, [illegible] under a little deeper still [illegible] the war broke out and who [illegible] completely when America was forced into the fight for [illegible]. They still doze on. [illegible] borrowers have had their [illegible] so completely buried that they [illegible] failed to see that the war instead of hurting the city's progress, [illegible] really been the making of Los Angeles industrially. They have [illegible] to grasp the fact that the tremendous impetus given to industry [illegible] past year means more to the future of their investments, whatever they may be, than all the mere real estate booms that could possibly take place. Everything in Los Angeles is on a solider basis now than ever before in the city's history.

When things do begin going ahead again, there will be more steam behind the advancement than ever before. If all the timid ones who are waiting "till times look better" before buying or building anything were only to grasp this truth, Los Angeles would be a lively city indeed in no time. Why don't you, Mr. Pessimist, help start it!

BUSINESS EXPANDS.

The W. Ross Campbell Company, through F. B. Nellums of its leasing department, reports having closed a lease with N. Davidson & Co., manufacturers of women's high-grade gowns, for the entire fourth floor of the ten-story concrete Grayco Building at Nos. 752 and 756 South Los Angeles street. This concern started in business in Los Angeles three years ago at No. 814 South Spring street, with a small number of employees. The new location will give the firm four times the space formerly occupied, and they will more than treble their present force to enable them to fill orders, which are now being shipped as far east as Denver and Pueblo, Colo.

Other leases reported by Mr. Nellums are as follows: For the Huntington Land and Improvement Company to Henry Veir, store at No. 213 East Seventh street, for wholesale toy warehouse; for E. E. McClanahan to Friedland & Rodine, store at No. 705 South Main street, for sale of used furniture; for Robert V. Jensen to R. A. Marhoefer, sublease of store at Nos. 1035 and 1037 South Los Angeles street, for repair and installation of carburetors.

PLANS MANY HOUSES.

Architect Arthur B. Kelly of Los Angeles, is preparing plans for a number of buildings which the United Verde Copper Company has pledged itself to the Department of Labor to build at Clarkdale, Ariz. These buildings include an emergency hospital, forty-eight three-room dwellings, four sixteen-room bunk houses, and a clubhouse. Mr. Kelly is also preparing plans for the completion of a hospital building at Jerome, Ariz., and for twenty four-room dwellings to be built at Jerome by the same company. A large fireproof apartment building for the company is now under construction at Jerome.

TIMES "AD" SOLD IT.

James M. Hardman of No. 307 Haas Building reports the sale for $6500 cash of a fine six-room house at No. 957 Fourth avenue, in the Country Club tract, to J. A. Magasinn of the Magasinn-Norton Company, jobbers, No. 258 South Los Angeles street. A ten-line advertisement in the Sunday Times found the purchaser and the sale was consummated the following Monday.

FINE HOME SOLD.

Giles & Laack report the sale of a fine home at No. 434 South Kenmore avenue for H. M. McKnight to Mrs. Mariette Rust. The house has a white plaster exterior and contains ten handsomely-finished rooms. It stands on a lot 60x150 feet. The consideration was $11,000 cash. Mrs. Rust is a recent arrival from Detroit, Mich., and purchased the property for a permanent home.

BRICK APARTMENTS.

Work will be started at once on a two-story brick apartment-house on Fifth street in San Pedro for Mrs. L. E. Behymer of Los Angeles. The building will contain eight apartments in two and three-room suites, with private baths. The exterior will be faced with rug brick with terra cotta trimmings. Architects Train & Williams designed the house and Charles S. McCully has the contract to erect it.

Edifice for First Methodist congregation at Anaheim, designed by Architect Norman F. Marsh.

CHURCH WILL BUILD FOR PRESENT NEEDS.

ANAHEIM METHODISTS PLAN TO FINISH FINE EDIFICE AFTER THE WAR.

The Building Committee of the First Methodist Church at Anaheim received bids this week for the construction of a $20,000 church of Italian Rennaissance type, plans for which have been prepared by Architect Norman F. Marsh.

Notes to the amount of $16,000 have already been signed by members of the congregation, in furtherance of the new building plan, and in the event that satisfactory bids are received in the present call the contract will be let without delay. Rev. Harry White, pastor of the church, says that completion before midwinter is expected.

The new edifice will be built upon three lots at the corner of Broadway and Philadelphia streets. The structure will be of white cement finish. Owing to the fact that war conditions make it impossible to secure building materials in large quantities, the church board plans to erect at this time only such portions of the building as are essential to meet present needs.

This share of the work will include an auditorium capable of seating 500 people, classrooms for the several Sunday-school departments, Epworth League rooms, ladies' parlors, and a church kitchen and dining-room.

The arrangement of a pipe organ which has been donated by Mrs. Charles Eygabroad and Mrs. Will Wagner, Jr., will be a novel feature of the building. It will be built in at the front of the auditorium, and the section to which it will be affixed will serve as the front of the building. At some future time, when extension of the building plan is possible, the pipe organ section will be moved forward upon the lot, and the connecting section of construction will supply the front half of a greatly enlarged auditorium.

Mr. White has been pastor of the Anaheim Methodist Church for two years. This will be the third new church building in Southern California for which he is responsible. While he served those congregations as pastor the Methodist Church at Covina and the Methodist Church at Pico Heights were erected.

The Anaheim Methodist Church building board is comprised of Charles Eygabroad, Will Wagner, Jr., W. S. Price, John Taggart, P. H. Krick, E. L. Hein and Pastor White.

PLAN EXTENSION OF STATE SCHOOL.

NEW BUILDINGS FOR CALIFORNIA SCHOOL FOR GIRLS AT VENTURA.

State Engineer McClure is preparing to start the erection at once of a another group of buildings for the California School for Girls near Ventura. Plans have been made for a trades building, a gymnasium and three cottages for inmates. Bids have been taken for the work, showing the five buildings, as planned, will cost about $90,000. It is possible one of the buildings may not be erected at the present time as the available funds are short of the actual cost of the entire group. Negotiations with contractors are now in progress and a contract will probably be let in a few days.

The gymnasium building will be two stories and basement, 42x86 feet; the trades building two stories and basement, 34x65 feet; the cottages will be two stories, one 34x65 feet and the other two 34x80 feet. The structures will have concrete basements, shake siding and shingle roofs. They will be heated by steam.

SHIPBUILDING PLANT ENLARGING FACILITIES.

INDUSTRIAL expansion and building activity at Los Angeles Harbor continue unabated. The Southwestern Shipbuilding Company has started the erection of a number of additional buildings at its plant in East San Pedro. These include a paymaster's office, paint shop, two toilet buildings, portable oil house, welders' office, carpenter shop, drafting-room, salt water pumphouse and toolhouse. The pumphouse will be constructed of reinforced concrete and the remainder of the buildings will be frame construction.

Work will be started at once by the Harbor Commission on the new road to be constructed from the Southwestern Shipbuilding Company's plant to the city limits of Long Beach. An appropriation has been made for the work and it will be done by the Harbor Commission by force account in order to provide the transportation facilities required by the company as quickly as possible.

It is expected that work will be started soon in a new plant for the National Engineering Corporation, which is engaged in outfitting vessels for the Shipping Board. It has secured four acres at Pier A, adjoining its present plant, on which to erect a new building.

Permits have been issued during the last week for many new houses to be erected at the harbor. Among the new projects are the following: Sixteen-room frame flat building at No. 492 O'Farrell street for Mrs. Clara Rose; six three-room bungalows and one six-room bungalow at Nos. 463 to 469 West Eighth street for the Carr-Edwards Realty Company; sixteen-room frame flat building at No. 466 West Eighth street for Mrs. B. Loomis; four three-room bungalows at No. 754 Elberson avenue for Mrs. Jennie Crowell; two double bungalows at No. 605 Shepard street for C. E. Fulton; four three-room bungalows at No. 754 Elberson avenue for H. Keller; two six-room double bungalows at Nos. 582 and 588 West Fifteenth street for Emma Mesick and a ten-room double residence at Twelfth street and Grand avenue for Henry Eggers.

GARLAND TO SPEAK AT REALTY BOARD.

BIG MEETING PLANNED FOR HEAD OF NATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

W. M. Garland, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and past president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, is expected to speak at a meeting of the Los Angeles Realty Board this week. He is one of the "dollar-a-year" men patriotically serving his country in speeding up the shipbuilding programme. He has just returned from the East to the Pacific Coast and is motoring from San Francisco to Los Angeles. For this reason the time of his arrival is uncertain, and the date for the meeting will not be announced until after his return to Los Angeles. Other speakers of note will be secured for the meeting. Plans are being laid to make it a big affair.

HOMES WHERE FOLKS ARE HAPPY.
Did you ever stop to consider how much environment really means to your welfare and happiness? When your thoughts turn to home after a hard day's work do you picture a cosy, cool little bungalow, your pipe, your favorite chair, plenty of room to lounge as you please? Or do you see a stuffy, warm, little apartment where you don't dare to have music or talk above a whisper after 9 o'clock at night? In Sunnyside Garden Acres Addition there are scores of families who used to live in apartments. Ask them now which they prefer. They will very quickly tell you the joys of a REAL home. Investigate this delightful home spot that is convenient to the business section by 5-cent yellow cars. Free excursions leave our offices every

OCEAN AVE., LONG BEACH.

FOR SALE—READ EVERY WORD OF THIS AD, as it means money to you if you are in the market for an extremely rare opportunity to buy a piece of suburban acreage for less money than you would pay for inferior land a long way from this city. I advertised 50 acres last week, just near Burbank, in the heart of the San Fernando Valley. I have accepted a deposit of $500 on one-half of this from a man who has traveled all over the country and knew a bargain when he saw it; it took but one ad to reach him. He will start in at once to build and improve his property. I now want to reach a man who will take the other half. I will arrange through the bank for a loan for 70 per cent. of its value for three years at 7 per cent. It only takes $2375 of cash to buy this, and assume the mortgage which I will arrange to suit you. The price I will sell it at is $115 an acre less than the bank appraisement, and $200 an acre less than anything in this whole neighborhood. I have until Saturday, August 17, to turn the trick. Go look at the property if you are in the market, and it is sold. RATTRAY, 1003 Title Insurance Bldg.

Can you realize what that means to property values in Wilmington? ALFALFA MEANS WEALTH!
HERE'S 40 ACRES BEST
ALFALFA LAND FOR $7400

ORANGE, LEMON AND WALNUT GROVES—For Sale and Exchange.

For Sale.

FOR SALE—

Proven groves, highly productive, and in pink of condition.

Why waste 3 to 5 years building up a rundown grove?

Let me show you the cost of such an experiment.

BUY A PRODUCER, on its present condition and past record.

Many net 10 to 30 per cent. on purchase price. Any man of average mental ability can keep them doing it.

Neglect is what stops the income.

Improper care can change a $30,000 grove to a rundown $15,000 property in less than a year. Who wants it then, with the prospect of spending several thousand dollars and waiting 3 to 5 years before knowing how badly it was hurt?

Cheap prices bring rundown groves.

BUY A PRODUCER.

Pomona Valley, Covina, Charter Oak, San Dimas La Verne.
20 acres mixed, $30,000.
10 acres navels and Valencias, $22,000.
10 acres navels and Valencias, $20,000.
9 acres navels and Valencias, $23,000.
5 acres navels, $8000.

A particularly good 10 acres, navels and Valencias, very heavy crop set, bungalow and garage, $25,000; owner in draft; $10,000 down, balance long time at 6 per cent.

I can find the grove you want. Write for appointment.

STEEL BAROMETER OF INDUSTRIAL GROUP IN WEEK LACKING IN INTEREST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Despite the many interesting developments, trading in securities was only slightly in excess of the preceding period which marked the low level of the year. Intense heat reduced the interest of traders and investors to extremely moderate dimensions, but prices more than held, mainly as a result of the inspiring war news.

Rails emerged from their long seclusion, hardening on signs of a satisfactory adjustment of the more serious differences between the owners of such securities and the Federal authorities.

United States Steel was the barometer of the industrial group attaining its maximum quotation of several weeks in the face of extensive realizing for profits.

Affiliated shares made favorable response to the high pressure prevailing in the steel and iron industry, but coppers and related metals yielded moderately after the failure of the War Industries Board to advance prices.

Pools operated in desultory fashion, confining their occasional activities to tobaccos, oils and miscellaneous issues, without eliciting much response from outside circles. Shippings were dormant most of the time, but were spurred into prominence latter on a sharp rise in marine preferred.

Restrictions urged against credit by the local Federal reserve bank had the effect of curtailing time money offerings to renewals for small amounts.

New financing was undertaken for minor industrial and utility companies, but investment inquiry was limited.

THE CITRUS MARKETS: WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

THE market on Valencias is strong and higher, the demand in all markets being in excess of the supply.

F.o.b. quotations are on a basis of $7 with very best stock as high as $7.25.

The auction markets continue to show a higher range of values than private sale markets and as a result the bulk of the supplies are going to the auctions.

Bidding is reported as being very excited and the situation is exceedingly strong notwithstanding the increasing offerings of all summer fruits.

LEMONS.

The unprecedented hot wave which has swept over the entire eastern markets has caused lemon prices to soar as high as $10.30 average having been realized at Pittsburgh on Thursday. Coming at a time when the lemon market was inclined to be rather groggy, due in part to the new sugar regulations, shippers feel that present values cannot be maintained after the present hot spell subsides and a generally easier feeling, with correspondingly lower values, is anticipated.

September 15 is ordinarily looked upon as the turning period in demand for lemons as the market gets down to a more settled basis for the fall demand.

The hot spell enabled shippers to dispose of 360s size to advantage, this size being more plentiful in the eastern markets at this time owing to the slowing up of the demand in the South where that particular size sells to the best advantage. Eastern markets have been paying as high as $2.50 premium for the 300 size, but the sudden hot spell has evened up the score and created a demand for all sizes.

The sale of 41,000 boxes of foreign lemons the past week did not materially affect the market on California fruit. The cargo showed up generally poor quality and condition with practically no fruit fit to ship to interior markets in original packages.

A total of 93,000 boxes of foreign lemons are reported available for sale within the next thirty days as against 48,600 boxes on the corresponding date last season.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Considerable activity was the feature of yesterday's buying and selling at the local produce market and there was a good demand for all varieties of products, especially for potatoes, which jumped from 5 to 10 cents above the previous day's close on the opening of the session and steadily advanced throughout the day, closing at $2.75 for home-grown stock, which was of very ordinary quality, and $3 for northern offerings which was much better. The bureau of markets announces that September requirements of the fifty-one army cantonments in the matter of potatoes and onions will be given out on August 13, and information under the conditions which the army will make its purchases may be obtained from the bureau.

Home-grown tomatoes were also active and the oversupplies of last week were fairly well cleaned up. What good stock there was on hand moved quickly at from $1.35 to $1.45, a slight advance over Friday's close. The majority of the offerings were very soft and of inferior quality and moved moderately at a much lower figure, some selling as low as $1 a crate.

The wholesale fruit market was stronger yesterday and all varieties of first-class stock moved moderately and high prices was the feature of this branch of the exchange. Peaches and plums are coming in in good condition and housewives, grocers and small middlemen bought in nearly all the stock offered at from $2 to $2.50 per lug; for plums and peaches at from $1.25 to $2.25 per lug box. Grapes appeared in larger quantities than usual and sold at a slightly lower level than the previous day, while pears and apples were steady.

Receipts at the local produce exchange yesterday were as follows: Eighty-two cases of eggs, 2970 pounds of butter, 55,200 pounds of cheese, 570 sacks of potatoes and 65 sacks of sweet potatoes.

COTTON GOES UP $5 TO SEASON'S RECORD.

WAR NEWS, TEXAS DROUGHT AND HIGHER SOUTHERN MARKETS, CAUSE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Cotton prices went to new high records for the season in the New York market today, with a further advance of fully $5 a bale. News of further Allied victories in France, continued dry weather in Texas and reports of higher spot markets in the Southwest inspired the buying movement.

The opening was strong and active and within twenty minutes the market jumped sixty points over last night's close on week-end covering by shorts. New Orleans was a good buyer and offerings were light after the opening. Stop orders were encountered on the way up, adding to the strength of the market.

The market showed increasing activity and strength during the middle session. The reports of big Allied victories in France seemed to be creating a more bullish sentiment than at any time previously this week, and there was trade buying as well as covering and a broadening commission-house demand on the advance which extended to 30.42 for October and 29.90 for January, or 111 to 127 points above last night's closing figures on the active months. There was realizing enough to check the upward movement at this level, but the close showed only slight reactions with the tone firm at a net gain of 109 to 117 points.

CORN MARKET WEAK; PROVISIONS GAIN.

EXCELLENT WEATHER CONDITIONS AND ALLIED VICTORIES CAUSES SETBACK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Pronounced setbacks in the price of corn resulted today from excellent weather conditions and from the Allied victories in France. The market closed weak, 2⅛ to 3¼ net lower with September 1.58⅞@1.59⅛ and October 1.60⅛@1.60¼. Oats lost 1⅝ to 1⅝. In provisions there were gains of 7 to 40 cents.

Liberal receipts and expected deliveries on contracts weakened oats. Arrivals for the week were nearly double the corresponding total last year. Export demand was lacking.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Wheat, spot, steady; No. 2 red, 2.34½, track New York, export, to arrive. Corn, spot, firmer; fresh shelled No. 2 yellow, 2.05⅞, and No. 3 yellow, 1.95⅞, cost and freight New York. Oats, spot easier; standard, 79@80.

SHORTS DRIVEN TO COVER AS VICTORY STARTS RUSH.

United States Steel Conspicuous at Steady Advance; Many Other Gains.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Shorts were again hurriedly driven to cover in today's brief stock market session, the further retreat of the Germans and the capture of Montdidier by the Allies causing another uprush in the more distinctive equipments and war shares. United States Steel was the conspicuous feature, displaying much of its recent vigor at a steady advance of 1⅛ points to 112⅝, its top price since last May.

Other active stocks at gains of substantial fractions to 2 points were Bethlehem and Crucible steels, Baldwin Locomotive, Anaconda Copper, United Cigars and shippings, especially marine, although the latter yielded much of its advantage at the end.

Rails regained their recent backwardness, although showing a firm to strong undertone and the more volatile specialties were represented by General Motors at a 5-point decline. Sales amounted to 225,000 shares.

The most interesting item bearing upon industrial conditions was the July tonnage statement of the United States Steel Corporation, which disclosed a steady moderate decrease in unfilled orders in comparison with the very large gain registered in June.

Actual bank loans increased by the large sum of $152,000,000, making a total increase of $125,000,000 in the past three weeks.

Bonds were strong, Paris 6's gaining a point and Liberty issues stiffening on the sustained strength of the 3½'s. Total sales, par value, were $3,075,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The actual condition of clearinghouse banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $40,839,380 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is a decrease of $14,392,810 from last week.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Mercantile paper unchanged. Sterling, sixty-day bills, 4.73¼; others unchanged; demand, 4.76 1-16; cables, 4.77 1-16. Bar silver and Mexican dollars unchanged.

ADVANCE IN "GAS" IS SHOWN ON EXCHANGE.

LOCAL BROKERS EXPECT RENEWED ACTIVITY IN OILS; MINE FAVORITES MOVE.

Boosting, yesterday, of the retail price of gasoline one-half cent a gallon had the effect of livening things up to an appreciable degree on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange during the usual Saturday half-session. Although the announced advance by the principal companies did not immediately result in any changed prices in the local oil list, stocks in the big companies hardened and bidders failed to come up to prices asked by holders of stock in Union, General Petroleum and some lesser companies. A prominent broker expressed the opinion that the advance in "gas" would be followed by a pronounced activity in a large number of oil stocks within the next few weeks.

The mining list yesterday was unusually active for a Saturday session, with a noteworthy amount of trading in two or three issues which have been in most demand during the week. Gold Ore, which seems to be enjoying a period of renewed favor with the buying public, was again in demand. Thirteen thousand shares changed hands. It opened at 4¼ and closed at 4, however, and the loss of ¼ point is regarded as somewhat counterbalancing the demand. On the other hand, Tom Reed, a strong favorite during the week, jumped 5 points during the short exchange session, opening at 1.54½ and closed at 59½. The advance was attributed by the professionals to rumors that the company would declare a dividend within the next three months.

Altogether, the local mining list seems to be enjoying a period of prosperity, upon a firm basis, with the great war demand for metals and also owing to the fact that advices from the Arizona fields indicate an era of industrial peace is at hand. Likewise, company litigation of long standing in the neighboring State appears in a way to be settled, the latest information bearing on this phase of the situation being that the Ray Consolidated and the Ray Hercules have reached an agreement as to trackage to the Hercules ore bins at Ray.

There was a brisk trading for a while in the bond list. In Liberty Bonds, the 3½'s continued the favorite denomination, while the other issues also changed hands in considerable numbers. The 3½'s opened at 99½ and closed at 99⅝, making ⅛ point advance.

The War Industries Board has notified all makers of passenger automobiles that their plants must be on a war-working basis by January 1, otherwise preservation of their organizations could not be assured.

THE 7% PREFERRED STOCK HAS THE FORCE OF FIRST MORTGAGE

The Seven Per Cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock is a first lien on the Company's real estate, buildings and machinery, appraised at $367,669.48. A Trust Deed on this property in the amount of $200,000 has been placed with the Title Insurance & Trust Company together with 200 First Mortgage Bonds of $1,000 denomination. Should the Company fail to redeem the Preferred shares or pay the interest thereon the Preferred share-holders have the right, if they desire it, to exchange their shares for First Mortgage Bonds.

The Company agrees that no dividends shall be declared upon the Common Stock until the Profit and Loss Surplus equals three times the amount required to pay the year's dividend on the Preferred Stock outstanding. Each Series, on its respective redemption date, becomes a debt against the Company, giving holders the same right to enforce payment as that of any creditor.

All stock must be cancelled at redemption and is not subject to re-issue.

No additional stock having prior or equal rights can be authorized during the life of this issue without the written consent of three-fourths of the outstanding Preferred Stock.

Issue is preferred both as to earnings and assets.

Assuming that the Company will earn no more profit than the average of 1916 and 1917 the figures show that the accumulated Surplus at December 31st, 1920, will amount to upwards of $51,000 after paying all dividends and redeeming $50,000 of Preferred shares.

The average earnings of the Company, approximately, equal four times the amount required to pay the interest on the present issue of Preferred stock.

In 1920 there will be available ample margin to pay dividends on the Common Stock.

The net proceeds of this issue are being used to liquidate all short time obligations of the Company.

We will furnish a descriptive circular upon request which contains detailed information about the earnings of the Company, from its President. Also a Financial Statement and description of improvements.

WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE WORKING ON LESS STRINGENT AUTO TAX.

Latest Information.

PROPOSE TO MAKE LEVY ON HORSE-POWER BASIS.

Rates Nearly Correspond to Present Schedule in California; Cost Price Plan Dropped.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The Ways and Means Committee at its meeting today turned a flip-flop in regard to the form of the automobile tax, due to a strenuous criticism of its proposed plan to tax automobiles annually a certain amount based on original cost, regardless of whether or not the machine was bought second-hand and how old it might be. The complaints against this plan came so thick and fast that the committee took heed and today entirely rewrote the automobile schedule, placing the tax on horse power instead of original cost.

The new excise tax is framed after the registration taxes now in force in many of the States. It provides the following schedule of annual taxes: twenty-three horse power and under, $10; on twenty-four to thirty horse power, $20; on thirty to forty horse power, $30, and above forty horse power, $60.

The new tax will not raise as large an amount of money as that initially planned. That much is conceded, though it is not known or estimated how much it would raise. There is a marked similarity between the new plan and that in force in perhaps a majority of the States. Members of the committee called attention to the fact that the new tax would amount to about the same as the tax in California, for instance, which is 40 cents per horse power. The owner of an automobile of twenty-three horse power under the Federal law would pay $10 per annum and under the State law $9.20 per annum.

LEVIES VARY.

Samples of taxes levied in various States, brought up for comparison, follow:

Washington State, up to twenty-... horse power, $3; from twenty-... to thirty-nine horse power, $5; ... thirty-nine horse power upward [illegible].

Kentucky—Up to twenty-five horse power, $6; from twenty-five to fifty horse power, $11; fifty-one and over, $20.

Colorado—Up to twenty horse power, $2.50; from twenty-five to forty-nine horse power, $5; over fifty horse power, $10.

Idaho—Up to thirty horse power, $15; from thirty to forty horse power, $20; from forty to fifty horse power, $25; over fifty horse power, $40.

Ohio—Straight tax of $5 annually on automobiles and $3 on electrics.

Indiana—Up to twenty-five horse power, $5; between twenty-five and forty horse power, $8; between forty and fifty horse power, $15; above fifty horse power, $20.

An example of how automobilists will be hit with the taxes is afforded by a study of the California situation as follows: (1) A personal property tax, which makes automobiles subject of taxation for State,

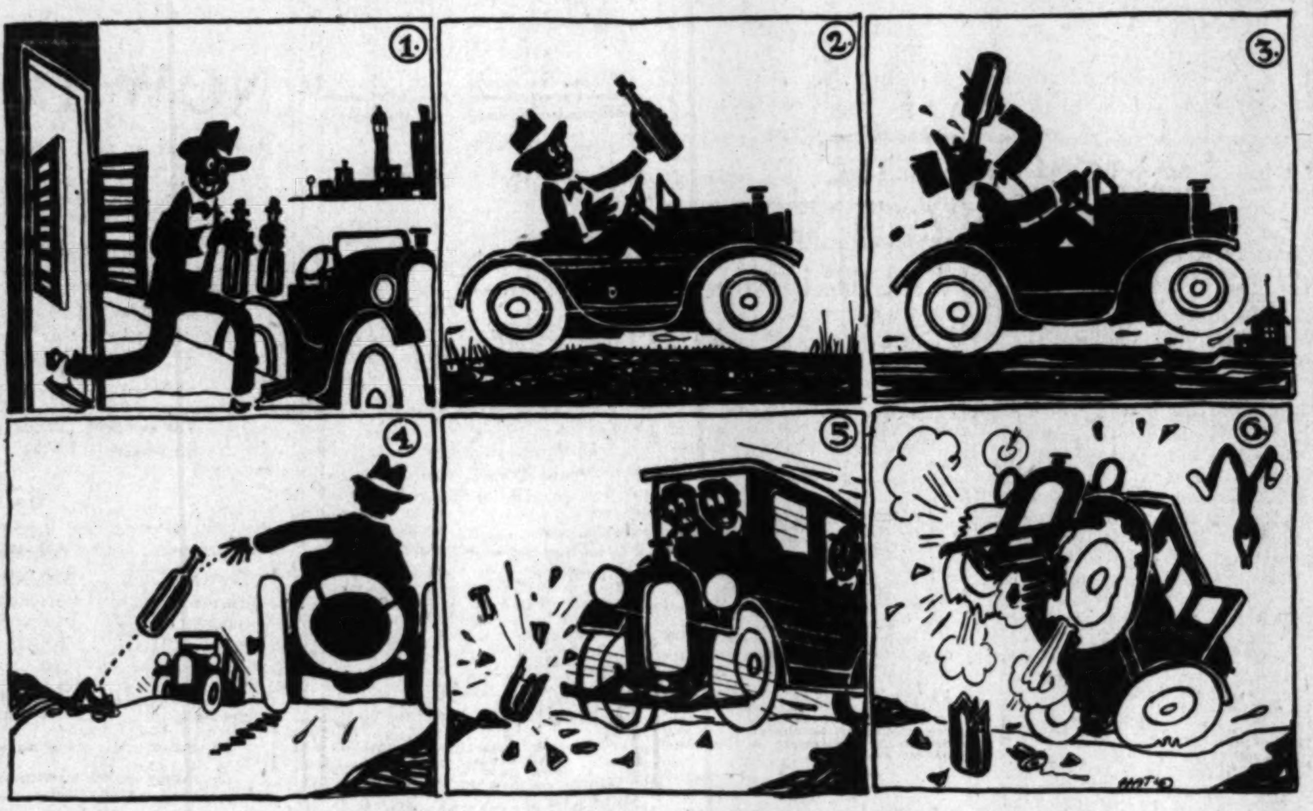
Motor Cars, Trucks and Tractors Hastening to Assist Uncle Sam.

A Story without Words. . . . . By HATLO.



THE GLASS THROWER IS A FIRST COUSIN OF THE KAISER.

His destructive activities are directly opposed to the principles of war-time conservation and frequently cause accident and injury. The money spent to repair and replace glass-wrecked tires in Los Angeles during the last six months would have papered the City Hall with Thrift Stamps. When you see a person wilfully throwing glass upon the road endeavor to identify him and bring the matter to the attention of the proper authorities. When you come across a smear of glass be a good sport and clean it up yourself or notify the nearest street sweeper. The Automobile Club of Southern California is willing to send a car a reasonable distance to remove glass from the road. The motorist will not be freed of the omnipresent glass bugaboo until strict punishment is meted out to all offenders and perfect co-operation secured in keeping the highways free from the dangerous substance.

THREE SNAPPY GAMES TODAY.

The second round of play in the War Service League will take place this afternoon with three promising engagements on the cards. Many former eastern and Coast League players are appearing with the six clubs of the organization.

Today's schedule reads as follows: Naval Reserve vs. Southwestern Shipyards at Washington Park; L. A. Shipbuilding vs. Pasadena at Pasadena, and Standard Murphys vs. Submarine Base at La Habra.

SHORTSTOP ANDREWS SUITS RED KILLEFER.

Red Killefer thinks pretty well of his new shortstop, Andrews. The young 'un made his first Los Angeles appearance yesterday. He handles himself well at the short station and has a sharp whip. Killefer is sure that later on in the season Andrews will hold his own with the best of them in the War Service League.

Inauguration.

SOUTHWESTERNS TROUNCE THE MIDDIES IN OPENER.

THE Southern California War Service Baseball League opened its long Los Angeles season at Washington Park yesterday afternoon under promising auspices. Red Killefer's Southwesterns trounced the Naval Reserves, 4 to 3. Frank Chance, the Peerless Leader, tossed the first ball over the plate amid vociferous applause. For the remainder of the afternoon Frank was the guest of I. H. Sample, president of the league.

Killefer sent his one best bet, Master Valencia, to the mound. The kid pitched a good game, allowing but four hits. He was invincible up to the sixth inning, but after that let up for a spell. When the Reserves threatened, however, in the eighth, he tightened up and called a halt.

Fitzpatrick heaved a fair game for the Middies, but was rather wild and unsteady. He was touched up pretty lively in the first three cantos, but after that twirled a swell article of ball, allowing but one hit.

The Southwesterns got on batting terms with Fitz in the opening session as follows: Andrews went out, Doran to Burns. Pepe singled infield. Killefer darted a beauty to center for a single. Pepe went to third and Red to second when Samis dropped the ball as he attempted to throw it. Crawford grounded out to Burns, Pepe scoring. Rube Ellis, just to show the fans that ranch life could not wither or stale him, bundled a sizzling two-bagger down the first-base line, scoring Killefer. Boles popped to Kelly. Two runs, three hits and one error.

IN THE SECOND.

In the second inning Kiel went out, Doran to Burns. Penner walked and took second on Valencia's single to left. Andrews whiffed. Pepe was safe at first on Kelly's error, Penner scoring. Killefer was out, Doran to Burns. One run, one hit and one error.

As Sam Crawford ambled to the plate at the beginning of the third inning some of his admirers shouted: "Just one of those old-timers, Sam, when Cobb was on first base." Samuel spat upon his hands, poised his war club far back and jabbed the first one over for a mighty swat to right-center. Samis scooted after it, but the ball volplaned over his head

BABE RUTH TO APPEAR HERE.

It looks very much as if Ruth in his line-up about Red Killefer will have Babe September 10. When Babe isn't pitching he will probably cover center for the Southwestern club.

Red predicts that Ruth will drop one into right-field bleachers before the season is very old. In fact the Southwestern captain declares he would not be surprised to see Babe sail one over the fence.

CHANCE SANGUINE FOR NEW LEAGUE.

Frank Chance is sanguine that the War Service League will be the big thing in baseball this fall. As there will be no organized baseball until the war is over, Chance is of the opinion that the fans will take to the week-end games, especially after September 1, when many of the big league players come to the Coast and seek work in the shipyards here.

Advice from a Veteran.

KEEP WATCHFUL EYE ON WHEELS OF YOUR CAR; VARIOUS TYPES NEED FREQUENT ATTENTION.

BY BARNEY OLDFIELD.

THE wheels upon which the modern motor car rides, may seem like prosaic and simple part of the vehicle, yet strangely enough the wheel industry has had a small sized romance of its own.

In the early days of the industry the motor car manufacturers followed bicycle practice and used the wire wheels that had been handed down to them by the bicycle makers. This served well enough while the automobile was a small light contraption, but as it began to grow into a full-sized vehicle, the wire wheels of bicycle design were found to be totally unable to meet the demands made upon them.

Then the wheel makers turned to the wagon manufacturers and began making wheels of hickory, which are still predominant in the American field.

WITH US AGAIN.

However, a few years later the wire wheel manufacturers engineered a "come-back," offering a wheel that was correctly designed to meet the demands of automobile service. Today the scientific wire wheel has carved out a definite place for itself and is becoming increasingly popular every year. Finally we must not overlook the steel wheel, which is a development of the past few years. This type is made in disc form, or like the wooden wheel, but the material is steel; these wheels are extensively used in truck practice and even on passenger cars, particularly in Europe.

We will consider first the wooden wheel, against which little complaint can be made when it embodies the proper sort of wood, namely second growth hickory. This wood has the greatest strength and resistance to shock. Indeed the principal argument against the best grade of American hickory wheels is simply that the supply of this wood is so limited that before long we shall be compelled to seek another material for wheel construction. Hickory has plenty of the resiliency that enables it to absorb the shock incident to road travel and the vibrations always present in the motor car. As a matter of fact recent government estimates put the amount of standing hickory in this country at 19,000,000,000 board feet, which would supply wooden wheels for all our motor cars for many years to come. But, in addition, modern reforesting methods insure that this supply will be maintained at its present stage so that we may dismiss this argument against hickory wheels. Further, it has been found possible to use as wheel material for certain classes of work, motor trucks of some classes, other hard woods, such as white ash, hard maple, northern birch, white oak, rock elm, making the supply practically inexhaustable.

CURING A SQUEAK.

There are few troubles peculiar to wooden wheels with which the car owner has to cope. Sometimes the spokes may become loose, so that an annoying squeaking is set up. This is easily cured by driving wedges of wood or iron at the base of the loose spoke at the hub. The hub bolts, which pass through the wheel and retain the hub plate in position and in the rear wheels hold the brake drum also, need a little attention. They must not be allowed to get loose, as this will destroy the alignment of the wheel.

Next in popularity to the wooden wheel, is that of wire. Adherents of the wire wheel claim that it has wheel, that it is a better conductor of heat and so helps to reduce the temperature that develops in the tire when the car is in operation, and that the wire wheel of present-day design has greater strength than wood. There is no trouble with the wire wheel from squeaking. A further claim is that the wire wheel holds its shape better than the wooden one, the latter tending to become slightly ovoid in the course of long service.

There are certain definite attentions that must be bestowed upon the wire wheel if it is to be kept up to efficient service. The owner of a car with wire wheels ought to give these parts a careful inspection once a month, anyway, to see that none of the spokes have loosened. The enamel must not be permitted to crack off around the nipples, as this permits rusting to start and eventually the spoke will pull out and a ragged hole will develop. One of the commonest troubles with wire wheels is their propensity for collecting mud and dirt in the spaces between spokes. A wire wheel clogged with mud is not an inspiring sight, but fortunately there are a number of special brushes, wire and bristle, which enable the owner to clean the wheel without difficulty.

There are several methods of attaching wire wheels. One of these uses a serrated drive and it is important to keep these serrations clean. If one of them becomes broken, it will be difficult to mount the wheel properly. The surface of the serrations should be kept free from rust or dirt of any kind, kerosene or oil serving to do this.

The method of covering the outside of wire wheels with discs of steel or aluminum, is one of the latest developments. This serves to keep out mud or dirt and is considered a swagger touch, anyway.

MANUFACTURERS ADVISED TO ADOPT A STRICT WAR BASIS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Manufacturers of passenger automobiles were advised by the War Industries Board yesterday to convert their plants to 100 per cent. war work as rapidly as possible and to place them on that basis not later than January 1, 1919, in a letter addressed to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. In no other way, the letter stated, could they be assured of the continuance of their industry or the preservation of their organizations. The letter was in response to a proposal made by Hugh Chalmers, on the part of the manufacturers, voluntarily to curtail the passenger-car industry 50 per cent.

TRUCK FLEETS APPEAR IN MANY PARTS OF COUNTRY.

Ford Would Build Tractors in Mexico; Other Last-Minute Developments.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, (Mich.) Aug. 10.—H. P. Gould, chairman of the Truck Owners' Conference, was in Detroit this week completing arrangements for the big meeting to be held here on September 21 and 22. At the first meeting held in Chicago in the spring it was agreed to come to Detroit, where more owners would be apt to be attracted owing to the immensity of the industry in Michigan.

"The conference will be of importance to both owners and makers," said a member of the local committee. "All of the owners here whom I have interviewed are locally interested, as there will be an exchange of ideas and methods that will be beneficial to all."

HELPING RAILROADS.

Return loads bureaus were just getting under way at the time of the Chicago meeting, but now they have been in operation long enough for the conference to discuss as a means of service to manufacturers and merchants and of profit to the operators of the truck fleets which are springing up in Detroit and all over the country.

By September 1 the Hup Motor Car Company will have in dealers' hands throughout America the Hupmobile industrial wagon, as it will be called. This will be a standardized design and mounted on the Hupmobile chassis. The body will be convertible into various types of body.

Henry Ford has submitted to President Carranza a plan to manufacture tractors in Mexico, according to announcements made by Mexican newspapers. The plan is to educate Mexican mechanics in the tractor plant here and have them return to their native land to operate a large factory to be established there. The principal object of the Mexican factory will be the manufacture of tractors which will be sold to farmers practically at cost and also on terms which will allow them to be paid for from the increased crops made possible by the use of the modern machinery.

At present those wishing to buy tractors are met by the necessity of paying heavy freight, important other charges, commissions, etc. All this will be obviated by the factory in Mexico, and the tractors and other machinery will be sold for much less than now is possible. Mr. Ford declares that his sole purpose is to benefit Mexico, and that every cent of profit that may be made in this enterprise will remain in that country. Stringent provisions will be made in this direction in the contracts that will be drawn up, while after his death his descendants will be required to follow the same policy.

It is the intention of Mr. Ford to invest several millions in this enterprise—whatever sum may be necessary to put it upon a successful footing from its inception. No idea has been given as to the probable location of the manufactory.

It has been patent since early in the present year that the era of low prices in the automobile industry has passed for a time—at least until peace returns. But the scope and number of price increases that have been quietly put into effect by practically all of the big companies this year, especially during the past sixty days, are far greater than generally appreciated save by actual buyers.

Only three important companies have failed to promulgate radically new price schedules this year. They are Buick, Hudson and Stutz. Buick alone of the big producers has remained firm through the stress of the wartime readjustment.

The advances have been notable. Chevrolet, launched at $490, to reach the field just above the Ford, is now $245 away from its original price base—all but $60 of which has been added since January, 1917. Dodge, unconsciously regarded as a fixture in the $750-$800 class, has moved up practically into the $1000 class. Maxwell, too, has been jolted out of the low $600 class into the $800 field. Studebaker has gone from $940 to $1125. The Overland since January, 1917, has gone in five gradual steps from $665 to $895.

On the high-priced machines the increases stand out even more prominently. The sum total, for instance, of the Packard's five advances since the first of the last year is almost $1500, with a twin-six now costing $4300, as compared with $2865 twenty months ago. Cadillac, which occupied the $2500 field so completely, has been forced up on three different occasions, stopping at $3200. Pierce-Arrow, stationary all year notwithstanding a greatly restricted output, has just yielded to the inevitable with an $1100 increase from $5400 to $6500.

Other significant indications of the fundamental price trend lie in the four advances by the conservative Franklin management in their "air-cooled" product from $1850 last April to $2450 this June; in the Chandler $400 increase, in Hudson's $350 and in the various other increases by representative concerns.

All sentiment is laid aside when a delivery motor vehicle is purchased, ultimate cost and the minimum interruption of service are the prime requisites of the buyers.

In either case the REO 3-4 ton "SPEED WAGON" fills all requirements, it is sure, speedy and economical. It is the most economical fast delivery vehicle a business man can buy.

They are continuing to make enviable records for business houses, also as passenger carrying stages and have been widely adopted by many school boards for transporting students to and from school.

All vital parts are fifty per cent. oversize and afford maximum accessibility.

You will have to pay more later if able to get your order filled at all within a reasonable time. We advise purchasing motor vehicles now if you wish to insure yourself safe, dependable, economical transportation under your own control. You will be sure to need it.

Increased Use of Automobile Frees Passenger Trains for Service of the Government.

CUTTING IS THE POLICY.

Railroad Passenger Service Being Reduced.

Auto Travel Helps Bring About Change.

Companies Get Upper Hand of Congestion.

Railroads throughout the United States have been enabled to reduce their passenger service largely because of the increased use of automobiles for summer travel, for commuting, and for business trips, according to Lynn C. Buxton, distributor for the Liberty and Stearns-Knight cars.

In order to relieve freight congestion, said Mr. Buxton, the railroads under government control are throwing aside all competitive barriers and are reducing superfluous passenger service. Automobile owners are proving of great assistance to the nation by co-operating with the railroads in using motor cars for travel and transportation wherever possible.

Some years ago the automobile as a means for travel and transportation was almost negligible. Today, with the present state of automobile efficiency, splendid roads, and the great durability of tires, the motor car has become a vital force in the nation's life, because of this fact and co-operation of car owners, the railroads are better able to carry on their work.

For some time the freight car congestion has been a great handicap to the industrial and economic life of this country. But now the railroads are bending every effort for the relief of that condition.

CLASSY TENNIS COURTS.

An unusual interest is being manifested in tennis at the big athletic field of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, O. The company maintains a series of very fine tennis courts, constantly kept in the pink of condition. So pronounced is this revival in tennis that a big tournament has just been inaugurated, to continue for a week. The games start immediately after office hours and continue until dark.

TIRE CONCERN GIVES OUT GOOD REPORT.

DIVIDENDS ARE DECLARED ON PREFERRED AND COMMON STOCK.

Announcement has just been made by M. D. Bixby, branch manager of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, that their net profits for the first six months of 1918 were $7,150,000.

"This is the net profit after maintenance charges, depreciation and doubtful accounts have been deducted and also all excess profits and income taxes provided for," said Mr. Bixby.

"At a recent quarterly meeting of the directors, a 1¾ per cent. dividend was declared on preferred stock, $1.75 per share, payable on October 1, and to holders of record preferred stock at the close of business, September 20.

"On common stock 1 per cent. dividend was declared, $1 per share, payable on November 15, to holders of record stock at the close of business, November 5.

"The profits for the whole year of 1917, according to officials of our company in Akron, amounted to $10,544,677. The profits for the first half of this year, it was pointed out almost equaled the profits of the whole of last year.

"The increase of profit, it was said, was not entirely due to the increase of war business done by the company, but rather to the great increase in the whole volume of business."

RAIN HITS 'EM BUT ONCE ON CROSS-COUNTRY TRIP.

TO TRAVEL 3653 miles across country and to encounter only one rainstorm in that entire distance is a rather novel performance, as the average cross-country tourist will be willing to testify. Such was the fortunate experience, however, of Carl R. Rhyan of Lafayette, Ind., who, with his wife and two daughters, recently arrived in Los Angeles after a leisurely tour over the Lincoln highway and south to Los Angeles over the coast road.

"We had 1200 pounds of passenger weight and luggage in the Hudson and 1200 more on a trailer, and naturally I wasn't anxious to run into any more mud than was necessary," Rhyan told J. H. Kindel, Hudson sales manager for Harold L. Arnold upon arriving last week. "We took things easy, traveling from 100 to 175 miles a day, but the first rain we encountered was a cloudburst in Nevada that mussed up the desert roads pretty badly.

"Our camping outfit was so complete that we were perfectly comfortable camping out anywhere, and I found an opportunity to do quite a little fishing and hunting on the way across. There are a number of places on the road, however, that call for a good deal of power in the car that has to carry such a load as the Super-Six did. The final grade to the Truckee summit was marked as 30 per cent. in our blue book, but the Hudson went over it, luggage, trailer and all.

"On the entire trip the Hudson averaged thirteen miles per gallon of gasoline, which I considered very good in view of the load carried, and it required just three gallons of oil for the 3653 miles."

GASOLINE SUPPLY NOT ENDANGERED.

CONSERVATION IS URGED BY FUEL ADMINISTRATION AS PRECAUTION.

Authorities have estimated the daily production of gasoline of the United States means about two gallons for the use of each auto owner per day, and as the average mileage of motor cars, including trucks, is about sixteen miles to the gallon, it is readily seen that the present supply is not in danger at the present rate of consumption.

"These figures are based upon the fact," says W. A. Chapman of the Leach Motor Car Company, distributors for Dorts, Premiers, Mitchells and Kings, "that the average motor car covers about 10,000 miles per year, and with thirty-two miles a day on the amount of gasoline now produced, per car, this means about 10,000 miles a year.

"At a recent meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce attended by Mark L. Requa, United States Oil Director, and W. Champlin Robinson, director of oil conservation of the Fuel Administration, it was stated that the gasoline situation is not accute at the present time, the most serious problem being that of transportation. The movement of war supplies receives first consideration, and these are being transported in greater quantities now than ever before.

"These gentlemen stated that for the next three or four months conservation of gasoline by users is urged because through the summer months during the long days and more pleasant weather gasoline consumption reaches its highest point."

"As one means of conservation the Leach Motor Car Company is regulating its demonstrating cars, cutting out all lost motion in useless trips."

OAKLAND MOTORIST HAS GOOD RECORD.

A total of 1744 miles without even a puncture was the touring record hung up this summer by A. L. Warmington of the Chevrolet Motor Company of California.

Mr. Warmington has been going from his residence in Oakland to his summer home in Santa Cruz for week-end visits. The distance each way is approximately 109 miles, and four hours has been the average running time. For eight successive weeks Warmington piloted his Chevrolet touring car over the round trip route, and wound up the season with a record for not stopping a single minute because of any form of "grief." The Chevrolet gave him an average of better than sixteen miles to the gallon of gasoline for the entire 1744 miles.

IN SERVICE SEVEN YEARS; STILL GOING.

After seven years of continuous service, J. M. Kitter, pastor of St. Martin's Church of Valley City, O., says he is so sure of the motor in his car that he wants to wager any sum that it will equal any motor built today in a nonstop contest.

"It has never failed me once in seven years of hard running," says Rev. Kitter. "It is known throughout the section as 'Old Reliable.'" The car is an Overland model 46. It was bought before speedometers were a part of the regular equipment and for this reason it is impossible for the owner to give an accurate total of the mileage covered."

SOGGING FRAMES ARE MUCH TOO COMMON.

It is common to find car frames that sag in the middle, after a considerable period of service. Sometimes this condition produces difficulty in clutch shifting and other mechanical operations because the various parts have been twisted a little out of alignment. The proper way to cure a sagging frame is to fit a truss rod, with a turnbuckle, under the sagging portion of the frame. If the car owner cannot carry out the repair himself, any machine shop or garage can do the work.

MAGNETO CONCERN APPOINTS LEADER.

Frank L. Wurl, who has been intimately connected with many new developments in automotive ignition, starting and lighting, has been promoted to the position of sales engineer of the Remy Electric Company, located at Detroit.

Mr. Wurl came to the Remy company a few years ago as electrical engineer, but his marked ability soon placed him at the head of the research laboratories, where he has directed many moves in the constant improving of Remy equipment.

SUMMER BUSINESS HOLDING UP WELL.

ORIGINAL EXPECTATIONS ARE BEATEN, SAYS SERVICE STATION HEAD.

"Our summer tire business is considerable ahead of our original expectations," reports W. R. Cain, manager of the local Norwalk tire service station. "By ordering several months ahead the eastern factory is able to keep us supplied in all sizes and although freight shipments are in transit several weeks longer than the normal period of time we are able to keep our stocks complete.

"According to reports from the factory we will not experience a shortage in shipments as the factory is well stocked with crude rubber and fabric and expects to fill all our orders for several months to come.

"No definite word has as yet been received as to when the first shipment of cord tires will leave the factory, but we have been assured by Norwalk officials that the Lichtenberger-Ferguson Company will be favored by receiving the first supply of cords to come from the finishing-room.

WHEEL SQUEAKING AND ITS REMEDY.

Squeaks eminating from the wheels are often caused by uneven tightening of the lugs. In this event loosen all the lugs and then tighten them up again gradually. Tighten up one a little and then do the same for the one directly opposite; go all around the wheel drawing the lugs down a little at a time. It will be found that this treatment will cure any case of squeaks resulting from this cause.

MOUNTAIN TRIP LITTLE KNOWN.

Few Familiar with Summit of Johnson's Grade.

Prepare Well When Tackling Rim of World Drive.

Take Proper Precautions and Avoid Accidents.

Of the hundreds of motorists taking the "Rim of the World" drive at present, and invading the Bear Valley, but few visit Bluff Lake and the summit of Johnson's Grade, points of great interest that are easily accessible.

The road to the summit of Johnson's Grade leads around Baldwin Lake past the old Doble mine, to a point where a wonderful view of the sphinx-like Mohave Desert may be had. The Bluff Lake trip, which takes one but several miles from the main camp section of the valley, ends up at an abandoned mountain report atop a neighboring peak. A young man who is educating himself for the pulpit has been "batching" it here for four years, and his experiences in winter rival the pages of Bret Harte.

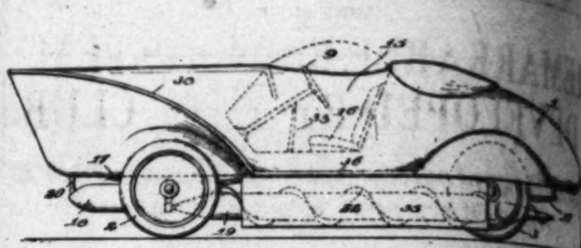
People should realize that they are embarking on something a little stiffer than an afternoon's jaunt on the boulevard when tackling the Rim, and see that their cars are in good shape. An adequate warning signal is imperative for the hundreds of short curves and grades that are encountered on the trip. While placing warning signs and direction placards in the valley last week, a sign-posting crew of the Automobile Club of Southern California came across numbers of drivers who were stalled miles from any mechanical assistance with minor troubles that anyone who drives should be able to remedy immediately.

All who make this trip are urged to remember the other fellow and remove the rocks from the road before leaving a spot where it has been necessary to "block" the car.

LOCAL AUTOMOBILE MAN TAKES TRIP.

J. B. Fahy, manager of Fahy-Atterbury, Ford dealers, has just returned from the East, where he visited the different Ford plants and looked over the general war-time situation.

"Everything in the East is war," says Mr. Fahy. "Nothing else counts. The Ford plants look like a government workshop instead of an automobile factory. The factories in the East are preparing for a seven-year war, although most people expect it to be over in a year."



The latest type of "go-devil."

This wondrous craft, devised by P. B. Kennedy of Santa Monica, is capable of traveling at a good rate of speed on both land and sea. When in the water it is propelled by revolving pontoons. In a recent test in the Venice canal a 9-foot model of the creation made forty-five miles per hour.

TORRANCE-REDONDO ROAD NOW OPEN TO MACHINES.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDONDO BEACH, Aug. 9.—The Torrance-Redondo boulevard is completed and a first-class road for travel by automobiles is now open between these two cities. This not only makes a first-class boulevard between these cities, but shortens the distance by several miles. The distance is now slightly more than three miles and automobilists report making the distance in about twelve minutes. The road was completed as far as the city limits of Torrance about six months ago, but there was still a sandy stretch of ground for about three-quarters of a mile to the business section of Torrance. The matter was taken up with the County Supervisors and the county undertook to complete the road.

LOSS OF POWER AND ITS CAUSE.

In cases where there is a noticeable loss of power when the lights are turned on, it will usually be found that this condition is caused by corroded battery terminals or loose connections. The trouble may be cured by making sure that all terminals are tight and removing any corrosion with emery cloth and then applying a little hard grease to the parts.

RUST OFTEN FORMS ON STEERING OUTFIT.

In mechanisms which have the steering control levers running down through the center of the steering column, it frequently happens that rust forms and this makes difficult the operation of steering. The remedy is easily applied and consists in taking out the rod and its surrounding tube member, cleaning off the rust, oiling the parts thoroughly and assembling them.

CLEAN DIRT FROM FAN BELT PULLEYS.

In fan assemblies that have V-shaped pulleys for the belt, it is well to examine this location for accumulations of dirt, and any such deposits should be carefully cleaned out. Further, it is good practice to give the belt a brushing with a stiff brush and then wipe it off with a cloth dipped in neatsfoot oil.

The Reason Why Moreland Trucks Give Paramount Satisfaction

Every Part of the Moreland Truck is Thoroughly Inspected and Tested

The quality of material and workmanship of every part of the Moreland truck is given a thorough inspection at least six times.

Beginning with the raw materials, these are given the first inspection, then placed in stock.

Castings and gears are sent to the machine shop where they are inspected after each operation as to quality and workmanship before being deposited in the finished parts stock room.

As they are needed, these parts are removed to the Parts Assembly Department, where unit assemblies are made and each unit is inspected by the floor inspector.

In the Chassis Assembly Department, the units are placed in their respective chassis positions and there are again inspected.

Before the car is turned over to the test department, it is given a thorough floor inspection.

In the test department a checking card system is kept of all units and which includes every part of the car. Final Inspector gives each a road test before sending it to the paint department.

When released from the paint department, a final inspection is administered by the Chief Inspector as to paint and running order of the car.

Thus, it may be seen that the Moreland truck must be a perfected mechanism before it is released to an owner. Let us demonstrate this power truck to you now.

A truck was dispatched Sunday to take care of this as far as Needles. This crew proceed from Needles to Parker and Blythe, reconstructing the club's sign system on this cut-off, and then entering the Imperial Valley via the Palo Verde Valley to reset a number of posts that have settled in the silt of Imperial.

Another crew is occupied at present with the coast and inland routes to San Diego, on which roads a number of new signs will be erected and old ones replaced. Part of the work in the south will consist of a complete posting system for the Silver Terrace highway from San Diego to Camp Kearny. The return trip will be made over the inland course, one task on this leg of the journey being the rerouting of the inland highway through another portion of Escondido than that entered at present.

A REAL TASK.

Perhaps the most notable achievement of the Auto Club's sign-posting department is the mapping and signing of the Lincoln highway to Kansas City, "Dusty" Rhodes, head of the sign-posting department, being engaged in this work at present. Rhodes and his assistant, Ollie Lewis of the club's touring bureau, reached Omaha yesterday. After completing their work to Kansas City, they will drop southward to the National Old Trails via the King of Trails and complete the restoration work on the N.O.T. as far as Needles.

trial events, the officials claim clocked Ralph's Packard at of 120 miles per hour for a the Chicago track.

Palma does not rely on speed for his winnings, and as a rule up from the rear of the leaders and noses them out at the later part of the race. It is the consistency of his pace and the freedom of his Packard from tire trouble that places him so often in the winner's place. Excessive speed tells on tires first, as it is well known that no one has yet been able to build a tire that could stand up under the terrific speeds possible with present-day racing cars.

PERFECT RECORD.

So far the Packard twin has a perfect record as regards tires for this season, which is attributed in part to the balance of the twin-six chassis and to the smooth torque of the twelve cylinders of the airplane motor.

It has become a habit with De Palma to break a record or two every few weeks, and he kept true to form at the last meet at Chicago on July 28. The old mark of Resta's for the ten miles was lowered from 5:33.01 to 5:24 4-5, and the twenty-mile mark made previously by Ralph was changed from 10:53.8 to 10:50 2-5.

For the ten miles he set an average pace of 110.51 miles per hour. Considerable interest attaches to the Packard twin-six racing car, as it has one of the early twin-six airplane motors built by the Packard company, which was later developed into the present Liberty twin-six airplane motor. His motor has a piston displacement of 300 cubic inches, but the last experimental motor that Packard built before Chief Engineer Vincent redesigned it for the government has three times as much cubic displacement, and set new world's records at the Sheepshead Bay track for all distances from one-quarter of a mile up to ten.

LUBRICANTS KEEP CARS FROM THE SHOP.

One of the best rules for keeping a car out of the repair shop is the proper use of lubricants. The most sensitive parts of the car are the bearings, and unless they are given scrupulous care, they are the first to break down.

This bit of advice is given by a repair man who has seen hundreds of cars come and go at the repair shop: "Next to proper adjustment," he says, "a good lubricating system and the right kind of lubricating grease for each bearing are necessary to keep a car in good running order.

"A good grease, mixed in the right proportions with selected flake graphite, forms the best lubricant for bearings. The Joseph Dixon Company puts it up already mixed, a different grade for each purpose. A good car well taken care of can be kept from the repair shop for whole seasons at a time."

Furthermore the co-operation of these bodies has re- in the discovery of something absolutely new in the motor game—a band of motor-car thieves headed by a woman. The organizations concerned are the Automobile Club of Southern California, through Detective John Powell of the theft bureau, the Chicago Motor Club. Do you believe in signs?

Evidently the Automobile Club of Southern California does since it keeps a number of trucks and crews busy erecting them all the time. Above are a few of the types of safety and warning signs placed by the local organization and one of the club's special signposting trucks.

"Chevrolet Dick."

HOLLINGSWORTH SMITES GLOBE TO PHOENIX MARK.

TEARING twenty-three minutes off a record that had stood for years, "Chevrolet" Dick Hollingsworth made motoring history in Arizona the other day when he drove a stock "490" Chevrolet touring car from Globe to Phoenix in five hours and seven minutes. He was checked out at the start by the clerk and several guests in the Dominion Hotel, and at the finish Ray Williams at the Adams Hotel had the honor of putting the time stamp on his "way bill."

Hollingsworth left the Dominion Hotel in Globe at 4:40 in the morning, and at 5:50 he was swinging by the famed Roosevelt Dam. At 7 o'clock sharp he pulled up at Fish Creek, where breakfast was had, the proprietor of the place sending him on his way at the stroke of 8. Just two hours and forty-seven minutes later Dick walked into the Adams Hotel lobby in Phoenix with the record safely in his possession.

Art Blodgett acted as Hollingsworth's riding companion, and was ready to assert the road between Globe and Phoenix was something besides a Milky Way. The route is 127 miles long, over four mountain ranges, and is filled with sharp, dangerous turns and grades. But in spite of this the "490" Chevrolet went over nearly the entire run on high gear, as Hollingsworth's only shift was on the Fish Creek grade, where he went into second gear for a little ways.

The new Chevrolet Hollingsworth record is considered remarkable, in view of the road conditions existing and the fact that the "490" was a regular stock touring model, which was practically a new car and had not been "tuned up" in any particular. But in spite of the great run "Chevrolet Dick" is willing to bet he can make the round trip in an even eight hours, using any "490" stock Chevrolet in the State for the purpose.

To Help Win War.

DEALER TELLS SALESMEN TO FORESTALL HOARDING.

"A paradoxical difficulty I have encountered in selling the Roamer," remarks Mr. Wrigth of the Wright Motor Car Company, "is to satisfy the prospective purchasers that design is not expensive. We Americans have been content so long with conventional body lines that the motorist has come to believe that the inartistic appearance of an average automobile represents economy. Sometimes, for this reason, prospects, when they have seen the Roamer and been impressed with the beauty of its lines, are afraid they will be obliged to pay a premium for this same beauty. We are always quick to explain that design is simply a matter of headwork. This head work is evidenced in the creation of the original model and once created, it does not add a penny to the cost of the duplication.

"In other words, it is just as cheap to make something beautiful as it is something ugly; the only difference lies in the artistic sense of the original creator. For instance, the simple vase made by the Japanse potter, that you can pick up for a few pennies, will in most instances fill every requirement of line, contour and color the artist would demand, and this same principle is now being applied to the design of motor cars. A good design in motor acrs was bound to happen sooner or later."

TEST FLEETS DOING WONDERFUL WORK.

MOVE MACHINERY FROM ONE HUGE PLANT TO ANOTHER.

A rigorous test of the automobile truck for long hauls is being made by the United States Tire Company, which is using its test fleet for transporting from its Detroit factory to its Indianapolis plant large quantities of machinery, removal of which has been made necessary by factory economies, according to information that has been received at the company's local branch in this city.

The factories are 310 miles apart and the fleet of three trucks has already made several trips in each direction. All the trucks are equipped with large pneumatic tires and the records that have been kept demonstrate that the company's claims that pneumatic tires make greater speed possible while saving not less than 33 1-3 per cent. in gasoline, as compared with trucks equipped with solid tires, are not exaggerated.

On one of the recent trips from Detroit to Indianapolis the trucks covered the distance in seventeen and three-quarter hours actual running time, an average of eighteen to nineteen miles an hour and the return trip was made at the rate of seventeen miles an hour.

One of the trucks is a one and one-half-ton car, which has already covered 40,000 miles. The rear tires on this truck are 38x7 in size and before they gave the slightest indication of trouble had achieved a mileage of more than 9000 miles each. Each of these rear tires carries a weight of 3327 pounds when the truck is loaded. The others are a one-ton and three and one-half ton. Full loads are carried in both directions, machinery being carried on the trip south and inner tubes on the return. There is no delay at either point as the loads are planned in advance.

HAND WORK PROVES THE BEST IN END.

WHAT IS IN AN AUTO TIRE DOES NOT SHOW ON THE SURFACE.

What is really in an automobile tires does not show on the surface. A heavy, pliable tread does not necessarily indicate the tire has great wearing qualities. "It is what is under the tread that counts the most," says J. B. Wood, exclusive distributer for Century-Plainfield tires. "That is why the makers of Century-Plainfield tires insist upon having the work done by hand. They might install machinery that would imitate the work of skilled artizans, but the results would not be the same. Every smoker knows how much better a hand-made cigar is than one made by machinery and the same thing holds true of the motor tire.

"It is the carcass of the tire that stands for the most," says Mr. Wood. "If the carcass is well and properly made and only the finest sea island cotton used, then there is reason to believe that a good tire will be the result. Of course, the rubber compound has a lot to do with it, but not in the same proportion as the fabric. In the several thousand Century Plainfield tires we have put out in Los Angeles there has not been a return made on account of the fabric, which is a record any distributer could be proud of."

Barney Oldfield: I do not think I am getting proper speed in low gear out of my car. When I start I can only get about enough speed to keep the car in motion until changed into second gear, regardless of the amount of gas I feed her. Secondly, when running in high gear she does not respond as quickly as she should. It takes about eight seconds to pick up speed from twenty to 25 miles when I shoot her the gas.

J. M. N., Philadelphia.

If engine speed increase does not alter the car speed I would say the clutch is not holding as it should—that the clutch is slipping badly. I am almost sure from your second question that the clutch is at fault altogether.

CHANDLER SIX

Famous For Its Marvelous Motor

A Great Automobile At Moderate Cost

NEARLY fifty thousand Chandler owners know how powerful and responsive, how economical, how dependable and enduring the Chandler car is.

"Greatest of all light sixes" never more accurately described the Chandler than it does today. If you wished to search the whole market with minute comparisons and tests this would be your answer, too.

In the ownership of a Chandler Six you will possess a really great automobile—great from the standpoint of mechanical excellence and daily performance under all road conditions, great from the standpoint of economy in operation and maintenance. Thousands of Chandler owners tell of gasoline mileage of fifteen to seventeen miles per gallon. Seven thousand to nine thousand miles per set of tires is the usual Chandler report. Owners and dealers alike say the service upkeep of the Chandler car is much less than that of other good cars which they have owned or sold.

Beautifully designed and finished bodies are mounted on the famous Chandler chassis.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

please take our advice and place your order now.

If nothing else, it will probably save you the annoyance of waiting a long time for delivery when you are needing the use of your new automobile.

And it may make all the difference between having a Super-Six and not having one.

With your need for your automobile growing greater and your requirements more severe, you want a car that is going to see you through the entire war if need be.

Super-Six power and endurance make the Hudson that car.

The most grinding tests of cross-country roads, hill climbs and speedways prove it.

Better still, because of lessons learned in these tests Hudson engineers have made the Super-Six of today a finer car than ever.

In detail after detail, they have refined the Hudson to a degree that would have seemed impossible when the first Super-Six proved its quality.

The Hudson line of bodies is complete. There are ten different models from which you can choose the type of car you want—and get Super-Six dependability, but—

Prompt action is important.

WAR TEACHING OWNERS OF AUTOS TO BE HANDY MEN.

BY RALPH HAMLIN,

Distributor Franklin and Scripps-Booth Cars.

HOME garage repairs to motor cars are just as essential at this time to all owners as the war garden movement has been to food production. Romance is to be found in repairing one's own car. Romance always is pleasant and satisfying. Many persons find it working in their gardens. They assumed their duties as a patriotic obligation, but this was followed by pride in development—in watching things grow, their care and cultivation—and just as much true enjoyment can be had in learning the functions of a motor car's various parts and how to repair these parts when necessary.

War gardening has taught many citizens the joy of "getting back to the soil" and war necessity will teach automobile owners the delights of being a "handy man" about the car. Spading, hoeing and weeding no longer are terrors to thousands and oiling, greasing and "taking up" lose nuts ought shortly to be an unquestioned part of the car owner's spare hour work. For the business man, it is a splendid Saturday afternoon sport.

TO HIMSELF.

The car owner can shift at least a part of an ever-increasing burden from the harassed automobile repair man to himself. If the owner can bring himself to the realization of the needless waste of labor (under war conditions) on non-essential repairs, he will have cleared the floor of the service station for unavoidable jobs. These are the essential jobs and the repairman unquestionably owes his time to these first.

For the period of the war, at least, the day has passed when the owner can rightfully allow himself to use a mechanic from a half day to sixteen hours to satisfy a repair whim. A car on the road is doing work, but a car in the repair shop is throwing the transportation of from one to five persons on an overburdened transportation system. Unavoidable repairs can be hastened by the patriotic elimination of non-essential jobs.

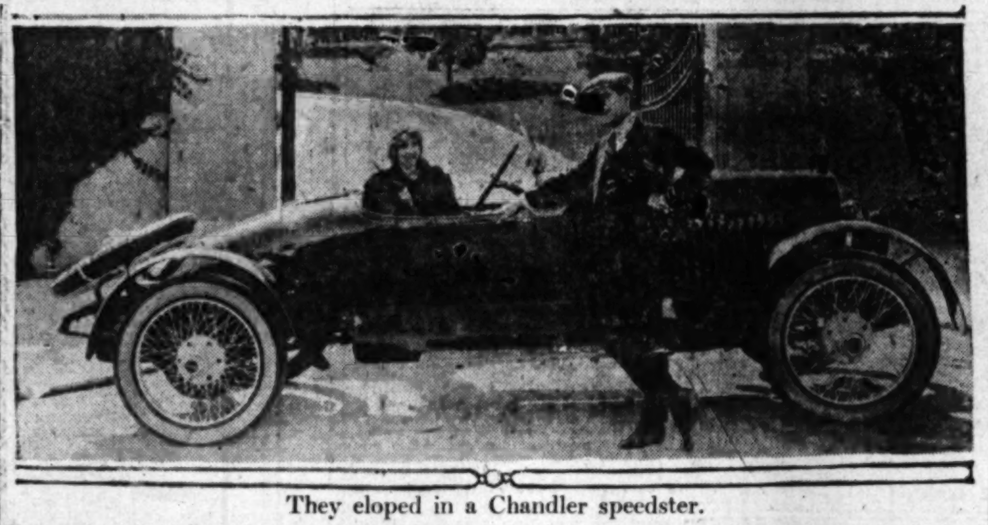
In reality, the modern car is usually simple from a maintenance point of view. If the owner will but read the instruction book which he received with the car, or can get from his dealer gratis, he can become thoroughly acquainted with his friend the motor.

The War Economies Board which is in a position to view the problem in a broad, national way, has made urgent request to reduce repair service wherever possible. This is reasonable because first-class mechanics have responded freely to the call of government needs in airplane and allied industries, where their services are of direct benefit to the country at war.

The owner has nothing to fear, because the home auto maintenance problem is characterized by simplicity. As the great fundamental in gardening is to keep the ground cultivated, so in motor maintenance the great essential is to keep the parts lubricated. Systematic attention to this will go a long way—more than a season or two, probably—toward avoiding petty and non-essential jobs. The tool kit will, upon closer inspection, reveal unexplored recesses. The purchase of additional simple and inexpensive equipment will fire the same enthusiasm experienced in getting garden tools.

WILL DEMONSTRATE NEW TYPE TRACTOR.

The initial demonstration of the Fordson tractor in Los Angeles will take place August 16 and 17 at the Teague ranch, adjoining Ascot Park. This event has been looked forward to with a great deal of interest by agricultural and automobile men and will undoubtedly be witnessed by a large audience. A number of branch agents are expected to be listed up at the demonstration.



They eloped in a Chandler speedster.

Here we have the polished hero and blushing heroine of a society drama that will be flickering across the local screen in the near future. Of course, papa was wrathful when he saw them chugging away in the shiny Chandler, but now all is well and they will live happily ever after.

What's That?

THIEVES WATCH AGENCIES TO STEAL NEW MACHINES.

THAT automobile thieves keep close watch on large agencies and follow the purchasers of new cars is the latest revelation made by Detective John Powell, head of the Theft Bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California and fearless enemy of the "Gas Raffles." Powell urges owners of new cars to make a complete list of all part and body numbers and other marks of identification before leaving the salesroom floor with their purchase.

In a recent case reported to the authorities a woman purchased a medium-priced car and drove from the agency to the office of an insurance company. Emerging in about five minutes with the insurance inspector to take the identification numbers necessary to filling out a policy, the luckless lady found that her car had disappeared. She knew nothing of it except the name of the make and the law can do but little for her.

The Automobile Club of Southern California has prepared a special identification record blank that will be furnished free to all motorists at club headquarters. In addition to the stock identification numbers owners of cars are urged to secure a set of number dies and stamp some distinctive pattern on several obscure spots of the chassis as an extra precaution.

Detective Powell of the Auto Club has suggested to the leading machine and part manufacturers that the practice of placing numbers on detachable metal plates be discontinued and that the markings be made in solid steel or iron with the use of dies. The modern auto thief has a complete supply of such number plates and can disguise a car in a very few minutes.

GOOD ROADS BOOSTERS GIVE VALUABLE TIPS.

Good roads enthusiasts in Southern Oregon have taken exception to the information sent out by the Chevrolet touring bureau regarding the route into Crater Lake.

This information, obtained from a motorist named Webber, who claimed he had made the trip from both directions, gave the route to the lake from Ager, Cal., the preference over that from Medford and Ashland. It was stated the grades on the latter were far more difficult than those encountered on the other.

According to latest information, the 'Topsy' grade on the Ager-Crater Lake road is far steeper than anything encountered on the Medford highway, and it is claimed the latter is in far better condition.

JUSTICE PLEASED WITH ATTITUDE.

A communication commending the fair and impartial attitude of the legal department of the Automobile Club of Southern California in pleading cases of speeding for members in court has been received by Attorney Faries of the Auto Club from Justice Harlan Palmer.

The letter, an excerpt from which follows, is especially interesting in view of the present revelations regarding the "fixing" of speed cases:

"While, as it has seemed to me, practically every individual capable of using pull has used it, the Auto Club, capable of exerting the greatest political influence, has always stood and always asked for only fairness, and as I have found it trying at times to withstand the political pressure brought from all sides on speed cases before me, the attitude of the Auto Club has been most strengthening and assuring."

COAST WHEN YOU CAN, GOOD ADVICE.

The proper method of taking steep down grades is to leave the clutch in and throw off the ignition. This keeps the engine cool, and the car brakes against the resistance of the mechanism. When the grade is unusually steep, it may be necessary to shift to second speed, or even to first. In either case this method of descending grades saves the brake lining and conserves fuel, and we must all be conservationists now.

FINDS CAR TO SUIT AT LAST.

Movie Director is Rewarded After Long Hunt.

Heroine Must Have Powerful Racing Automobile.

Agent Runs Across Proper Machine by Chance.

A local motion-picture company was engaged in the production of a society drama. The scenario called for the heroine using a fast, powerful, high-grade, racy-looking automobile in which to make her escape from a gang of holdups. The director inspected all the company's stock of motor cars and others on the lot, but could find nothing that suited him exactly for the purpose in mind. Upon failing in his quest, he notified his assistant that such a car must be procured and told him to go out and get one some way.

The assistant stationed himself on Broadway one afternoon, but no car passed that was exactly suited for the intended use. Later, he took up his watch on Sunset boulevard. Wilshire and Washington boulevards but was not rewarded. When returning from one of his vigils with a friend, he chanced to drive past the establishment of Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., and through the window he saw on the sales floor a specially built Chandler speedster.

"There it is," he shouted, and pointed to the Chandler. "If we can get them to let us use that car the boss can't help but be pleased." The subject was taken up with a representative of the firm and the loan of the car for use before the camera was negotiated. The director was pleased and told his assistant that if he had not procured the Chandler and he himself ever happened to see the car on the street, he would know that the assistant had failed in the assignment.

W. A. Gaw of the Morrison Hotel was passing the Chandler store a few days ago, after the car had been replaced on the display floor, and he saw it there. He did not care to use it in a picture, but became so impressed with it that he determined it should belong to him. He now drives it, having arranged for its purchase through Frank Splane of the Armstrong sales department. The car is equipped with a Walton racing body and is one of the very niftiest motor creations to be seen in the city.

FORMER TIRE CLERK BECOMES WAR HERO.

Another instance of the bravery of our United States marines—recognized everywhere as the equal of the finest troops on either side in the titanic world struggle—is found in the daring performance of Morgan Lasher, formerly a clerk for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, O. Lasher won distinction and was cited in the official dispatches for conspicuous bravery in the fighting around Belleau Wood, when he recovered a supply of rockets that had fallen into the hands of the enemy. He volunteered to penetrate to the point where the rockets lay, and under intense enemy fire succeeded in creeping back to the American lines with the rockets in his possession.

Lasher's intrepid act is but another evidence of the wonderful transformation that military training has effected in our American young men. From the humblest of walks in civil life our military heroes are springing.

TRACTOR LOCOMOTIVE IS THE LATEST FROM FORD.

HENRY FORD has a new invention—a tractor locomotive. This latest invention is being experimented with at the tractor plant in Dearborn. It is a regular tractor, fitted with block wheels which are connected with a driving rod. This little locomotive develops power enough to draw eleven loaded trucks. "It is simply one of Mr. Ford's experimental inventions, at present," said Ernest Kanzler, production manager at the tractor plant. "However, it is more than likely that production on a large scale will be figured out eventually. It looks to us like a winner."

The locomotive tractor could be used at a great saving in the large manufacturing plants, rice fields and copper and coal mines, it was said. It will do the work of scores of horses and mules. In tropical countries it is believed the locomotive could be used to draw passenger trains. At Dearborn it is being used to draw tons of mud to fill in a small lake which borders on the traction property.

Figures.

AUTOMOBILE STATISTICS AMAZING IN IMMENSITY

IT HAS been estimated that the transportation value of the automobile is $900,000,000 annually. The passenger service rendered by motor cars is in excess of 45,000,000,000 miles each year. Although that figure is big enough to startle the imagination, it is based on the fact there are 5,000,000 motor cars in use in the United States today, and each one travels at least 3000 miles per year. That gives 15,000,000,000, but when this figure is multiplied by three, the average number of passengers transported this distance, the 45,000,000,000 result is obtained. At the rate of 3 cents per mile, this represents a transportation value of $1,350,000,000.

"Figures representing the growth and development of the automobile industry are startling," stated James L. Irving, of the Irving [illegible] tor Car Company, the Cole and [illegible] gin distributors. "A recent com[illegible] pilation of statistics shows there [illegible] almost 1,000,000 workers con[illegible] with the business and these [illegible] with their dependents would p[illegible] late a city of the size of Chicago [illegible] a time and labor saving propo[illegible] American automobiles alone co[illegible] transport all the men in the [illegible] tending armies from Paris to Be[illegible] More than 2,000,000 automobiles [illegible] owned by farmers, and if each [illegible] carried but one passenger [illegible] each day, the yearly gain in p[illegible] duction amounts to $[illegible] There are 25,000,000 horses in [illegible] country. Value of Words.

PHRASE "PLEASURE CAR" MISLEADING AND UNJUS

IF YOU are in the bad—immeasurably bad habit of saying "pleasure car" when of course you mean "passenger car"—just correct it before you come within the immediate vicinity of B. G. Koether, manager of the Hyatt Roller Bearing Company, Detroit. That one phrase "pleasure car" has done more to influence the uninformed against the motor car industry at this critical time in its history, than any other one phrase has done in the case of any other product, Mr. Koether says. He says that the power of the Anglo-Saxon catch phrase for good or for evil, is nowhere so strikingly illustrated as in this case—with the unfortunate fact, however, that the effect of these two words, "pleasure car" has been only and incalculably evil.

"I was sitting at my window the other day looking out on the stream of cars that pass on the boulevard," said Mr. Koether. "There were roadsters and touring cars, sedans and limousines, town cars and electrics. And of all these, how many do you suppose are used for pleasure? How many of these do you suppose are really pleasure cars? The little mud-stained, much-traveled roadster, that big six cylinder touring car right behind it, the one with the curtains flapping and the paint cracked and off in many places.

TOP SPEED IS SLOGAN IN AUTOMOBILE PLANTS.

"THOSE concerns which manufacture automobiles will continue to turn them out under war conditions, but it looks as though those which assemble cars will be forced to go out of business, as it is now getting almost impossible for them to secure parts. It is the lack of finished parts that seriously hinders the automobile assembler," stated Stanley W. Smith of Smith Bros., distributors of the Peerless, who has just returned from an eastern business trip.

"Everything is going at top speed at the Peerless factory and a large share of the trucks and the cars are going to the government and the Allies. To meet war conditions, the Peerless factory has reduced its number of distributors in this country to eleven and of this number two are located on the Pacific Coast. One in San Francisco and the other here. It was very evident to me when at the factory that it was well supplied with material.

"Manufacturers expect to see the steel situation in much better shape by fall. Although there is a great demand for it by the government, production is being increased by leaps and bounds. In the matter of cars we are much better off here than dealers are in the Middle West where the freight car shortage makes it difficult for them to secure anywhere near enough for their customers."

Smith stated that while traveling he passed many troop trains. "In spite of all this unusual movement the railroads were evidently handling the traffic without the least hitch," he said.

Practical Utility.

AUTOMOTIVE EXPOSITIONS TO SUCCEED AUTO SHOWS.

THE practical utility of motor vehicles now is being advanced as never was known before and a national movement has been started to refrain from speaking of motor car exhibitions as "shows." Instead of using that term, the proposal is that they be referred to as automotive expositions, according to H. C. McVey, the local dealer in Oakland cars.

"Every step taken toward divorcing the motor car from the public mind as a pleasure vehicle is a step in the right direction," says Mr. McVey. "The term 'pleasure car' is seldom used now—never by anyone who is in touch with developments—so that the suggestion that the 'automobile show' become a thing of the past and in its stead we have the automotive exposition will undoubtedly find popular favor here.

"A show is commonly regarded as something to which the public goes for the purpose of entertainment. The motor car is not to be considered as entertaining. We might as well get right down to facts and if a united display of cars is held in Los Angeles this fall, it would be a good thing to speak of it as an 'automotive exposition' and not as an automobile show."

Change.

TIRES TO BE HANDLED UNDER DIFFERENT NAME.

REALIZING that their name, so well known in their particular line of business, often conveyed a wrong meaning in their advertising, the Pacific Pipe and Supply Company, California, Arizona and Nevada distributors for Delion tires and Palmer cord tubes, have decided to name this department the Haldeman Tire Company, Harry M. Haldeman being president and general manager of the Pacific Pipe and Supply Company.

"This department," says George Brookwell, "has been so successful that it has exceeded our fondest expectations, and, with the volume of business we are now doing and the confusion sometimes found in the firm name, it was decided that Mr. Haldeman's name should be used to cover the tire department.

"Coming into a field already crowded with many excellent makes of tires, we were a little dubious as to the results. But with Mr. Haldeman's enthusiasm, coupled with the real merit offered with the tires, we have earned for ourselves an enviable position among tire distributors.

"The lines we carry are represented throughout California and Arizona, and particularly in the latter State, we have received many flattering letters about Delion tires. Next to newspaper advertising there is no one thing that so helps to sell tires as this kind of recommendation."

Wrong Impression.

NATTY BODY LINES ARE THOUGHT TO BE COSTLY.

HOARDING of foodstuffs or equipment by dealers is considered just as unpatriotic as it is for an individual to hoard a surplus of supplies.

"We advise our salesmen," says Mr. F. H. Osler of the Osler Racine Rubber Company, "to keep from taking orders from our dealers for larger amounts of goods than it will be necessary for them to use in supplying their immediate needs.

"Dealers should co-operate with their distributors in every way by ordering just the amount of goods they can use, because it is quite a task for a distributor to keep up with the demand even at the present time, although I don't think that there will be a very great shortage of tires if the dealers and public do not get excited and try to store more than is necessary for use. Of course, we would like to have our salesmen take large orders, but we know that in allowing them to do so some of our dealers would eventually suffer."

You have read of course, that the "life" of the best aviation motor is 150 flying hours.

And you must know that an aviation motor represents the highest development of gasoline engine building.

Must be—to withstand such strains for so long—for when you consider all the conditions, that 150 flying hours constitutes a terrific test of endurance.

Figured in miles at the rate of speed our own Liberty motor has shown—144 miles per hour—it is 21,600 miles.

And in order to sustain its load in the air that motor is working to capacity all the time.

Now consider the performance of that Maxwell motor which, in 44 consecutive days and nights running never stopped, and covered, with its passengers, 22,022 miles!

It is a strange fact but true—as any metallurgist will demonstrate for you—that a motor, like a man or an horse, will do better with a rest from time to time.

For motors and the metals of which they are made, are also subject to "fatigue."

So the crucial part of that test was in its constant running—not a moment's relief allowed from the heat to cylinders or the motion of reciprocating parts.

Our records show many cases where, according to owners' statements, motor cars have gone 100,000 miles—150,000 and even 200,000 miles.

But we don't consider those cases exceptional.

Any Maxwell motor car will live to do that if kept oiled and given reasonable care.

And we are frank to concede that some other makes of cars can show similar mileages—for, as indicated above, intermittent service with rests between, is what the car is intended to do.

That is normal service.

But to withstand the terrific fatigue involved in that 44 consecutive days and nights "non-stop" test and to cover, with four passengers, 22,022 miles and doing that, to average 25 miles per gallon of gasoline too—that car must be a Maxwell.

FORD TRUCK REAL WARTIME PRODUCT.

The factory-built Ford one-ton truck is now being appreciated by the business man as much as he now realizes the efficiency of the other Ford cars.

This Ford one-truck is really a war-time product, and this is shown in the large percentage of trucks that are being turned out. The factory is now turning out 750 cars a day, and 400 of these are trucks—so that it can readily be seen that Henry Ford regards his truck as a necessity in these war times, as well as during peace.

His truck is built much stronger in every way than his passenger car, and it is a complete Ford truck, not an attachment.

BAY CITY-PORTLAND TRIP IS BOUND TO BE POPULAR.

SOME day the tour from San Francisco to Portland will be one of the most beautiful and most enjoyable in the State, is the opinion of Don Lee, who drove a Cadillac eight from Portland south last week. Lee does not recommend this trip for general touring on account of the present condition of the roads, but he can see wonderful possibilities, and hopes to see highway work start in the extreme northern end of California as soon as possible after the finish of the war. There is fair highway between San Francisco and Redding, but from there north there are many very bad detours and much disagreeable traveling.

"Some of the most beautiful country in the West is to be found in the northern part of California, over either the coast road to Eureka or the inland road to Mt. Shasta," says Lee. "There is a great deal of undeveloped country and this will naturally mean that road development will be slow, but with the completion of the two main highways, side trips that could not be equaled any place in the world will await the motorists. Tourists who are not frightened away by rough roads and discomforts will find great pleasure touring through the mountains toward the Oregon border, but as a pleasure tour I would not recommend the trip to Portland. One thing that surprised me was the poor condition of the roads in Oregon, the closer to Portland the worse the roads. Some road work is being done in this section of California, but there will be no great progress until after the war."

CAR PERFORMS LIKE CLOCK WORK ON NORTHWEST TRIP.

A. L. OLSEN of the Security Trust and Savings Bank returned this week from an extended tour of the Northwest in his Velie, and brings back an interesting account of his long drive, according to the Lord Motor Car Company.

Mr. Olsen and a party of five, with full camping equipment, left Los Angeles on July 2 with Frisco as the first objective of a mighty auto hike. From the Bay City they went to Lake Tahoe. Olsen states that he negotiated all the steep grades in this region without going lower than the intermediate, and it was therefore with renewed confidence in his Velie that he undertook the second lap of the journey. Driving over perfect roads to Susanville, more wonderful scenery was found along the Truckee River, from which point the party struck out across the desert—a stretch of some 500 miles—towards Burns, Or. Roads soon became mere trails through the sandy wastes and the heat grew intense. More than 100 miles were ground out with never a living thing in sight.

Spurred on by the Velie's performance on the Tahoe grades, Olsen undertook the Iron Mountain climb, which has been the Waterloo of many a motor car whose driver had more courage than his car had power. The feat, however, was easily accomplished by the Velie, and Olsen's confidence in his car went up another notch. Considerable excitement was enthused into the monotony of the desert drive when it was found that the gasoline tank was nearly dry toward the end of their run for civilization, and the party pulled into Burns with a scant half-gallon between them and the pleasure of being stalled in the desert.

The next passing was Ontario, Or., where some splendid farming country was seen, as it is at this point that the irrigation cultivation commences. Journeying farther, the party passed through Boise, Idaho; Mt. Home, Twin Falls, American Falls and Idaho Falls.

In the Yellowstone Park a drive of 178 miles was made over first-class road conditions and the fishing was excellent. In Madison River, the Eutopia of fishermen is to be found, according to Olsen. He says the water is so clear and the fish so numerous that a man can let his line down to the fish he wants. At Yellowstone city proper it seems that all the big hotels are closed and the new "Yellowstone Camping Company" is taking care of tourists in a very gratifying manner. One of the prominent features of the Velie's performance on this trip, states Mr. Olsen, was the satisfactory operation of the cooling system. In the 178-mile drive through the park not a drop of additional water was put into the radiator, while in front of them a party stopped at every stream to put cold water in the radiator, which was smoking like a steam engine.

The best return from the park to Idaho Falls was found by the new road through Ashton, and another valuable bit of information obtained was the scarcity of supply stations returning from Salt Lake City and Eley, Nev., sometimes 150 miles passing without a source of gasoline supply, making it judicious to load up with a limit supply before leaving these points. On the way to Goldfield several showers were encountered, much to the surprise of all concerned. Olsen also brings back word that the copper smelters up the coast are working night and day on government orders, and the glow of the molten metal after dark is a wonderful sight. The last lap of the trip was made via Big Pine, following the aqueduct, and by way of the Mojave desert.

Mr. Olsen's records for the tour show 3655 miles of travel, with an average of approximately sixteen miles to the gallon of gasoline and about 150 miles to the quart of oil. Considering the road work done by the car on this trip, this is received by the Lord Motor Car Company as another credit to Velie performance.

TIRE MAN AND HIS BRIDE VISIT HERE.

Honeymooning on the Pacific Coast, J. M. Kerny and his bride of Norwalk, Ct., are spending two weeks in Los Angeles as guests of the Lichtenbergers of Lichtenberger-Ferguson Company and E. D. Mr. Kerny is one of the best-known tire adjusters in the country, having been associated with the rubber industry for fifteen years.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerny intend to remain on the Coast for two months, and before returning to their home at Norwalk will visit each of the factory distributors for the Norwalk product in various localities throughout the country.

EVEN HELPS OUT THE DEAR OLD ICEMAN.

"Undoubtedly there is no other business that tests the dependability as well as the rapidity of the motor truck as the ice industry in the good old hot "summer time," says H. W. Nerney of the KisselKar.

"Ice manufacturers and dealers have been realizing more fully each day that due to the nature of their product, they must have quick delivery to minimize the loss through melting while in transit."

"With the motor truck it is possible to make not only double the number of deliveries in shorter time, but it makes just as speedy deliveries late in the day as early in the morning, and is able to make double trips to the plant for additional loads."

TACKLE OVERAULING IN NICK OF TIME.

EARLY REPAIRS REDUCE THE EXPENSES OF WISE AUTO OWNER.

Don't think it is economy to operate the motor car until it is ready to drop to pieces before taking it to the overhauling establishment. The wise owner reduces the repair bills by early attention to the car's needs and meantime reduces the cost of operation, asserts George R. Bentel of the Bentel shops on Grand avenue.

"There never has been such a demand in our shops for overhauling work," he said. "The cars range from the discarded 'wreck' to the family car which is in good condition for many more miles of service after mechanical attention.

"The old question of where do all the old cars go might be partly answered by going through our shops. We are overhauling cars of 1911 model and putting new bodies on them. They have been picked up for a song, and after being reconstructed mechanically will be good for much more service.

"We find there is a growing demand for "stripped-down" bodies on the old chassis. These old gears are bought up cheaply, and when fitted with sporty bodies make a very serviceable car, cheap to operate.

"The inability to get prompt deliveries in certain models has caused many of the owners to turn to the overhauling shop. The car goes in showing its wear. It comes out as bright as a new dollar, and just as sound. There are no striking changes to be made in cars during the war. Therefore, the bodies of today will be correct for some time. All they need is some paint, with a re-covering of the top.

"Repainting is not a matter solely of vanity. Paint is a great preserver.

NEW TERRITORY IN NORTH TAKEN OVER.

TIRE DISTRIBUTOR ADDS TO BUSINESS NOW IN SOUTHLAND.

Last week the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, distributors for Mason line of tires, took over some new territory in the north which takes in Monterey, San Benito, Fresno, King and Tulare counties. This addition to the territory they now handle makes quite a district to cover. Before taking over these new counties they were covering Arizona and Southern California.

According to Mr. Thompson they have been perfecting their organization and sales force for some time so that when they were given this new territory they were prepared to handle it in an efficient manner.

It is taking time to convince the factories in the East, says Mr. Thompson, that the southern part of California is as good, if not a better distributing point, and as time goes on we will see other factories changing their distributing point.

DESCRIBES TYPE OF CARS FOR WAR.

The report sent out by a Detroit newspaper man that the Cadillac eights and Dodge cars adopted by the United States government for service abroad were not the regular models delivered to the general public by the Cadillac and Dodge factories, is understood to mean that the only difference between the stock models and those furnished to the government are of an extremely minor character, such as paint and interior finish, and possibly heavier springs. This view is borne out by statements given out by the Cadillac and Dodge factories.

MOTOR PATRIOTS THE THING NOW.

NEVER LET YOUR AUTO RUN IDLE — DEMOCRACY NEEDS LIFT.

"If we were able to figure out in dollars and cents the aid cars are giving the government during the prosecution of the war, the total would be almost unbelievable," said Frank B. Ansted, president of the Lexington Motor Company.

"This support has been evidenced in no uncertain way by countless thousands of patriotic Americans in using their cars to help with Red Cross campaigns, to boost the sale of Liberty Bonds and War Stamps, and hundreds of other ways.

"The Lexington Motor Company is urging the use of every motor car to the fullest possible extent. There are many very definite ways in which this may be done.

"Every motorist can help relieve the railroads by making business trips by motor wherever possible. In addition, merchants may be aided by the bundles carried in automobiles. The total tonnage of relief by the five millions of registered cars in this way every day would be amazing.

"This means that motor cars are put to greater work use. They should never run idle. Every American motorist should pick up anyone going in the same general direction. We are all fighting for democracy, and this is motor car democracy in its fullest sense. Carry a full passenger load on every trip.

"Every motor car should be registered for volunteer war service on certain days in the week. On these days it should be used for Red Cross or other patriotic campaign work."

CURRENT IS WASTED BY MANY DRIVERS.

It should be made a practice not to throw on the ignition switch until the car is actually to be started. If the switch is turned on for some time before the car starts, an appreciable amount of current is wasted and the storage battery is correspondingly drained. Moreover the ignition coil becomes more or less heated and might be damaged.

Coast as Much as You Can; Save that Wasted Gas for Uncle Sam.

Looking Ahead.

TO CONSIDER CONSERVATION.

Fuel Administration Takes up Gasoline Question.

Everybody Now Urged to Practice Economy.

Situation in Good Shape; no Need to Worry.

Both motor truck and passenger car drivers should practice utmost economy in gasoline use. If the government should be compelled through the shortage of gasoline to restrict the use of gasoline, the passenger car would be the first affected, while it is doubtful if the motor truck would be restricted at all, according to M. L. Hughson, president of the William L. Hughson Company.

"The recently increased output of high-grade oil fields and development of the cracking process has helped the gasoline situation, and it will be further alleviated in the near future through the restrictions, either direct or indirect, on motor car manufacture," says Mr. Hughson.

"It should be fully understood by motor car and motor boat owners that governmental restrictions are not expected, and in any case, are very remote. In respect to this, the government has just issued a bulletin, which says:

"'Up to the present time there has been sufficient supply of gasoline to meet all requirements, but in order to be prepared for any shortage, should it arise, plans are being considered by the oil division of the Fuel Administration in co-operation with the automobile industry and the National Petroleum War Service Committee, for determining the most satisfactory method of gasoline conservation.

"'It is not expected, in any event, that it will be necessary to restrict normal consumption for freight vehicles, and provided there is a reasonable conservation by all concerned, it may not be necessary to seriously interfere with passenger cars and motor boats.

"'It must be borne in mind, however, that the paramount use for gasoline is for war purposes, all of which requirements will be supplied. The volume of this will largely govern the situation.

"'It seems possible that rational conservation by the public will render government action unnecessary.'

"The production of gasoline in 1917 was 65,000,000 barrels, forty-two gallons each, or 2,730,000,000 gallons. The first quarter of 1918 production was 17,384,000 barrels, as against 13,700,000 barrels of the same period of 1917. On April 1st there were 525,000,000 gallons of gasoline in storage.

"You will see by these figures for which the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is the authority, that the many vague rumors now circulating regarding the probable governmental action in regard to the operation of passenger cars are guesses only. Help to stop these rumors. Quote the above official bulletin, but in addition to that cut down the waste of gasoline all you can. Every gallon of gasoline that you can save means that another ton of materials or foodstuffs can be moved forward five to ten miles toward our armies," says Mr. Hughson.

OFFICER MAKES HIGH MILEAGE.

EMPLOYEE OF OAKLAND CONCERN LOSES BET ON HIS OWN MACHINE.

It cost one of the salesmen at the Chevrolet branch in Oakland an even $20 the other day to dispute the word of a Chevrolet owner regarding the gasoline mileage he was getting from a Chevrolet 490 touring car.

F. S. Noble, an Oakland policeman, recently made a trip from his home to Stockton, a distance of something like eighty miles, on two gallons of gasoline. When he told Brooker, one of the Chevrolet attaches, about it the latter seemed to think there was some joker attached to the record. A $20 bet was soon posted, and Noble went out and did the trick all over again. Now Brooker is looking for some victim to get even on.

LEARN TO DRIVE AUTO BY SLOW AND CAREFUL PROCESS, WOMAN'S ADVICE.

BY LOLITA LANE.

MARIE R. drives an electric and is beginning to yearn for a gasoline-propelled car. But she is a little dubious regarding her ability to manage one, and asks a direct question: "How long did it take you to learn to drive?"

The answer to Marie R.'s question would not be exactly to the point. It would not fit the general case. For two reasons I took some time in learning to drive. In the first place, family objections were raised immediately when I announced that I was intending to purchase a car and learn to drive it. In the second place, native inertia was more slowly overcome because of the fact that for the first few months that I owned the car it was driven by others. I wished very much to learn to drive, but from the first I feared my own machine and those on every side of me so much that I undertook the learning process through a series of very short lessons that covered much more time than most women generally think necessary. In other words, I favored my "nerves."

A salesman who once undertook to sell me a car told me that they took their purchasers out once on South Figueroa street and once on Broadway, and then turned them loose. I am inclined to think this was either pure braggadocio or else a weak method of trying to convince me that the operation of a machine is a very simple thing, but if there is any truth in it, I wonder that the accidents are as few as they are. The speed demon is to blame for disasters enough, but the inexperienced driver, I am inclined to think, causes fully as many.

No driver is safe with a machine until the various movements made use of in driving become practically reflex. I took my first lessons on a wide, almost deserted, but well-paved road. I leaned over and grasped the steering wheel, but left the operation of the clutch and brake and the control of the throttle entirely to my teacher for some time. When an occasional automobile approached I relinquished the wheel, also. After some time I took the driver's seat for short runs on unusually safe country roads, and little by little gained knowledge and confidence. I know of no better method of beginning today. And I would also place much emphasis on the value of an experienced driver in the adjoining seat long after the rudiments of driving seem to have been mastered. In times of sudden danger, husband, father or brother may be able to avert serious trouble by a quick word of command and an equally quick application of the hand brake.

Mrs. L. F. W. desires to know whether or not an automobile imposes onerous duties on the woman who drives.

Before I became an owner of an automobile one of my friends told me very glibly that cars are so finely constructed nowadays that they needed practically no care, running, as another of my friends puts it, "entirely on their reputation." My informant assured me that all I would need to know was the manner of putting on a tire occasionally—for which nothing would be needed but an apron and a pair of old gloves and the handy tools provided by the manufacturer—and the roads to the filling station. Disillusionment came very early when I rolled the car out of the garage one morning, and the new gardener, looking up from the petunia bed, remarked quietly, "You have a flat tire." I surely had, and when I started to change the rim I was much surprised to find that I could not lift the mounted tire, to say nothing of jacking up the machine and putting the closely-fitting rim into place. I sent for help from the nearest garage, and I have never since attempted to do a man's work on the machine. Some women who own light cars tell me that they can change tires with ease, but I have not yet seen one handling a 37x5.

The ownership of a car is bound to entail some labor and expense. A good machinist will keep the car well oiled and greased for a small charge, and experience in driving teaches any intelligent person how to detect trouble. Strange, unaccustomed sounds convey their message, but the "feel" of the car under the driver's hand often tells much more. Dragging brakes, magneto and carburetor trouble are thus very quickly sensed. The watchful owner will look over her tires frequently for tacks and bits of glass, as well as indications of improper alignment, pick up the handy oil can occasionally when the hood is open, keep the engine free from heavy deposits of oil and grease, fill the radiator when it requires it, have the battery filled and tested regularly, keep the tires well inflated and trust to the service station for the rest.

THE FUNNY WHEEL OF THE AUTOMOBILE
TICKLE! TICKLE!

BY EUGENE BROWN.

IN CONSIDERING a company of virgins the Good Book says: "Five of them were wise and five were foolish." So it seems that the virgin business plays about fifty-fifty in the matter of sense. The foolish ones are those you will find trying to drive their cream-colored buzzwagon through the Broadway traffic at the rate of 1,000,000 parasangs a fortnight.

Some time ago a thoughtless and adventuresome person put in writing some expressions to the general effect that women should not be permitted to tour through the business district with anything more hazardous than a baby buggy. That was not exactly what he said, but it was plainly what he meant.

At that he poked up a whole menagerie.

Women of all ages and conditions neglected the steering wheel for the fountain pen and they ripped this hapless wight to ribbons. They scourged him with adjectives and they beat him up with common, proper and improper nouns. I am told that this unfortunate guy had to move away to strive and forget it. That man who strokes a skirt—save in the way of kindness, will presently eat dirt, as the heathen in his blindness.

There is no reason in the world why women should not tackle and master every known method of transportation. I realized that many years ago when I first saw an old maid straddling a bicycle. At the same time I am bound to confess that whenever I see a dame driving a steam roller something impels me to dive for a bomb-proof dugout. Most women take kindly to machinery and I would entrust them with any wheelbarrow I have on my place, but I must admit a slight nervous feeling when I see one of our flossy film favorites trying to do up her back hair while piloting an eight-lunged geewhizzer through a circus parade in Spring street.

A daughter of Eve will wear a corset that nicks her to the bone yet she will not willingly be fettered by regulation or convention. It is all right to have rules and by-laws, but they are not for skirts. Women have taken the vote and man's job away from him and yet man always hesitates when it comes to putting the pinchers on a female for busting the law. It is mighty rare that a jury of men will convict a woman whether the offense be manslaughter or shoplifting.

The traffic cops will tell you that women are perfectly lovely, but—

That's the trouble. The other day there was the usual press of 5 o'clock travel in Spring street. In the pressure was a swell queen at the wheel of a massive juggernaut that was the color of a sunburst. As the procession was halted for a moment to permit crosstown traffic her buzzwagon rolled into position behind one of the safety zone markers. There was a car parked at the curbing and her machine was at an angle that made it fill up all the space. Just as she stopped she espied a lovely male friend on the walk and she chirped forth a hearty greeting. The man promptly invaded the street and she leaned out and grasped his hand. They had not seen each other for hours and had so much to say!

The traffic ahead responded to the officer's signal, but the young woman continued her conversation in calm oblivion of aught else. No one could get by and the procession of travel was halted and piled up. The autoists opened up with their horns until it sounded like the battle of Verdun, but still the woman held her ground like Horatius at the bridge. One hasty but impolite citizen yelped at her to move on, but she turned on him a cold and haughty stare that would have driven him to drink were any to be had. Finally the corner officer left his station and came down to see what was the matter. He found a ripe soubrette engaged in careless converse with a young man arrayed as one of the lilies of the field. "Excuse me!" exclaimed the cop, with sarcasm, "but can't you take your visiting out on the links where the grasshoppers can get by?"

And at that the young woman got angry at the officer for addressing her. She took his number and said she was going to have him fired.

After a while traffic was resumed but one could have heard the honking for miles. Had it been a mere man in that barricade, that traffic cop would have climbed over the windshield and beaten him to shreds, but as it happened to be a movie actress she had him buffaloed—the same as the rest of us.

Over in Broadway another sweet young thing got tangled up in the parade. She was trying to drive a baby blue gadabout while changing her veil and incidentally had her mouth full of hairpins. The traffic officer signaled for her to speed up, but she thought he was trying to flirt with her and so she waved in return. She dropped both steering wheel and veil and when the cop motioned for her to go ahead some more she tried to say "Hello!" with the hairpins still in her mouth. Meanwhile her whizzer was going around in a circle at the intersection and every now and then it would butt into a street car, or an ice wagon. It seemed as if the girl thought she was driving a merry-go-round and it was several minutes before the corner got back to neutral.

Had the disturber been a man he would have been beaten up into a mess of goulash, but as it was a movie maid they sent her away with a smile.

The other day a witching young widow whom I have held in close acquaintance for some time dissipated to the extent of sopping up a couple of creme de menthe high balls. They gave her a genial sense of exhileration which could only be satisfied by her hitching up her little red roadster and speeding down Broadway. Every time a traffic officer showed an arm she tried to bowl him over and she didn't seem to care whether she wrecked a brewery wagon or merely a home. They rounded her up with a flock of motorcycles and almost reprimanded her for being careless and inconsiderate.

Had it been a man he would have been lynched.

GROOM CAR FOR TOURING.

Good Advice for Newcomer in Motoring Circles.

Look Over Brakes, Steering System and Ignition.

Block, Tackle and Tow Rope Should be Carried.

At this season of the year when every car owner's thoughts turn inevitably to matters pertaining to tours long or short, a few words in regard to the sort of preparation for such a trip that spells the difference between pleasure and annoyance will hardly be amiss. It may be that with the strain of war upon all of us, we shall not have as much long distance touring this summer as in the past few years, but appearances are against any such assumption. At the present time it looks as if the psychological factor of desire for relaxation from long continued strain was going to send American motorists on the road this season even more than in the past.

Any veteran motorists who has made a tour in a car that was not properly groomed and prepared for the ordeal of long continued driving over all sorts of road surfaces, will need no hint to give his vehicle all needed attentions before he starts out on the road. The new-comer in motoring circles, however, may not have realized the need for this previous care and to him especially we address our remarks, although we may be able to suggest something even to the veteran.

The preparation for the tour, as far as the car is concerned, should consist of a careful and detailed inspection of the mechanism and the packing of all spare parts that may in ordinary circumstances be needed, supplemented by filling out the tool kit with potentially useful "weapons."

The first two units which ought to have attention are the brakes and the steering system. These come first because under very imaginable circumstances the lives of those in the car may depend on the proper functioning of these two systems. If there is excessive play in the steering system, it should be taken up and parts demanding lubrication should have it. The brakes should be tested to see if they are functioning properly. If the linings have been in service for a long time, they should be renewed; better a little trouble beforehand than an accident or a delay on the road to reline brakes. Be sure that the bands are exerting an even pressure and if lack of holding ability has developed in one side, adjust so they are equal in holding power again.

The lubrication system ought to be completely gone over, grease and oil cups should be refilled. It is an admirable idea to drain out the crankcase and rear axle housing and after flushing them out with kerosene, to install fresh oil.

Next the ignition system should have a careful going over. If there has been any sign of trouble in this unit, run it down before starting on the trip. There is nothing more annoying than to have ignition trouble on the road and have to hunt for the cause and cure, perhaps under a broiling sun on a dusty road. It is a wise precaution to cover all such units as the ignition, starting motor and lighting generator with some protection that will exclude moisture and dust, as these are parts subject to much derangement from water.

It is important that the cooling system of the engine shall be in good shape for an extended tour under hot weather conditions. Presumably the radiator has been cleaned early in the spring, but it will be a wise precaution to drain the system and refill it before starting on the tour. Incidentally, one of the devices that tell what the temperature of the water is, will prove a wise investment, especially if the tour is to include a mountain section.

CONCRETE ROAD IS COMPLETED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FILLMORE, Aug. 1.—Concrete pouring has been completed on the road between this city and Los Angeles county line, near Castaic, on the Fillmore-Saugus-Newhall route, excepting a short stretch through this city, for which bids for the building will be opened on the eighth of this month.

Traffic will be resumed over this line in a few days. The improvement will give another good road to the coast, barring a stretch of six miles between Castaic and the Ventura county line.

PHENOMENAL PERFORMER.

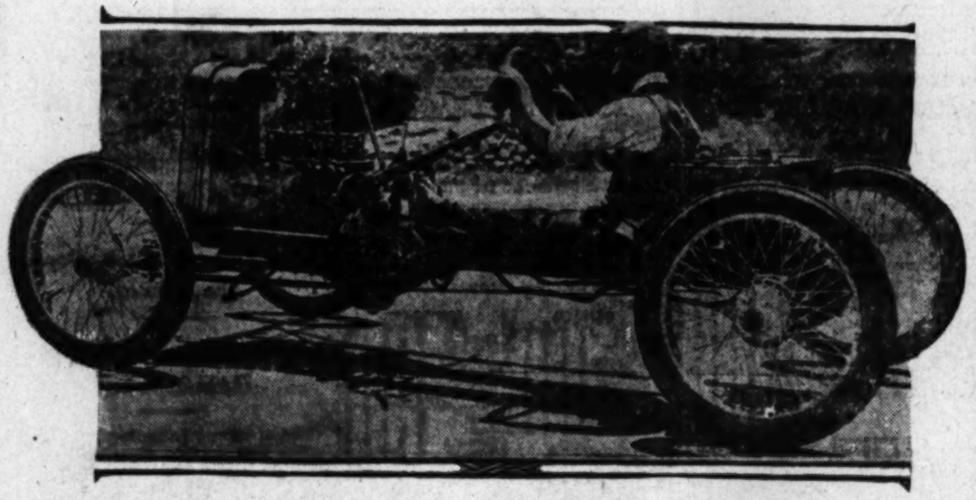
"McNamara is a phenomenal performer, however, when it comes to driving. So far no one has attempted to disturb his record of beating the time of the Lark for eight consecutive trips with a Maxwell, which he established here last year. McNamara is a man of tremendous physical endurance, but so far his endurance has failed to match that of the Maxwell, for he has never been able to put either the passenger car or the truck to a test which they could not meet.

"The use of the pneumatic tires on the Maxwell truck was undoubtedly a contributing factor to the success of the run to New York. These giant pneumatics have greatly enlarged the capability of trucks to maintain high speeds over rough roads with loads. Their use is certainly worth the careful investigation of every truck owner, particularly where speed is one of the important factors in the service required of the truck."

CONVICT LABOR TO HELP BUILD ROAD.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BLYTHE, Aug. 9.—Half a thousand names appear upon a petition that has swept the Palo Verde Valley, asking Gov. Stephens to lend State aid by convict labor to the Blythe-Mecca road on the State highway between Los Angeles and Phoenix. The county Supervisors are seconding the movement, and are asked to gravel. This road has been a thorn in the side of the county for a long time, and its repairing by only county work would entail heavy cost and taxation. The petition, started by a local newspaper, points out that it is more than a county issue, as the road is a State highway calling for State recognition after the manner pursued by other parts of the State where convict labor has been adopted with success.



Here's a flivver that even Henry wouldn't recognize.

It has made eighty-five miles an hour and is expected to do still more when completed. A. Bozzani (at the wheel) remodeled the creation from a stock Ford, con verting the motor into a sixteen-valve affair.

WITH THE CHECKER PLAYERS.

NOTES AND PROBLEMS.

PUBLICATIONS IN THE REALM OF CHECKERS.

THE POPULAR PLAYER.

By G. H. Smith, Leeds, Eng.

In nearly all games there is generally one player in the club who is picked out as being "popular" with the crowd, and it will certainly be found that this player is one of the "experts" of his game. It is his cleverness in most cases that endears him to his followers. As in most things, there are exceptions, and in draughts we find one of them, says the writer in the Yorkshire Weekly Post. By no stretch of imagination, speaking in an all-round sense, can it be taken for granted that the most expert checker player in a team is the most popular; in fact, it is very often the reverse. Now for this there must be reasons, and one that we have continually noticed is that for popularity "muscle" comes out streets ahead of "brain."

To be a great checker player one requires to have brains, and following brains, memory, for much study and burning of the midnight oil are required to enable the expert to reach his pedestal, and when there to steady himself upon it. When he has attained to his high position he plays at the head of his team, where again he meets in single combat another player of "brains," and caution becomes his "watchword;" and thenceforth the results of many of his games are draws.

To most sportsmen a "draw" is a very unsatisfactory ending, though in draughts and chess there is honor attached to it. What the onlooker likes to see is a player bringing his game to a winning ending, and "won one lost one" is more their ideal, for here they see two wins. It is among the middle ranks where these results most occur, and so it is from the middle ranks that the "popular" checker player often comes. He has not the responsibility of his leader; he cares less, the cloud is not continually on his brow, he makes mistakes and laughs, and the crowd laughs with him.—Taken from Pittsburgh Leader of July 21, 1918.

CHESS.

GAME NO. 101—PONZIANI.

Played in the British chess correspondence tournament, the game below is of theoretical interest on account of the new move introduced by White on his eighteenth turn:

White—Rev. E. F. Hammond	Black—Rev. A. Baker
1—P-K4	P-K4
2—Kt-KB3	Kt-QB3
3—P-B3	P-Q4 a
4—Q-R4	P-B3 b
5—B-Kt5	Kt-K2
6—PxP	QxP
7—P-Q4	B-Q2
8—B-K3	PxP
9—PxP	Kt-K4
10—Kt-B3	KtxKt ch
11—PxKt	Q-KB4
12—Castles (QR)	P-QR3
13—P-Q5	Castles
14—BxB ch	RxB-c
15—P-Q6	PxP
16—P-Kt4	K-Kt1
17—K-Kt2	Kt-B1
18—P-Kt5-d	PxP
19—KtxP	P-QKt3
20—Kt-Q4	Q-R6
21—R-QB1	R-K2
22—Kt-B6 ch	K-Kt2
23—BxP	KxB
24—Q-Kt4 ch	K-R2
25—R-B3	Resigns

a—Once this was considered the best move, but now it is held doubtful. 3—....., Kt-KB3 may be played or 3—....., P-B4. Also 3—..... KKt-K2 is worthy of attention.

b—Steinitz's move, long held the best, but PxP is safer. Kt-B3 and B-Q2 have also been tried, but are unsound against best play.

c—If QxB, White replies Q-Q4.

d—The move heretofore adopted was R-Q5. Advancing the pawn at once seems better. In fact, Black is left with very little resource and the win for White seems to be a logical outcome of the position.

TIRE FACTORY GIRLS TRY NATIONAL GAME.

Girls of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, O., are now playing the national game. The athletic department has organized a league of four baseball teams from the big army of girls working at the great tire plant and a regular schedule is being carried out which will last throughout the summer. It was the original intention to have the girls use a big playground baseball in their games, but the girls vetoed the idea vigorously and demanded a regular ball like the real league ball players use. The girls play in their regular factory khaki bloomer uniforms.

NEVER FOLD TOP WHILE IT IS WET.

Never fold the top while it is wet. If the car has been driven through the rain, keep the top up until it is thoroughly dry, because a wet or damp top folded up will mildew, which very quickly destroys the fabric. In folding the top take care to get each fold even and eliminate all wrinkles. The metal frame pieces should be separated by rubber pads wherever they rub together and the whole should be firmly secured by straps so as to prevent rubbing and rattling.

SUPREME SACRIFICE IS OFFERED BY SIX.

TWENTY-NINE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SEVEN STARS ON ONE SERVICE FLAG.

"There are now 2957 stars on the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company service flag," says M. D. Bixby, manager of the Los Angeles branch, "and thirty-six of this number have gone from our office here in Los Angeles.

"Six of the Goodrich men have already made the supreme sacrifice for America 'over there.'

"Naval Ensign Philips W. Page, a former salesman, was drowned in an airplane accident off the coast of England. Lieut. George P. Gustafson, Milton Scarborough, J. F. Crist, George M. Carruthers and Thomas Hardman were among the Americans reported killed in France during the past three months."

TRUCK EXPERTS FIND DEER ON VACATION.

ONE MEMBER OF PARTY HAS THE LUCK TO BAG A PACIFIC BUCK.

Deer are to be found in the Frazier Mountains, back of Chandler's in Ventura county, according to Leo Kelley of the Gates-Kelley Automotive Company, and the Smith Form-a-Truck dealers. Kelley, Henry Olsen, Harry Jones and Frank Kennedy went out a few days ago. One of the members of the party bagged a handsome Pacific buck. As one deer would supply enough venison for all and there was no desire to make a clean-up, after locating the spot, the party returned.

Kelley got back home in time to tackle the job of converting an old Schacht car into a truck by use of the Smith unit. This was the first time one of these cars has been converted, but the engine and frame were in good condition and Kelley says a first-class truck will be the outcome. Adaptation of passenger cars that otherwise would be discarded to commercial vehicles by means of the Smith Form-a-Truck is a growing to be a practice.

NEW DIRECTOR OF SALES APPOINTED.

LATEST ANGELENO HAS HELPED PIONEER IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

Irving C. P. Sudrow has been appointed retail sales director for Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., distributors of the Chandler Six in Southern California. For almost four years, Mr. Sudrow was associated with the Chevrolet Motor Company of Kansas City as manager of the Kansas City and Salt Lake establishments. He helped pioneer that car in both those districts. He has been connected with the motor car business for several years, having first become identified with it in the days of the old Thomas car when located at Buffalo. He says he regards it as fortunate that upon coming to this part of the country he has become associated with the Armstrong company and the Chandler car, because of the high prestige which the two jointly hold with the motoring public.

MANY ARE ADOPTING AIRPLANE MOTOR.

AUTO MAKERS CHANGING THEIR ENGINES AND DESIGN OF THE CHASSIS.

Among other improvements of late has been the development of the airplane motor to a high degree of efficiency, and one well-known automobile engineer has quickly taken advantage of the improvements that these airplane motors offer

Not only are the new cars changing their engines, but the design and construction of the chassis are being changed to meet those little requirements that mean so much to a motorist's comfort and convenience.

The new Nelson car, which is equipped with an airplane motor was recently placed on the market here by F. E. Nelson. It has some very original and unique features

One of the first things that one notices that is different about this car is the radiator, which is placed back of the front axle far enough to avoid being injured if the owner has the misfortune to run into something. This little feature is just one of the many which are built into this car to give an owner the service and pleasure he or she desires.

SIGNS INSTALLED.

The Automobile Club of Southern California has just completed the installation of 334 natty new road signs on the highways of Tulare county.

Tank and Willys-Knight Have Same Type Motor

THE GREAT WAR MOTOR—the Knight sleeve-valve motor—is standard equipment for all British tanks as well as for all Willys-Knight automobiles.

The Knight motor was selected by British engineers as the most powerful, the most efficient, and the most dependable type of motor.

It is used not only in the tanks, but in the high-speed armored cars on all battle fronts.

See the wonderfully efficient tank at the Allied War Exposition, then come to our store and see the equally efficient Willys-Knight automobiles equipped with the same type of motor.

PALMER TUBES
ASK YOUR DEALER

No Other Tube Will Do This

Four Palmer Safety Cord Tubes were mounted on the rims, without casings, and driven over the business streets of the city, not only sustaining the weight of the car, but carrying 40 pounds pressure as well.

No other inner tube will do this. First, because they will not stand a pressure of over one and one-half pounds. Second, because they will blow out when they are subjected to this abnormal strain.

This demonstration absolutely proves that Palmer Cord Tubes practically eliminate the possibility of blowouts. They have strength of their own to bridge over weaknesses in the side walls of casings. This means that casings, when equipped with Palmer Tubes, will wear on the tread and give miles and miles more service.

These are the same make of tubes that were used in the 3000-mile non-blowout test in casings that had four holes two inches in diameter in the side walls. For genuine economy, service and mileage from your casings Palmer Tubes are your one best "bet."

If your dealer does not carry them write us for prices and information.

DISTRIBUTOR ISSUES MOTOR LOG BOOK.

VOLUME TELLS HOW TO CUT DOWN EXPENSE OF RUNNING CAR.

That Mr. Wade of B. F. Wade Tire and Rubber Company, distributor for the all-red Tyrian tire, is not altogether a commercialized man is shown in the color scheme of his new log book which he is distributing to his friends and customers without charge. The tire chart is a golden yellow which signifies that one will get golden value for his money at Wade's. The inflation chart is white—symbolic of the pure air that can be obtained at Wade's at all times. The recapitulation sheet is red, which acts as a danger signal and stops the user before his expenses go beyond the danger line.

These log books are quite a convenience to a motorist who wishes to know just where and how he can cut down the expense of running his car. And in these times it is not only a question of expense, it is everyone's duty to conserve and take the best of care of everything one owns.

THREE-TON TRUCK IN OFFICIAL TEST.

TWO HUNDRED, SEVENTY-FIVE MILES AND TWENTY-SIX GALLONS.

On official test a three-ton truck owned by the Navy Department and carrying a load of one and one-half tons was recently driven in the East 275 miles on twenty-six gallons of gasoline, according to information received by the Master Carburetor Company from its sales manager, E. M. Chandler, who is now in Chicago attending to details incident to opening a branch office in that city. The truck was Master equipped and the test was an exacting one.

"The warmest day in Los Angeles would be a chilly one when compared with some we are having here at this time. The buildings are bake ovens," writes Chandler. Before returning he will visit the larger cities of the East in the interest of the Master carburetor.

DON'T THROW THAT OLD TIRE AWAY.

"Don't throw that old tire away" is the injunction of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. "Few tires are completely worn out when thrown away. Most of them are capable of considerable extra mileage if given a little help. A rimcut patch or an inside tire protector will often add hundreds of miles to the life of the tire.

"A rimcut patch is designed for application on the inside of the tire and is constructed with flaps which fit underneath the bead of the tire on both sides to hold the patch in place. It is flexible and enduring, and once applied, is out of sight and mind. Tires which seem to be hopelessly rimcut are given a new lease of life after being reinforced by a good rimcut patch."

CHALMERS MOTOR CO
Detroit, Mich. U.S.A.

It's a Fact that owners of the new CHALMERS by burning distillate are practically cutting their fuel bills in half. And they'll tell you that the savings so made will go a long way toward paying for Liberty Bonds and Thrift Stamps. Since they have become owners of the new CHALMERS they know what real car economy is.

Ask them if you would have first-hand knowledge of the functions of the "Hot Spot" and the "Ram's Horn" manifold. They know just as well as we do that these CHALMERS devices burn every heat unit there is in the low grade fuel. And as for power—well, you ask them. If you will accept our advice, don't delay too long in inspecting this car. The production is limited.

BOLES TOP NOTCHER, DECLARES PENNER.

Kenneth Penner, the well-known twirler of Red Killefer's Southwesterns, is unstinted in his praise of Walter Boles. Penner declares that Boles is the smartest catcher he ever heaved to. Boles caught him for the first time at Pasadena last Sunday, when Penner beat the strong Submarine team. With Walter to back him up this year, Kenneth is almost certain to stand high up in the pitching percentages at the end of the season.

ESSICK'S NINE BEATS DIVERS.

Fourteen Shipbuilders Struck Out by Brant.

Takes Ten Innings to Decide the Winner.

Submarine Team Victim of Bad Umpiring.

The opening of the Southern California War Service Baseball League at San Pedro yesterday afternoon was a decided success. A large crowd of enthusiasts was present and witnessed a rattling good game. The strong Submarine team hooked up with the Los Angeles Shipbuilding team headed by Bill Essick, the latter winning in ten innings, 3 to 2.

Brant pitched a swell game of ball for the Subs, striking out fourteen Shipbuilders. He should have won his game, but was the victim of some very poor arbiter work. Kane, who did the umpiring, was way off on several of his decisions. One of them, that of calling Heilman out at the plate when the latter stole home in the sixth, was rather raw and was instrumental in a way in beating the Divers.

Brenton heaved 'em over for the Essick pets and, while touched up rather lively, was somewhat of an enigma in the pinches.

It looked all over but the shouting, in the ninth inning, for the Subs, but here it was that Essick sprang one of those famous Vernon rallies of his and tied the score, as follows: Krueger, batting for Miller, bounded a hard one to Rader, who threw wild to first, Art going to second. Reiger, batting for Bouett, struck out, but Cook came along with a darling to center field, scoring Krueger.

The Shipbuilders won out in the tenth inning, as follows: Alcock poled a beauty to center for one bag and went to second on a passed ball. He then went to third on a fielder's choice and scored on good, old, reliable Pete Daley's slashing single to right.

KILLEFER WINS OPENING GAME.

and screeched its way to the bleachers. Sam could easily have trundled home, but he suffered a bilge while nearing the third sack and pulled up for air. It was Sam's faith in Rube Ellis that made the erstwhile Detroiter tarry en route. No sooner had Crawford taken a long breath than Rube rapped a grass burner to left, tallying Sam easily.

In the fifth Kelly was safe at first on Andrews's error. Burns was safe at first on a fielder's choice. Fitzpatrick sacrificed, Valencia to Crawford, who had displaced Penner at first base. Maroni sent a long sacrifice fly to Kiel, Kelly scoring after the catch.

The Reserves made their third and last run as follows: Smith singled infield. Samis fanned. Brandon fouled to Boles. Burns then hit one of the longest hits ever seen on the grounds. It almost went on to the left-field fence in the air, far over Ellis's head. Burns was so slow of foot that he reached only second, scoring Smith. He took third on a wild pitch, but Doran flied to Kiel, thus blasting the Navy's hopes.

The same teams play this afternoon at Washington Park at 2:30 o'clock. The score:

PROGRESS AND PRODUCTION

SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 11, 1918.

Pals.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

EXPERIENCED and observant planters of street trees are now fairly unanimous in the view that no tree need be shunned for the reason that it raises the sidewalk, breaks the curb, or fills sewers. These troubles are entirely due to man's poor work or lack of natural provision to meet the needs of the tree.

Districts in Southern California may be found where no roots of peppers or other trees are found on the surface or near the surface. The place for roots of all trees is well down in the soil and there they will delve if conditions are favorable. To be sure, there are trees that may be said to comprise a comparatively shallow-rooting species, but not one that will raise the walk, or anything else, if the soil be deep and easily permeable. And the writer, in thirty years' experience in California, knows of no tree that behaves improperly under natural conditions.

The average layman asks: "What makes the roots come up or rise above the surface of the soil?" And the answer is that they do not unless the whole tree rises with them. It may be that occasionally a root some distance from the trunk strikes a hard spot in the soil, is unable to force its way deeper and so yields to the lesser pressure above, but this is a most unusual occurrence. Our best writers state that a trunk never becomes longer between roots and lower branches, and this is doubtless true. Too many of them tack on the statement that the distance from the ground to the first or lowest branch does not become greater. This statement is very, very often untrue. It should be preceded by the words: "in good deep soil."

What happens, then? Answer: the whole tree rises. Why? For the reason that the soil below is so hard that the roots cannot delve as deeply as they should and a fast growing tree will not wait on their slow negotiation or grasp of the soil, and follows the lines of least resistance. This seldom happens with a small tree or during the first few years after planting. Surface soil is generally loose and subsoil next below sufficiently moist to allow the roots to penetrate. But when the subsoil is hard, either by reason of natural solidity or because it is too dry, the roots all become stilts. Continuous pushing of all of them against a substance they cannot penetrate results in raising the whole tree.

All who study the matter will recognize that this trouble is much more common in California than in any other State, and most common where rainfall is lightest. In other States, summer rains keep the soil moist and roots may slowly penetrate even the stiffest clay if it is moist. In Southern California active tree growth comes into full swing about the time the rains cease. If the subsoil is very hard the water has not gone down deeply but has run away on the surface, and such soil is neither absorbent nor capable of holding much water. Natural exhaustion and the tree's demands quickly use up this meager supply. The subsoil becomes closed and hard and roots cannot and do not penetrate. The tree, in Southern California at least, grows rapidly, and has to develop in some other direction, so it "goes up," and too often takes the sidewalk with it. In this problem man's duty is plain: "prepare ye the way." Again the writer sees Riverside's grand old man, the veteran City Forester J. H. Reed, rise up in tree convention and hears him say: "I like the Braunton slogan! If I had but a dollar to spend in planting a tree I would rather put a 10-cent tree in a 90-cent hole than a 90-cent tree in a 10-cent hole."

The Mexican Blue Palm.

The blue palm from Lower California is slow of growth in California and requires more care in transplanting than any other species we grow in the garden. When young it is not impressive but with age it becomes a beautiful palm. To the contrary, the other species or sister-palm (both are erytheas) is more beautiful when young, before it has a clear trunk or has lifted its giant fans from the ground about it. Beside these two species there is one other, Erythea Brandegei, also a native of Lower California and named for T. S. Brandegee, a botanist who was for many years a resident of San Diego. The last named species is the least known because the last to be discovered. One other species was named but it is a doubtful one and may not exist at all. The three species thrive locally and may be found in Los Angeles gardens.

CALIFORNIA AND AUSTRALIA.

A FORMAL LAGOON.

are poorly made. The worst and most persistent offender the writer ever observed was one of the common Japanese honeysuckles growing over a rear porch. And, to be sure, as a matter of course, the eucalypts on the street (three of them) were first destroyed. Still the trouble was repeated. Were the vines of honeysuckle destroyed? They were not. Five years have passed and no more sewers have become clogged and removed. Why? The writer told the house owner to have the joints in the sewer pipe properly made, and no further trouble has been or will be experienced. Concrete joints, well made, are nearly equal to the needs, but concrete is not waterproof. When joints have dried, a swab of hot asphalt to cover all the concrete will protect them from roots forever.

Protect Street Trees.

When tree roots fill sewers the latter are broken and new ones have to be laid. Why destroy street trees at great cost when a small part of such cost would pay for perfect sewer joints so that the trees could remain? Roots will ever seek moisture. It is easily recognized that they cannot penetrate any sewer pipe, no matter what the material or however poor it may be. How then do the roots enter the sewer? Through the joints only. Why are the joints not made safe against roots? Is such a condition impossible? Certainly not. Roots do not get in water pipes that feed; why should they get in water pipes that discharge? The material used in the joints is so poor and so poorly applied that moisture comes through between joint and pipe. A tiny root-hair enters to suck the

A Formal Lagoon.

Every garden feature or accessory should harmonize with its surroundings. In the natural or landscape garden they should be as natural in appearance as is possible. Yet the hand of man may be apparent as an agent, assisting nature. In a truly wild garden there must be no suggestion or trace of man's handiwork. Quite the contrary, when the situation is formal or cramped for space by buildings. Then no attempt at natural treatment is permissible except that some transition from the architectural to the natural may be made by inclosing plantations which set apart the area and hide, by vines or masses of trees and shrubs, or by all these, the surrounding buildings. Consistency should rule in the formal garden.

California and Australia.

Although California and Australia are much alike in climate, especially in annual range of temperature, they are wholly unlike in native vegetation, Australia having little in common with the rest of the world. There they have no oaks, pines, or any trees common to this country, nor do we have any common to them. We have palms and so has Australia but none closely allied. That country is a land entirely of evergreens and we are nearly so in Southern California. While the vegetation is so entirely dissimilar, distance has nothing to do with the condition, for faraway Palestine has a native vegetation as strangely like ours as Australia's is different. As yet Australian plants are but little known in California. We have tried to grow but few of the many thousands of species native to that country. The eucalypts have, however, worked a greater transformation in our landscapes than all other sorts of trees combined.

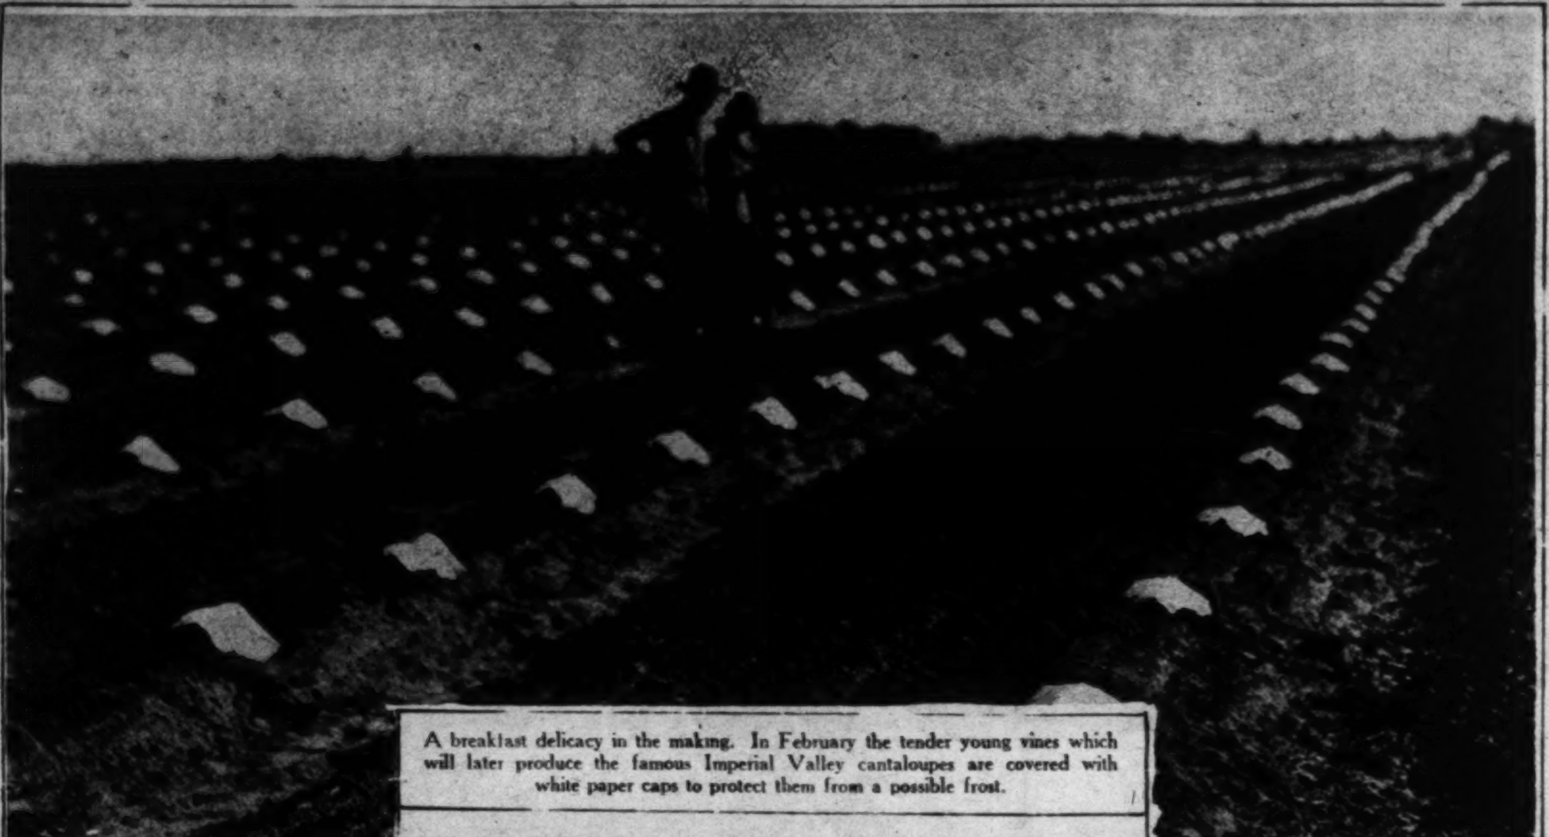
A Fine Plant.

To make a good show and covert two or three feet high, of good color, habit and general attractiveness, "commend me" to Cassia artemesioides, the only species of cassia native to Australia or that part of the globe. The other species we grow hail from Mexico or South America. All have flowers of some shade of yellow; all will thrive in hot, dry soil; none are hardier in this respect than the one of which we treat. If you cannot get the plants, sow the seeds.

Save the Water.

Now come the most trying garden days, "the saddest of the year" for the water user. Remember that the dry farmer's slogan is: Cultivation is nearly the equivalent of irrigation. Stir the soil lightly but thoroughly after each irrigation. Pulverization to a dust mulch is the goal to be sought and the nearer you approach this condition the less water you will need and the more vigorous and crop-yielding will be your plants.

Imperial Valley Closes Remarkable Cantaloupe Season.



A breakfast delicacy in the making. In February the tender young vines which will later produce the famous Imperial Valley cantaloupes are covered with white paper caps to protect them from a possible frost.

Soon after planting, the cantaloupe fields are irrigated.

Mountains of Melons.

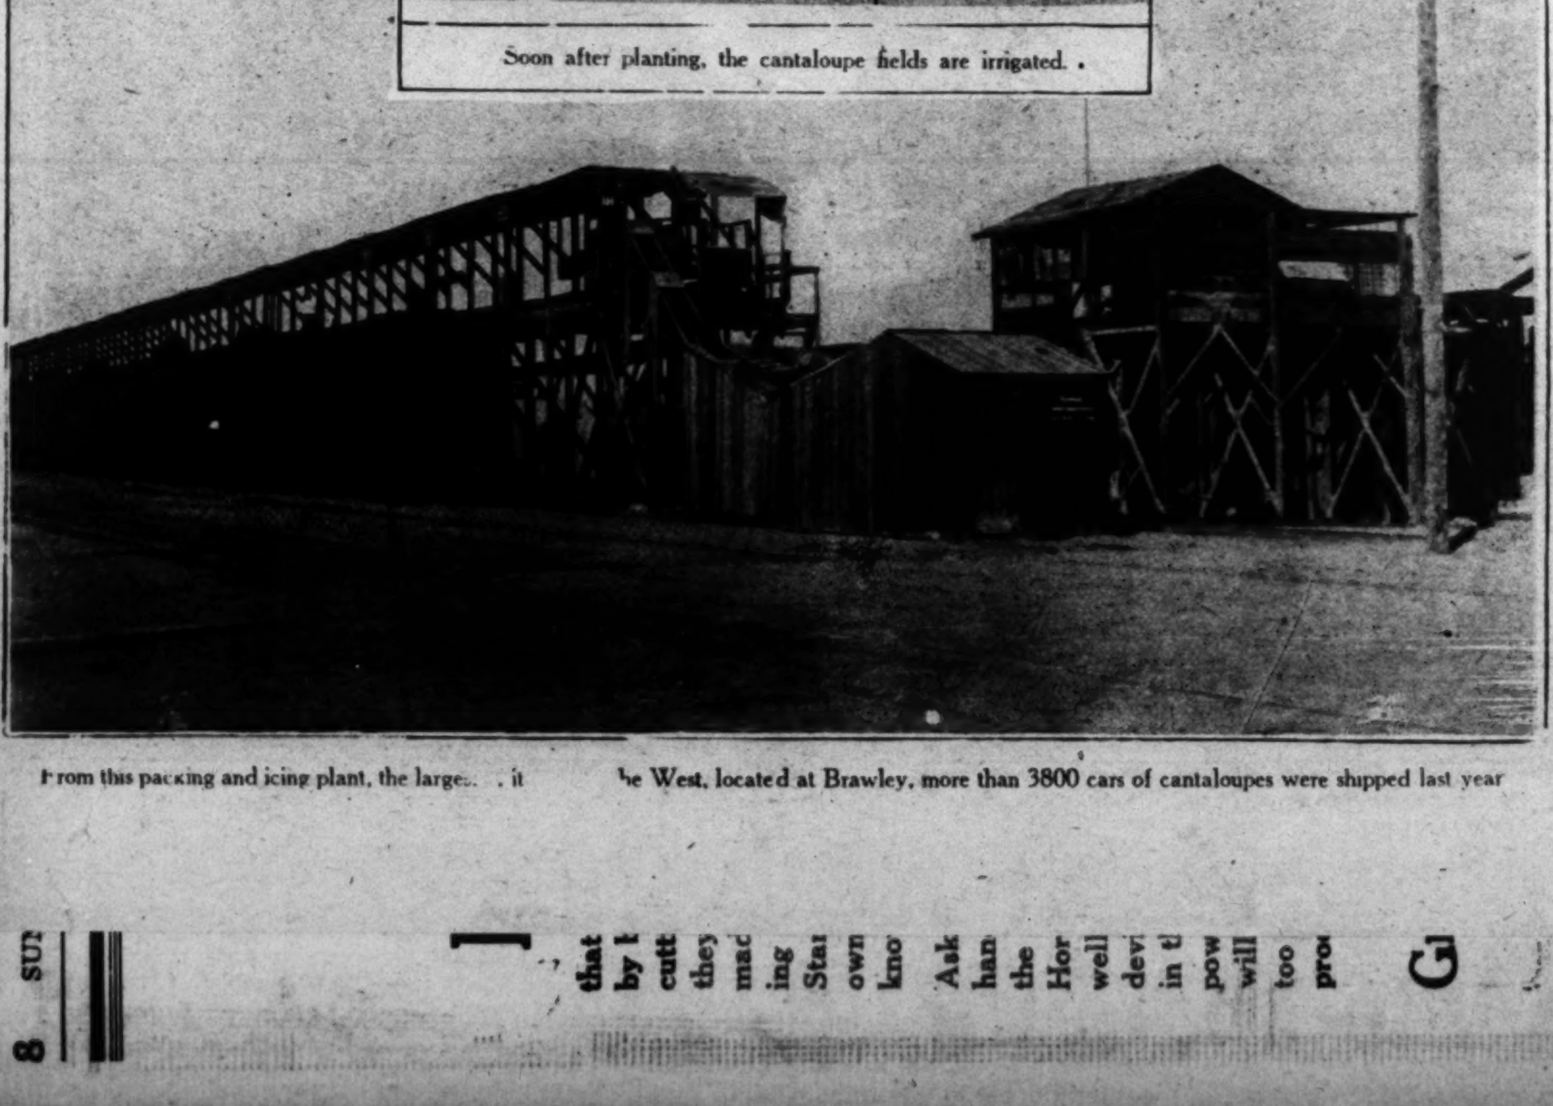
WHILE cantaloupes and muskmelon were just coming into the mark on the coast slope, Imperial Valle. farmers, who produce the earliest cantaloupes in America, were sending out the last crates of their 1918 crop. The output for the season was 4875 cars, and the prices received were the highest ever known in the history of the industry in that region.

Imperial shipped the first crate of cantaloupes this season on May 9, the melons, which were auctioned in Los Angeles for the benefit of the Red Cross, netting the grower an average of $9.15 apiece. Carload lots began to move on May 22, and the largest day's business was 222 carloads, sent out on June 19.

The greater portion of the crop was shipped from the immense packing and icing sheds of Brawley and immediate vicinity. Heber was next in importance as a shipping point, and Calexico was third. Other stations shipping cantaloupes were Calipatria, Niland, El Centro, Grape, Meloland, Westmoreland, Imperial and Poppy.

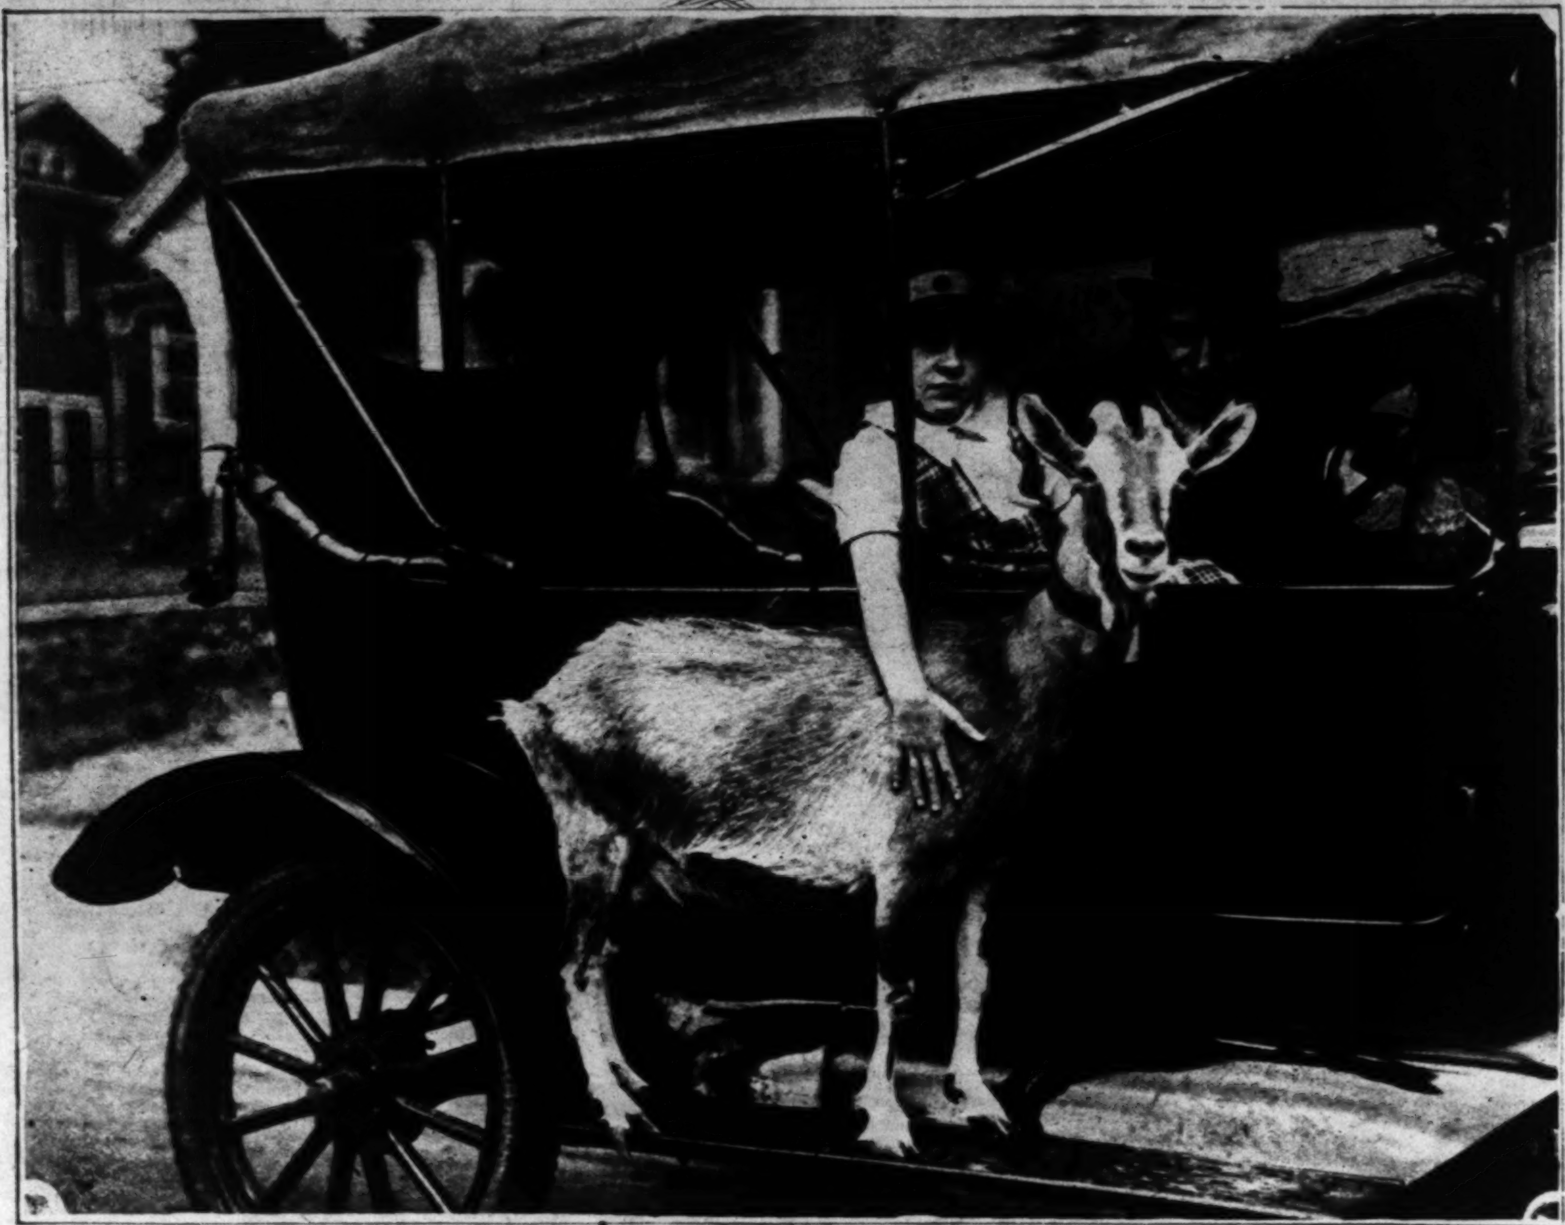
What is probably the largest cantaloupe loading shed and icing plant in America is at Brawley. Imperial ships 60 per cent. more cantaloupes than any other section in America, and Brawley handles over half the total crop; hence the importance of the huge sheds there.

In the height of the season over 300 men are employed in icing and loading the crated cantaloupes. The packing is done in sheds in the open fields. Seven hundred tons of ice is used per day for the cantaloupes at the Brawley station when the melons begin to come in rapidly. The system used is similar to that followed in preparing oranges for shipment



From this packing and icing plant, the largest in the West, located at Brawley, more than 3800 cars of cantaloupes were shipped last year

Milch Goat Takes Place of Dog on Running Board.



This beats taking canned milk on your auto tour. "Ida," the goat that likes motoring, has one three weeks' journey to her credit

Dairy Goes Along.

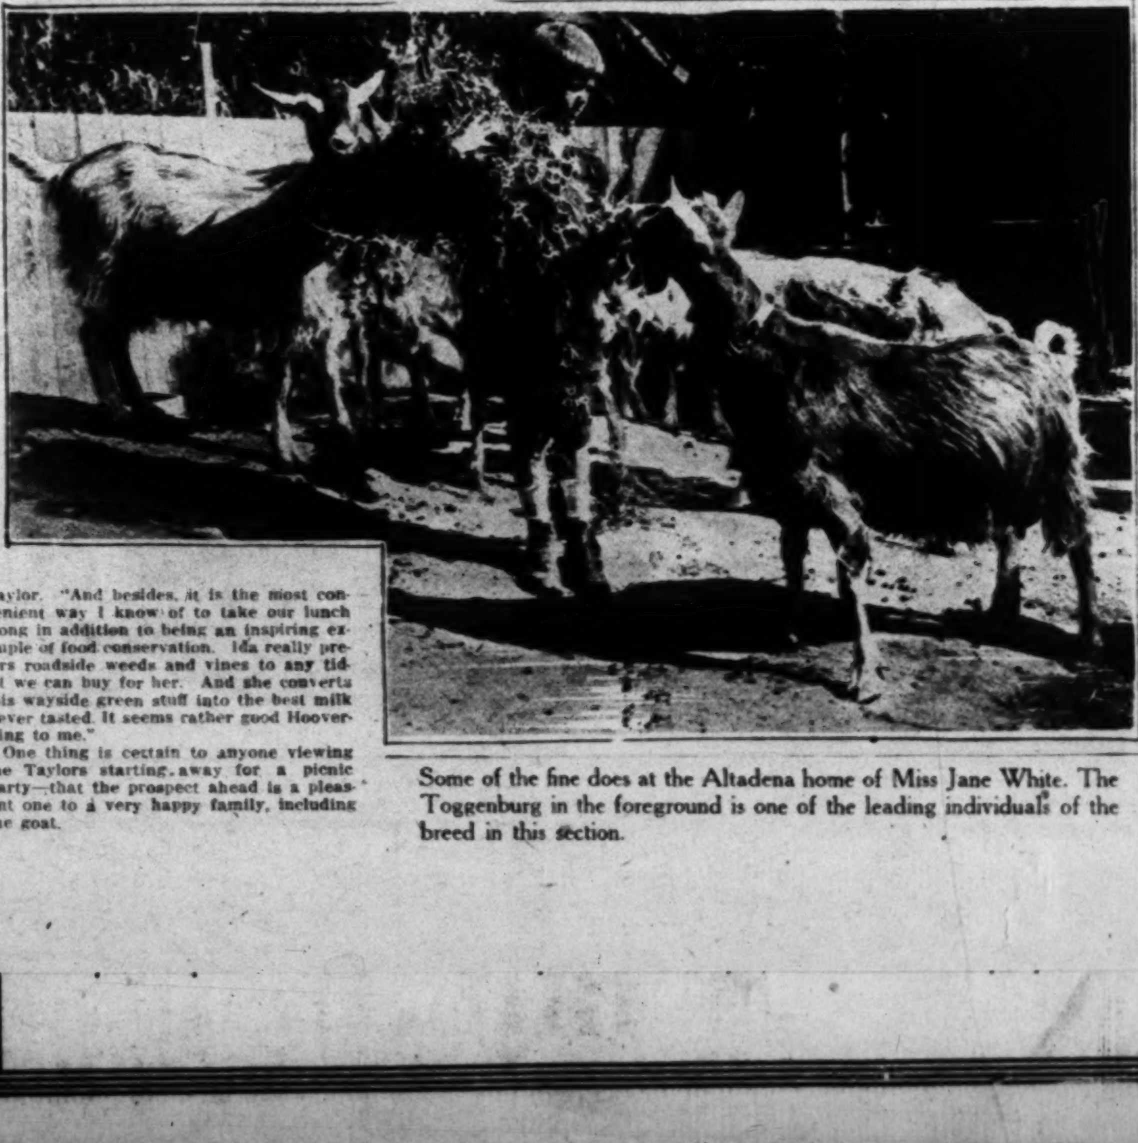
QUITE outclassing the incident of Mary and her lamb, is the true story of Mary and her goat which goes wherever Mary goes in the true modern method of locomotion. For Ida, a Toggenburg milch goat belonging to little Mary Alward, 8 years old, of No. 683 Lincoln street, Los Angeles, is so attached to her little mistress that she will not be left behind, whether the family is bent on a mere afternoon's jaunt, or is undertaking a cross-country tour. The longest trip Ida has to her credit so far is a three weeks' journey when the Taylor family moved from their former home in Harriman, Rhone county, in East Tennessee. And in all that time Mr. Taylor testifies that she never missed a milking, and was actually giving more milk when she arrived in Los Angeles than when she left her eastern residence.

Ida, according to the former Tennessee man, contributes five quarts of milk a day to the family food supply whether it rains or shines and whether she is in her home corral or in pastures new—or en route. It is a matter of calm indifference to Mary's goat whether she chews her cud while viewing the passing scenery from the running board of the family car or while on picket duty in a roadside camping ground, so long as the little girl is near by.

On long excursions the goat usually rides in a kind of crate attachment fastened on the running board of the machine, but for short distances she is quite content to balance herself skillfully—as only a goat can—on the running board itself.

"We never think of going on a really long trip without the goat," declared Mr. Taylor. "And besides, it is the most convenient way I know of to take our lunch along in addition to being an inspiring example of food conservation. Ida really prefers roadside weeds and vines to any tidbit we can buy for her. And she converts this wayside green stuff into the best milk I ever tasted. It seems rather good Hooverizing to me."

One thing is certain to anyone viewing the Taylors starting away for a picnic party—that the prospect ahead is a pleasant one to a very happy family, including the goat.



Some of the fine does at the Altadena home of Miss Jane White. The Toggenburg in the foreground is one of the leading individuals of the breed in this section.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

"FOOD WILL WIN THE WAR."

Is Labor Scarce?

THE following letter, giving the experiences of a man who has worked as an emergency farm laborer, presents an interesting point of view and, if really indicative of local conditions, sets forth a situation calling for most careful consideration on the part of the State and government labor bureaus:

"To the Editor Farm and Tractor Section: I am a retired Colorado farmer. With my son, a high-school boy, I took my automobile and went out to seek farm labor, intending to do whatever work was in season. I had not intended ever to go to work again, but the repeated appeals to older men and city residents generally to go out and help save the crops aroused in me a patriotic resolve to get into the harness once more.

"We found that, although several thousand laborers were needed simultaneously in certain sections of the Southland for a short period of time, and needed badly, we could not find any work which lasted long enough to make our venture pay. We used so much time and gasoline in moving from job to job that we could scarcely pay expenses. Had we been traveling on the railroad or by stage our transportation costs would have been still higher. We also had to work with foreign labor on several occasions and in many cases found foreigners waiting about for the jobs we were 'patriotically' filling, and seemingly in need of the work. Finally my son settled down to work in a creamery and I returned home.

"I think many so-called 'floating" laborers, averse to doing dairy work because of the Sunday hours, but willing enough to stay a considerable length of time in one locality, are up against this same proposition. If the government would arrange for California emergency farm laborers to move in companies or 'armies' over a prearranged route, so as to cover the urgent need for a large number of workers at certain points for short periods of time, and furnish transportation at, say, half the usual fare, leaving to the residents of a community or their steady hands the routine and regular farm work, it seems to me a great step would have been taken towards placing the situation on a fair and satisfactory basis. The farmer would get his work done, and the worker would be assured of regular employment and fair returns for his labor. The increase in passenger fares has added materially to the expense of the 'emergency' laborer.

"I believe I am speaking for a large number of able-bodied, willing workers. Although I have retired from active duty, I am able to do my 'bit' and my lack of success was not due to personal failings, but to the conditions I have described. Respectfully, [Signed] "J. KERR,

"No. 1100 West Forty-fifth street, Los Angeles."

Here in California, we have a situation probably unparalleled in any other State; that is, the fact that our many specialized crops, each grown in a comparatively small area, are of a nature requiring a great deal of labor at certain periods and no not always require this labor in the rotation, geographically, which might be desired. In other words, it is sometimes difficult for a general laborer to make his various jobs connect, except at great expense for transportation. It would seem that Mr. Kerr's suggestion as to reduced rates might in some way be put into effect, but this would admittedly be difficult unless labor were conscripted and moved in bodies at the will of the government.

Meanwhile Mr. Kerr's observations arouse some wonder as to just what is the true farm-labor situation in California. The consensus of opinion seems to be that there is not a shortage of so-called "regular" help in Southern California, and particularly in the vicinity of Los Angeles, except possibly in the dairies, and that an organized movement of men or women is the best way to meet the temporary and urgent demands for fruit pickers and similar classes of workers. The Farm and Tractor editor, however, will continue to receive calls from workers and employers and will endeavor to assist in meeting the situation which at present exists. This seems to be a lack of men and women to do emergency work on comparatively short jobs, rather than a lack of regular farm laborers. His province, therefore, would seem to be, rather, to deal with patriotic and "irregular" laborers who wish to be of assistance in conserving everything which is produced.

We would like to hear from employers, so as to secure a broad view of the subject. So far, the inquiries have been largely from men seeking work, which would indicate a condition of "saturation" in the local labor situation. Indeed, this suspicion is substantiated by government officials, who state that at present, the supply here about equals the demand.

This does not mean that there is any excuse for idleness. The man who is looking for a soft snap will always be with us; there is no lack of work, at good wages, in the dairies, and there is plenty of opportunity for men desiring steady employment to make satisfactory connections—if not in the immediate vicinity of Los Angeles, then elsewhere in the State.

The officials add that in a short time they expect to have more orders for labor than can be filled.

FARM LABOR AGENCY NO. 191.

The editor of the Farm and Tractor Section is an officially authorized farm labor agent, on a salary of $1 a year. It is his purpose to assist as much as possible in recruiting farm labor, handling calls from farmers and reporting them to the proper authorities. He will also receive and forward applications for work from volunteers in any branch of the great farm army.

Farmers or workers wishing to take advantage of this service should anticipate their requirements and desires as much as possible in order to insure getting results and should be as specific as possible in their communications.

The Farm and Tractor editor will receive such calls by letter, telegraph or telephone, and will make every effort to bring farmers and applicants together in mutually satisfactory arrangements. State wages wanted or offered.

A SOLUTION OF THE PROBLEMS OF THE SMALL TRACT FARMER.

ALTHOUGH ranches of tremendous acreage are common in California, the State, and especially the southern part of it, is as well, if not better, known for its typical "little farms." Hundreds of them, ranging in size from one to fifteen acres, dot the valleys and nestle among the foothills. It has been said that too much attention is paid to the "big fellows" and not enough consideration given to this typical California institution, the small tract.

There never before was a time in the history of this country when it was so vitally important, as well as necessary, for the farmer to utilize every possible means of increasing his efficiency. This applies especially to the class who are working small tracts.

It is upon this class of farmers that the country is dependent for the many forms of produce not classified as staples, yet, in a way, equally as necessary: garden vegetables, berries, fruits of all varieties, melons and many other forms of food. These small gardeners and fruit growers are now confronted with serious problems. Many of them find it entirely out of the question to keep a horse the year around. The size of their farms does not warrant it and present feed costs are prohibitive. They are dependent upon having their plowing, harrowing and much of their cultivating done by hired labor. This dependence often subjects them to disappointment, loss of time and extraordinary expense, which they can hardly afford, to say nothing of possible loss in produce through inability to have their work done at the proper time. The investment required for the purchase of tools and equipment, such as is used in larger operations, is entirely out of the question.

But how are these difficulties to be overcome? The manufacturers of farming machinery all over the country are putting forth every effort to devise ways and means that will meet this situation. Engineers and inventive geniuses are being called upon to solve the small farmer's problems and rapid strides are being made in this direction.

One of the most useful and practical solutions that has come to light in recent years is the small garden tractor, selling for little, if any, more than a horse and his working equipment. The service rendered by one these machines on a small ranch near Los Angeles was recently investigated. It was found that the owner was using it for the light plowing formerly done with one horse, cutting a six or seven-inch furrow with ease. It was remarkable to note the speed with which the work was accomplished and the power that the little tractor developed. It traveled at a speed of from two to three miles an hour, which is as fast as man cares to walk. The furrows were absolutely straight and regular; yet the sandy character of the soil did not seem in the least to impede the progress of the machine.

Considerable ingenuity has been displayed in rigging up various attachments for this tractor. Two methods of harrowing have been used in this locality. In one case a disc harrow was attached, in two gangs of four-inch discs, used with a specially-devised hitch and harrow cart, and easily operated and controlled by means of the steering handles of the tractor. In another instance an Acme pulverizing harrow with six coulter bars, hitched in a simple, yet effective, manner, was successfully used. The tractor handled both these little implements better than any horse could do it, and the amount of ground covered exceeded by one-third the amount a good horse could get over in the same length of time.

Cultivating has always been an important problem with the gardener, as well as with the orchardist. It is tedious, slow and tiresome work to cultivate by hand between narrow rows of small truck. Orchards and vineyards also present their respective difficulties, it being in many cases almost impossible to use a large tractor when other crops are planted in rows between the trees.

The small tractor is used for every kind of cultivating, under the most trying conditions. When the plants are small the "bull wheels" can straddle the plants, and attachments are provided so that three rows can be cultivated at a time, better and more rapidly than it is possible to do it by hand or with a horse. When the plants become larger, vegetable top guards are used, and the tractor, having a tread of only seventeen inches, is operated between the rows. From three to six cultivator shovels can be used with ease, and the attachments are so mounted on the frame that the shovels can be moved by means of the control handles, to one side or the other, for "close up" work. In orchard work it solves the problem in an ideal manner, being low enough to be used under the lowest trees without damage, and narrow enough to work between the smallest rows.

Furrowing shovels can be attached, as well as weeders, hillers and all other horse-drawn tools. It is remarkable to note the short turns that can be made at the ends of the rows, both in plowing and cultivating.

Another feature which makes the little tractor well adapted to the needs of the small rancher is that it can be used for the many purposes for which a small gasoline engine is needed. It can be moved under its own power to the point where the work is to be done and will drive anything requiring not more than three or four

KEEPIN' COOL.

Funny, ain't it? Every man
Can give a simple rule,
Some favorite and time-tried plan—
His scheme for keeping cool.
The city dude wears palm-beach suits
And runs up tailor bills,
Or dons a pair of heavy boots,
And hikes off to the hills.
Some fellows have to get away
And have a "change of scene."
But as for me, I'd ruther stay
Where lucerne fields are green.

Yes, they can have their fancy duds,
Their mountain trips and such.
I stay at home and hoe my spuds;
And when the heat's too much
For me, and seems like I can't stand
To work another row,
I take a walk around my land
To where the oak trees grow
Along my prize alfalfa field
(The best I've ever seen.)
And there I set and guess the yield,
And watch its changing green.

To me it seems the coolest spot
Upon this sizzlin' sphere.
And wavin' lucerne does a lot
More good for me than beer.
The smell is sweet; it dulls yer care.
The hottest wind is cooled
Just blowin' 'cross that "forty," there,
With purple flowers jeweled.
Friend, if you'd forget the heat
And everything that's mean,
Just come with me to my retreat
Beside that field of green.

CITRUS GROWERS HEAR ABOUT NEW WRINKLES IN FUMIGATION.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON (See Pages 8 and 9, Rotogravure.)

OVER 350 Los Angeles county citrus growers assembled at the Covina High School on Saturday, July 20, as guests of the Covina center of the Farm Bureau to attend an all-day fumigation school, held under the auspices of the Farm Bureau and the Citrus Experiment Station, with the active co-operation of the County Horticultural Commissioner and his staff of inspectors.

The opening address by County Horticultural Commissioner William Wood contained some very interesting figures relative to the work of the Horticultural Commission in Los Angeles county. The successful culture of citrus fruits in California is absolutely dependent upon the control of a large number of insect pests, chief among which are the various scales and the mealy bug. In order properly to control these pests, the County Horticultural Commission was established by State law. The chief duty of the Hotricultural Commissioner is to keep informed regarding insect pest infestation and to control such infestation. Both ornamental plantings and orchards must be inspected, and when pests have increased to the point where they constitute a public nuisance, written notice is served on owners to abate the nuisance within a certain time by fumigating, spraying, or by other treatment suggested. If this is not done, the commissioner may enter the premises and abate the nuisance, the cost of such work being a lien on the property. In the absence of satisfactory commercial operators the commissioner himself undertakes the work of pest abatement, which requires that the county maintain adequate fumigating outfits.

CITY LOT FUMIGATING.

Emphasizing the difficulties involved in city lot work and stating the qualifications of the city lot fumigator, Dr. A. G. Smith of Pasadena gave a very instructive address. He spoke particularly of the exacting nature of the work, which requires a very particular type of man. The city lot fumigator must be extremely careful of prized ornamental trees, often not worth keeping, commercially, but prized for their aesthetic value. Great care must be taken to avoid injuring domestic animals, to dispose of the fumigation residue so that no possible harm can result from it, and to avoid disturbing the residents, since the work is largely done at night. Fire danger must be reckoned with. On account of the piecemeal nature of the work the cost is high, and the city lot fumigator must have the ability efficiently to plan his work so as to cut costs. Dr. Smith believes that the use of the liquid gas will present many advantages for city lot work, chief among which are first, the fact that it is unnecessary to cart along the cyanide, acid, and water, and second, the absence of residue, which must be disposed of.

F. G. Wyman, manager of the Growers' Fumigation and Supply Company, gave a very interesting address on the advantages of co-operative fumigation. Born of dire necessity, the first large co-operative fumigation company was organized at Pomona in 1910, with eight or ten packing-houses as members. At that time, although there were a number of conscientious commercial fumigators doing good work, many were not giving satisfaction, largely due to carelessness and inattention to details. This association has been singularly successful from the beginning. A report giving a summary of its activities for the 1917 season, as given by Mr. Wyman, showed that although labor costs have gone up very materially since 1910, the average labor cost per tree in 1917 was $0.0608 as against a labor cost in 1910 of $0.0616 per tree. Mr. Wyman attributes this condition largely to better organization and the substitution of piece work for wages, on the hour basis. He cited a number of cases showing how the association is able to do the work for much less than commercial operators. Some figures quoted by Mr. Wyman regarding last year's activities are as follows: Number of trees fumigated, 316,000; labor cost per tree, $.0608; overhead expenses and depreciation, $0.046 per tree; total covering cost, $.1068 per tree; cyanide, $0.1706 per tree; total cost per tree, $0.2774. The company refunded to members in 1917 a rebate of $1375.

For the last three years the association has been using the cyanofumer, its chief advantages over the pot method being the immediate obtaining of the gas without waiting and the reduced burning of the tents. He prophesied a bright future for the liquid gas.

CONDITIONS ARE RIGHT.

The first part of the afternoon session was devoted to the reports of Inspectors Kell of Claremont, Smith of Pasadena, Swiegart of Whittier, Langford of Glendora and Hodges of Covina. All agreed that the black scale still constitutes the most serious pest and that it can be controlled by fumigation at the proper time; also that the heat wave of last summer killed a great part of the black scale and that the fact that most of the trees are now showing but a small infestation offers a splendid opportunity for citrus growers to get in and practically eradicate the scale. From these reports it becomes more and more evident that annual fumigation is one of the best forms of insurance the citrus grower can carry. Practically every inspector attested to the fact that the best yields are uniformly on the orchards which have been regularly fumigated and consistently fertilized. Fumigation will begin a little early in some parts of the county and will be in full swing by September 15. The mealy bug was reported as bad or spreading only in the Pasadena and Whittier sections and reference was made to the fact that control of the Argentine ant constitutes the best way to control the mealy bug. Citricola scale was reported as practically extinct, and red and purple scale present only in few localities. Aphis was reported as bad early in the season.

The principal address of the day was given by Prof. H. J. Quayle of the Citrus Experiment Station, who spoke of the development of fumigation with liquid hydrocyanic acid gas and its future prospects.

HISTORY OF FUMIGATION.

The earliest efforts at fumigation were made with a machine which generated hydrocyanic acid gas, which was conveyed under the tents by means of a hose. Then came the pot method, whereby the acid and cyanide were placed in pots set under the tents. Five or six years ago the "Owl" fumigating machine was put on the market, and during the last three or four years has been superseded by the "cyanofumer," which has been brought to a high degree of perfection and possesses many advantages over the old methods and machines. The last two years, however, have witnessed the development of the liquid gas process, the credit for which is largely due to the Dingle Brothers of Los Angeles, particularly to William Dingle. So promising is this latest development that in the 1917 season no less than 3000 cases of sodium cyanide have been liquefied for use in the liquid gas machine.

Liquid hydrocyanic acid gas has been known to chemists for a long time, but on account of its dangerous character it has not been used very much until recently. Now that it has been experimented with to a large degree, however, we are finding that if handled properly, it is not so dangerous as was supposed. The liquid gas is a colorless liquid, similar to water, but much lighter and having a boiling point of only 80 deg. Fahrenheit. It is rather unstable and decomposes readily under certain conditions of light and heat, to form the gas. The impure article is explosive under certain conditions, but if pure enough and kept in a sufficiently strong container it is safe to handle.

Its method of manufacture is not complicated. The gas is formed in a generator by the use of sulphuric acid and sodium cyanide and conducted through pipes to flues surrounded by a cylinder containing a cold brine solution. Here it is condensed to a liquid at a low pressure and is drawn off. It is at present being purified further by distillation, which takes out the water. Last season this was not done. It is then run into drums containing from fifteen to sixteen gallons, which, when sealed, are ready for use. The plant is located at Azusa. In 1917, only twelve and one-half gallons of the liquid was recovered from 200 pounds of the cyanide. Due to improved methods, slightly better than fourteen gallons of a theoretically possible eighteen and one-half gallons is now recovered. On a fourteen gallon basis, one ounce of the solid cyanide equals sixteen and one-half cubic centimeters of the liquid.

The liquid gas is used in a machine originally developed by the Dingle Brothers. The 1918 model machine as now made by Andres and Jefferson at Alhambra is much superior to the 1917 model.

Experiments carried on by Prof. Quayle at the Citrus Experiment Station to determine the efficiency of the gas, have indicated that with the recovery of fourteen gallons of the liquid in the manufacturing process, and the use of a dosage equivalent to the pure liquid, very satisfactory results are obtained. The liquid air machine is still in the process of development and all the indications are that it will be used extensively in the future. The principal disadvantage of the use of liquid gas, that of having to pour the liquid from the drum into the machine, with the attendant danger of inhaling the fumes, has been done away with by the use of a filling machine worked by an air pump.

Some of the distinct advantages of the use of liquid gas are: (1.) There is practically no burning of the tents, which is a very important factor in the depreciation of fumigating apparatus and which occurs both with the pot method and the cyanofumer; (2,) there is no residue to dispose of as this is taken care of at the plant where the gas is manufactured; (3,) there is no dissolving of chemicals during the day preparatory to fumigation at night; (4,) there is no carting of chemicals through the field; (5,) the machine can be carried by hand, no horse being necessary, thus cutting down the labor requirements.

Liquid gas should be recognized, however, as a dangerous substance, and should be handled with care. Precaution must be taken to tuck the tent down about the discharge tubes before forcing the gas into the tent. With proper care, the method promises to be a marked advance over other systems used in fumigation.

Prof. Quayle's address was followed by a short talk by S. A. Stowell of Charter Oak on the present difficulties facing the commercial fumigator and the necessity of more co-operation between him and the grower, after which a practical demonstration of fumigation methods and apparatus was given by Mr. Stowell and the Dingle Brothers.

Special features of the meeting were the vocal selection by Miss Broadwell and a short patriotic address by Mr. Montaville Flowers. The meeting was presided over by President Ben F. Thorpe of the Covina Farm Center, with H. A. Miller and J. L. Matthews assisting in the arrangements.

THE OPEN SEASON ON MEALY BUGS.

The worst pest of garden and orchard in Southern California is the mealy bug These pests are really much worse in ornamentals than in fruit trees, since the range of plant life is very extensive and from some plants they are difficult to dislodge by ordinary methods. The hardest to clean of all host plants is the common rice-paper plant, Fatsia (Aralia) papyrifera. The deep, protected pockets at the base of every leaf defy extermination of the bugs and yet all plants of this species found by the writer are infested. In the last monthly bulletin of the State Horticultural Commission appears the following:

"These insects are very difficult to control, although the persistent application of large quantities of water under high pressure will enable the grower to keep the pest down. This, however, is a rather expensive means of treatment and the citrus mealy bug especially can be kept in check by destroying the ants in the orchard and liberating colonies of beneficial insects. It is also advisable to band the trees with burlap before the mealy bugs get abundant. These bands can be removed occasionally and dipped in engine distillate, and in this way large numbers of the adult females can be destroyed. since they will crawl into the burlap for the purpose of laying their eggs. This method is particularly applicable in the case of the citrophilus mealy bug. Care must be taken, however, that the distillate in the bands is allowed to evaporate before they are placed on the trees, or injury is liable to result."—[E. B.

NITROGEN FROM THE AIR.

The largest experimental plant in the United States for the manufacture of fixed nitrogen from the air, with the exception of the ones now being constructed for the War Department, is in operation at the United States Department of Agriculture experimental farm, Arlington, Va. At this plant the nitrogen from the air is combined with hydrogen to form ammonia which can be used in the manufacture of explosives and fertilizer. Experiments are now being conducted at this plant by the bureau of soils with a view to increase the efficiency of the process. The War Department is co-operating in this work. What is known as the Haber process of nitrogen fixation is being used. This process involves the production of ammonia from hydrogen and nitrogen. The two gases are mixed in the proper proportions, put under high pressure, subjected to intense heat and passed over spongy iron, whereupon a portion of the mixture combines to form ammonia.

Save energy by doing farm work with a gasoline engine whenever it is possible. A good engine will perform any work to which it is adapted much cheaper than it can be done by hand or frequently by horse power.

Farm News of Bounteous Southwest.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

PORTERVILLE.—Detailed analyses have been completed of irrigation water pumped from all wells in the citrus district south of Porterville to the Ducor district, the tests showing that in none of these wells is there a salt content sufficient to cause damage to citrus orchards. These tests were made immediately following discovery of the fact that an orchard in this county had been practically ruined by the application from an irrigation well of water which carried a high sodium content.

The analyses which have been filed with officials of citrus associations here show that the range of mineral content in the Porterville section is only a few parts per million, the lowest tests of the lot being from the wells which supply water to the Terra Bella irrigation district.

SANTA ANA.—Even the busy little bee is doing his bit for Uncle Sam, and Orange county honey will within the next few months be found in army hospitals for sick soldiers, as well as entering possibly, into the regular army diet. A carload of honey was recently shipped from Santa Ana by J. E. Gowen direct to New York City on government contract. The carlot weighed 63,600 pounds and was valued at $13,780.

TULARE.—Members of swine breeders' associations here have completed the plans soldiers, as well as entering, possibly, into with a view to increasing the interest of the ranchers in a better grade of stock. Breeders from all parts of the State have been asked to consign animals for this auction.

VENTURA.—According to Newton Cale, bee inspector for this county, we have 23,000 colonies for which taxes are being paid. This puts us in the lead again as the greatest honey producing county in the State. Last year we had 18,000 colonies and at other times as many as 30,000 have been accredited to Ventura county. District Organizer Butler is working up the organization of bee keepers; his territory includes at this time, Santa Barbara and Ventura counties. A "get together" picnic is planned.

OJAI.—The members of the Woman's Land Army unit who left their headquarters at Sierra Madre and Los Angeles July 12th for the Robinson ranch in the Upper Valley of the Ojai, have completed their task in the fruit drying camp. Mr. Robinson says he is entirely satisfied with the work of the women and that he has really enjoyed having them as help. The work was completed on Friday night. The visiting farmerettes were not satisfied with their day labors but also gave an excellent programme for the benefit of the Red Cross one Saturday night at Ojai Theater, which netted $108. The affair was most liberally patronized.

Another unit of girls was called to the E. C. Kelsey ranch at Saticoy, for the walnut picking. The girls are being recruited at Ventura.

OXNARD.—The first rancher in the county to try spraying, in an effort to rid bean fields of the worm which is threatening serious damage to the crop is John Arneill, who is spraying with arsenate of lime. This is used in place of arsenate of lead, first recommended by the County Horticultural Commissioner, A. A. Brock. The arsenate of lime costs only one-half as much as arsenate of lead and, Mr. Brock says, results will be the same. How much good the spraying will do cannot be told yet. A large spraying outfit with 200 pounds pressure is being used for the work.

VAN NUYS.—Approximately 200 carloads of potatoes have been shipped this season from the district including Van Nuys, Owensmouth, Marian and Mission Acres, and a considerable acreage still to be dug has not as yet been estimated. The price received has been between $1 and $1.40 per hundred.

FRESNO.—Packing of green fruit is under way in a large number of packing plants. The crop of all kinds is heavy and prices will rule high. Figs are an abundant crop and values are the highest in years. Peach trees, both early and late, are loaded. Thompson grapes are being sent out, and by the last of the month Malagas will be ready for market.

OXNARD. — Thomas McCormick was elected president of the Camarillo Farm Bureau at the center's first meeting. A tentative wage scale for this season's bean harvest of $3 a day, or $1 an acre, for piling beans the (laborer to board himself,) was decided on. A committee composed of C. C. Perkins, Martin Flynn and A. M. Meyer will report to next week's meeting on the wage question and a definite figure will be decided on.

BRYN MAWR.—L. O. Yount, one of the largest apricot growers of this section and the owner of a big drying establishment here, is more than pleased with the apricot crop for this year. Today Mr. Yount sold about 54 tons of dried apricots, or his entire holdings, to Rosenberg & Son of San Francisco for $260 a ton. A large part of this came from his own orchards. He also sold about thirty tons of hand-picked apricots to the cannery for $35 a ton. Mr. Yount says that he has received more than $15,000 for all the fruit he has had this year and that he will have a big profit at the end of the season. The Colton cannery took about 160 tons of the local fruit and the Kubias cannery at Redlands about 100 tons. The work of cutting apricots has been finished and most of the racks have been taken in as the fruit was dried. Despite the labor shortage, this was one of the most successful years the growers have ever had.

The tractor which economizes on fuel is usually the one which is in good repair and adjustment.

COMMISSIONER REVIEWS WORK.

Los Angeles County Horticultural Commissioner Wood gave an interesting summary of the work of his office in his recent address before the citrus fumigation school at Covina.

In a county of the horticultural importance of Los Angeles county these duties require a large corps of inspectors and involve a great deal of work. Some of the figures for the past year as given by Mr. Wood, are as follows: The Horticultural Commission has served notices on city lots and orchards to the number of 20,000 and the number of forced abatements of "nuisances" was 5500, done at a cost of $17,929.66. This work was done largely in Hollywood, Glendale, Monrovia, Sierra Madre, Pasadena and vicinity, and Alhambra. The city lot and ornamental plantings are the most irritating problems to handle and involve more time and labor in proportion than any other part of the work. Mr. Wood stated that, since a new State law passed last year had delegated to his commission the additional duties of squirrel eradication and enforcement of the fruit standardization law, without furnishing sufficient additional help, he was in the position of having more work than he felt he could do without more funds. He bespoke the support of citrus growers for the extension of his work.

Additional figures showing the activities of his office were as follows: Trees and plants inspected during the past year, 6,137,777; carloads of fruits and vegetables inspected, 1600; cases of fruits and vegetables inspected, 1800; wagonloads, wholesale and retail, 2200; treated for red and purple scale, 468 cases; treated for thrips, forty cases; pineapples treated for mealy bug, 412 cases.—[R. CORN GROWING LANDS.

Approximately three-fourths of the world's corn is both produced and consumed in the United States, according to the United States Food Administration. The Western European Allies produce less than one-half of their total corn requirements, which exceed 250,000,000 bushels. Hungary produces 200,000,000 bushels of corn, and is the largest producer of this grain outside of the United States. Argentine is third.

Remarkable Records of Australian Black Orpingtons

POULTRY NEWS AND VIEWS. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

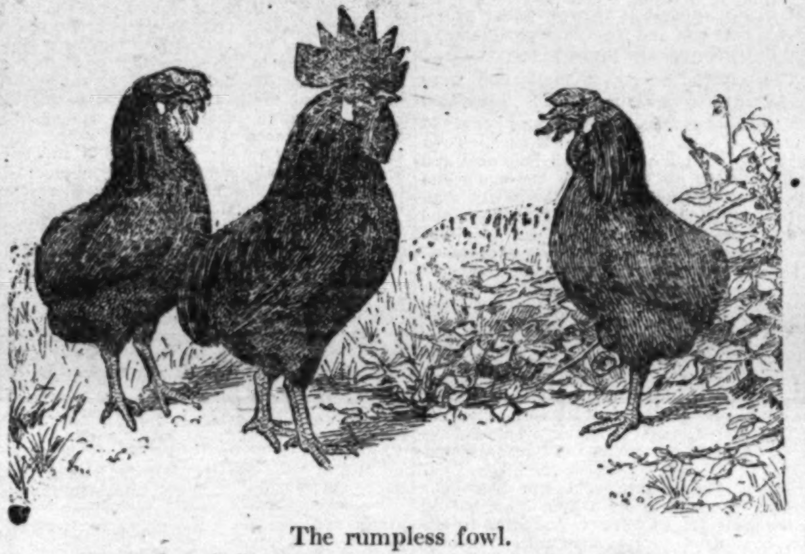
VERILY, all breeds are good in the hands of good breeders, irrespective of individual opinion or objects to be attained. So pronounced is the reputation of the Mediterranean class as egg machines that we are quite apt to overlook the fact that even among the so-called general purpose fowls and table breeds, some splendid egg-producing strains have been developed. Indeed, so pronounced is this personal factor in particular cases as to challenge the title of the Mediterraneans to exclusive honors as high layers. For instance, there has been developed in Australia a race of Black Orpingtons, the hens of which in recent government egg-laying contests at Bendigo have attained a record ranging from 273 to 326 eggs per hen in a single year. These hens came from the yards of Mr. J. E. Bradley of Moorabbin, Victoria, whose stock at the late Bendigo contest won first and second honors in the singles with two birds which laid in the year, 326 and 320 eggs, respectively. And six of his hens put up the phenomenal score of 1638 eggs, or an average of 273 eggs each. According to a writer in the Melbourne Weekly Leader, Mr. Bradley has good cause to pride himself on the consistency of his Orpingtons as layers, and the following are some of his records won in public tests: Six pullets, Bendigo test, 1915-16, 1596 eggs; Burnley winter test, team, dry mash, 1916-17, 500 eggs; Bendigo single test, 1916-17, first, 307 eggs, third 283 eggs, and seventh, 255 eggs. At Wangaratta, single test, second, 272 eggs; at Bendigo, single test, 1917-18, first, 326 eggs, second, 320 eggs, 256, 248, 247 and 241 eggs; at Castlemaine, 1917-18, first 270 eggs, also winter test; at Burnley, 1917-18, second single winter test, [illegible]02 eggs; at Bendigo, 1917-18, first winter single test with world's record, 115 eggs in 122 days.

THE PERSONAL FACTOR.

In the development of a strain of consistent layers it will be realized that the skill of the breeder must play an important part. For instance the matter of selection and mating must be carefully studied so that stamina and prolific laying will result. It will be understood that the pullets could never have made these wonderful records if they had become broody. There is no such thing as wasting time with these modern Orpingtons; they are symbols of activity in every sense of the term. In the Bradley type there is an absence of coarseness; yet the birds have big bulky frames. Quality is strongly pronounced, and one observes uniformity in the small, well-shaped heads, black Gypsy eyes, neat skulls, fine texture of comb, close, short, green feather and great length in body. In handling the pullets and stud hens one finds the finest pelvic bones as well as good width and length at the egg duct. Such hens cannot fail to be prolific layers, for all coarseness has been eliminated in the construction of the bird, and broodiness is an unknown quantity. The breeding cockerels are from tested hens with big records. One of the features of these Orpingtons is their great size. In this connection it would be interesting to know Mr. Bradley's system of selection for his breeding hens. Does he use his high laying females, or are the heavy layers the result of matings of blood-lines calculated to produce record breakers?

HIS METHODS.

We further learn that Mr. Bradley specializes exclusively on Black Orpingtons, and that all through the rearing season the young birds are raised in big pens, with almost free range, and are only penned up when coming on to lay. Many of the pullets are wonderfully precocious, commencing to lay at a little over four months of age. The feeding of the young fowl is based on a very liberal system, and the growthy character of the birds shows the advantage of good food. From the shell the chicks are fed on proprietary chick-food, and after the tenth day are given a mash of coarse bran (two-thirds) and bran (one-third.) They are also given lucerne. At midday cooked rabbit meat is fed. At night, a prepared grain mixture is given until the birds are two months old, when whole wheat is fed. The stud birds are fed on the above mash in the morning, and are given wheat, oats and crushed maize at night.



The rumpless fowl.

A curiosity among domesticated breeds of poultry.

It is pleasant to learn that this great Orpington egg farm enjoys the distinction of owning some of the best Blacks grown in Southern California; viz., from the yards of W. T. Stewart of Alhambra, consisting of two hens and a cock. The writer in the Leader says that he saw about seventy chickens being reared from the importations, and that on the free range they were growing apace. The imported cock is a great massive bird, wonderfully wide at the shoulder and deep in body and of a nice green color, but he differs in head points from Bradley males, and is not so fine. However, he and the two hens come from a strain which has not been broody for three generations, and Mr. Bradley expects them to make a valuable change of blood for his flock. The two hens are of great length and width and short in feather, and mated with typical males, should produce something good. The American cock is a great, vigorous bird. He shows the gallantry of his sex by attacking all comers who enter his pen, and his owner remarks that he "kicks like a horse." The blood of these birds will be judiciously blended into the Bradley strain.

Here is certainly food for reflection on the part of Orpington breeders. Why not import a trio of Bradley Orpingtons and see how they will behave in Southern California? Hens of a heavy breed with records of 320 and 326 eggs in 365 days, certainly are pushing egg records to the limit. Are these phenomenal performers racial or individual? And can they be maintained from generation to generation, or are they the result of special matings?

The Passing of Robert A. Rowan.

The initiative, the creative genius, the power to do, and the rare personality of the late Robert A. Rowan will be hymned by loftier harps than mine, partly because I am not of the breed of great captains of industry, and partly because I am not commercial, and again because bright names and deeds will always hallow song and story. His ideals were high. His material success was the least noteworthy of his attributes and his kindness of heart and gentle disposition the most pronounced. For after all is said Rowan was at heart a child of nature, full of the milk of human kindness, which is fundamental and which makes life worth the living. There are few men possessed of a deeper love for animate and inanimate nature; for bird and animal life. His fancy for pure-blooded fowl was as intense as it was sincere; he chose for its expression the White Faced Black Spanish, which for over a quarter of a century occupied his attention; hence his strain became internationally famous. The Rowan birds were as well known in London, New York and Boston as in Los Angeles. He also handled other breeds, notably bantams. In addition to poultry, he was a lover of farm animals and dogs. No one so constituted temperamentally could be otherwise than a charming personality to whom would come success because deserved.

In the passing of Robert A. Rowan, the fancy breeders lose one of their brightest and most loyal disciples. For twenty-five years his string of birds has been a conspicuous feature of American poultry shows. Always an ardent and consistent exhibitor he was also a contributor to the success of fancy poultry, giving liberally of his time and means. It is to be hoped that the strain of Rowan Black Spanish, and his fine pens of bantams, will fall into hands capable of perpetuating their fine qualities. For unless this is done, we are apprehensive that they will gradually decline and become only a memory to the generation of breeders that are even now approaching the sere and yellow leaf.

The soul of Robert A. Rowan went out into the night when he was yet in the prime of life. But he had accomplished things that must ever prove a cherished memory to kith and kin, and a solace to his thousands of friends.

His life was gentle; and the elements
So mixed in him, that nature might stand up
And say to all the world, "This was a Man."

Poultry at the State Fair.

Considerable interest seems to have been awakened among breeders and fanciers hereabouts by the State Fair Poultry Show which will be held in Sacramento, August 31 to September 8. W. H. Hocking, secretary of the Los Angeles Poultry Association, informs the writer that between 300 and 400 birds will go from Southern California, and that he hopes to charter a car and accompany the birds both going and returning. In these exhibits San Bernardino, Redlands, Pomona, Downey, Van Nuys, Gardena, Alhambra, Pasadena and other localities will be represented.

The Rumpless Fowl.

We are indebted to The Feathered World (London) for the illustration shown on this page of a trio of Rumpless fowl, which are, to say the least, somewhat of a curiosity among breeds of poultry. It would seem from what Edward Brown says of them in his "Races of Domestic Poultry," that they are essentially a Belgian breed, although The Feathered World avers that the breed was at one time quite popular in Scotland, and especially in Arran, but that of late years they seem to have gone out of favor. It is said they are of varied colors and have black eyes with gray earlobes. The hens are reported to be good layers, hardy, but shy. It will be agreed that they present a unique appearance. We have never learned of their introduction in this country, and under present war conditions in Europe it would be somewhat hazardous to attempt an importation.

A Buff Minorca Record.

The egg-laying record of W. P. William's eight Buff Minorca hens is not only a testimony to the sterling qualities of the Minorca breed, but it again illustrates that intelligent feeding and management invariably give good returns. From June 1, 1917, to May 31, 1918, these eight hens produced 1627 eggs, or an average of 203 3-8 eggs per head; the weight per dozen ranged from twenty-seven to thirty-one ounces, giving an average of twenty-eight and three-quarter ounces. The weight of the hens varied from five and one-quarter to six and one-half pounds, affording an average of five and three-quarter pounds each; only four of the eight were broody during the year and these for only a short period. The feeding rations were of the average kind, with the addition of sprouted barley once a day, and all grain was fed in a heavy litter, thus affording plenty of exercise. Good sanitation, plenty of pure water and a favorable environment were additional factors which contributed much to the realization of such a fine egg record.

THE HOMECROFTER AND OLD HI-COST.

I was skirting along through the chapparal on the upper Manzanita trail a few evenings since, seeing if I could manage to turn up a young cottontail (for, just as Abraham Lincoln once said, "He that chops his own wood gets warmed twice," so likewise, he that shoots his own cottontail for dinner gets double measure for his expenditure of energy; he has both the sport and the eating.) And that's about the proportion of everything good in this life that comes to a homecrofter in California. The poor miserable cuss who wears his shoe leather out hunting for a job to get some money to send back to Camden, N. J., or Pittsburgh, Pa., to secure some Campbell's soup or Heinz's beans doesn't know anything about this 200 per-cent. life in the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers. He gets only about 5 or 10 per cent. of his applied energy back into his own life. The homecrofter gets more than a meal from his gardening. Along with gardening he acquires philosophy, science, religion, sport and the most delightful physical exhilaration, because a polished hoe handle is the best prescription in nature's laboratory.

The city job is all right, because a homecrofter needs money; and gardening for money is market gardening; it isn't homecrofting. A homecrofter swaps sometimes with his neighbors, but "he never sells nothing." The day when California manufacturers break away from the system of working hours that was instituted in a past generation to fit the conditions of rigorous climates, and give our employees here in California a system of three or four six-hour shifts instead of two or three nine-hour shifts we will begin to have a full realization of the surpassing economic strength of Southern California which is now latent. The working hours are really too long now to permit of intensive homecrofting by everybody. Most of the politicians tell us that we need more smokestacks and pay rolls, but let me tell you, folks, that if we continue to build smokestacks and neglect the gardens in Southern California we will find our haven of refuge soon becoming a Mooneyized, San Francisco type of town. Give us "smokestacks and gardens" as a campaign slogan.

ACRES? NO, FEET.

I have meandered a long way from that rabbit hunt on the upper Manzanita trail, but it was a kind of a meandering trip, anyhow. When I broke through the brush into Mission John's clearing I saw him and the Old Captain having a boisterous, though withal a jolly altercation of some kind. You know Mission John is no old Indian nor Spaniard. He is Irish. He is a poet. He writes editorial dope for the Loce Ahng-hayl-ais Times, all that stuff about the brood of the bald eagle that makes us cry and be glad our boy is "over there" even if he does get shot up. John is only an amateur homecrofter; but his shift of working hours is like everyone's ought to be, as I said before, and being a poet and likewise a homecrofter he's going to get a milch goat; and that's why he was putting his upper forty into alfalfa.

The Old Captain is no amateur, however, notwithstanding the fact he spent most of his life at the head of big manufacturing and banking institutions. The Captain, he is "book-learned." He plants his potatoes, using only his left hand, with the seed right side up, and always does the job in the dark of the moon; and, by jimminy, he is a go-getter in the potato game, always having six or eight big fellows averaging about seven inches long in each hill. But the Captain didn't sympathize with planting that upper forty to alfalfa in July because it was against the farmer's rule; and, of course, the Captain was right if it had been a regular forty-acre field out in some regular farming district. But Mission John's alfalfa came through with a perfect stand all right because he could give the right attention to only forty square feet despite the season or the conditions, demonstrating the elasticity of expert farming or gardening rules when applied to homecrofting.

SLACKER BEES EXONERATED.

Mission John says that some folks complain they didn't get a good flow of honey this summer and that he observes they make their bees travel too far for the feed. He has alfalfa within fifty feet of his bee hive and the bees can make several hundred round trips a day, while neighbor's bees, which have to fly two and three miles to find pasture, only make one or two trips a day. John lets the bees feed on the alfalfa blossoms, then he feeds the hay to his goat; he keeps the goat house floor sprinkled with gypsum every morning to conserve the full value of the manure; then he feeds that to his garden and the fruit trees, and life is just one round of rolling wealth for him. And Mission John has solved the problem of shade for the bee hives in summer without the trouble o

TRACTORS FOUND DEPENDABLE WHEN OPERATORS "KNOW HOW."

OF MORE than 600 tractor owners on representative farms in Illinois, who reported in a recent survey conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture, a report of which is published as Farmers' Bulletin 963, 54 per cent. stated that their outfits were not disabled a single day when needed during the entire season last year. Of the remaining 46 per cent. the average number of days their tractors were out of commission when needed was five. This average, however, did not include one man who stated that his machine was not usable about half the time.

The reports of the tractor owners indicate that with a careful and proficient operator a gas tractor is a very dependable source of power. Occasional slight delays probably will be encountered, but serious ones will be exceptional, whereas with a careless or incompetent operator expensive delays are apt to be frequent.

Of the tractors owned by Illinois farmers reporting, about 90 per cent. were operated by the owner or some member of his family, the best results usually being obtained by this class of operators. Thirty-six per cent. of Illinois owners reported no time lost in the field on account of trouble with the outfit. This probably means that the time lost was not worth mentioning. Most men do not consider it trouble so long as they know at once the cause of stoppage or other irregularity in the engine's operation, and are able to remedy it properly. The average time lost per day by the 46 per cent. reporting trouble is a little over three-quarters of an hour.

There is a steady and ever-increasing demand for trained tractor operators. More and more farmer buyers and owners are attending the power-farming schools. The war and the constant drawing of young men mechanics into the service opens the way for older men without a trade to enter an interesting, important and remunerative field. Those not mechanically inclined, however, should consider the matter carefully. A trained tractor operator should also be a "handy-man."

NOTICE THE DATE.

This year's demonstration will include many events totally new to the western rancher. In addition to the demonstrations there will be special entertainment features. Meals will be served on the ground so that the spectator can come early and stay late. A definite programme of events will be announced later.

Do not forget the dates, September 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21, and plan to arrange your affairs so as to be sure to attend every day of the meet.

Know your garden and make it produce a balanced ration.

SITE IS SELECTED FOR TRACTOR SHOW.

The growing importance of the tractor will be reflected in the coming demonstration of tractors and farm implements which will open one-half mile east of Los Angeles city limits on Whittier boulevard September 17 and will continue until September 21.

Over 150,000 spectators are expected to attend and preparations are now going on for the largest exhibition of tractors and farm implements ever held west of the Rocky Mountains.

According to officials of the Traction Engine and Implement Dealers' Association, over forty models of tractors will be displayed and demonstrated, the largest number ever brought together in the history of the industry in this section. Scores of up-to-date farming implements and accessories will also be exhibited. Big circus tests covering over sixty acres of ground are to be erected for housing the motor truck, automobile tire and automobile accessory dealers' displays. According to the committee in charge of the big demonstration, special events will take place each day of the meet, and it is important that the spectator attend every day.

The tractors will vary in size from simple attachments to huge machines of the caterpillar type. These tractors will all be operated under various conditions so that the prospective buyer will be able to judge which model is best suited to his particular needs.

MAKING ENSILAGE FROM SUNFLOWERS.

Experiments with sunflowers to determine their suitability for silage are being conducted in the Western United States by the Bureau of Plant Industry, in co-operation with State experiment stations. There are indications that this crop may be specially useful in regions where the growing season is too cool for the production of large yields of silage corn. The experiments were begun in 1917 at Huntley, Mont., and Scottsbluff, Neb., and the first year's results led the investigators to extend the work to other points this year. In 1917 the yields of sunflower silage exceeded those of corn silage in the same fields from 50 to 100 per cent. Yields of more than twenty tons per acre were obtained under irrigation. Preliminary feeding tests have indicated that the sunflower silage may be substituted satisfactorily for corn silage, but directly comparable results have not yet been obtained in sufficient volume to justify a full statement as to the comparative values of the two feeds.

CHEAP WEED KILLER.

One of the best and cheapest ways to control weeds on farms is to keep a flock of sheep. In addition to controlling weeds without cost, sheep will render a profit by producing nutritious food and wool, and will assist materially in meeting demands on the nation for meat and wool production. If weeds are not permitted to grow and develop leaves they will die, but it would require a great amount of hand labor to keep most weeds under control by this method. Sheep will keep the weeds down and the more weeds they eat the less will be their cost of upkeep, and the greater will be the supply of feed released for other stock. Many rough or permanent grass pastures that require mowing can be kept clean by the use of sheep, while at the same time the cattle-carrying capacity of the pasture is increased.

A BOY, A PIG AND A CALF MAKE WINNING COMBINATION.

A BLUE-RIBBON, "War Savings" pig is the four-months-old Duroc-Jersey belonging to Charles Glahn, a pig-club boy at Owensmouth, who expects to win even higher honors before the end of the feeding contest being held under the direction of the agricultural department of the [illegible], who is 11 years old and the son of N. M. Glahn, manager of the Ireland ranch, takes care of his pig entirely by himself.

The first triumph of this young pork producer was on the occasion of the local products fair at the Owensmouth High School in charge of J. W. Monroe, head of the agricultural work. The blue ribbon was awarded young Glahn for the best pig in the show, which was no small honor as the entire agricultural community was stirred to active competition in the patriotic food products exhibition. The fact that Charles won another first prize with his ten-months'-old Holstein heifer spurs his ambition to hold his high position as a stock grower against all comers. His steady occupation and principal recreation through the months of his summer vacation is the feeding of his pig.

The feeding contest began on May 23, strictly according to regulations. The amount of feed consumed, with costs, labor and incidental expense, is carefully kept. Charles was delighted to find that his pig had gained seventeen pounds by June 5, then weighing eighty-nine pounds. On June 13 it weighed 102 pounds, and since that day the gain has been so rapid that the young stockman is no longer able, with available scales, to devise a means of weighing the animal. He feeds all the green alfalfa the pig will eat and keeps before it at all times a mixture of grain and tankage in a self-feeder. Between times he feeds his pet all manner of enticing appetizers. The pig's part is to eat and grow, and his patriotic duty is performed most valiantly.

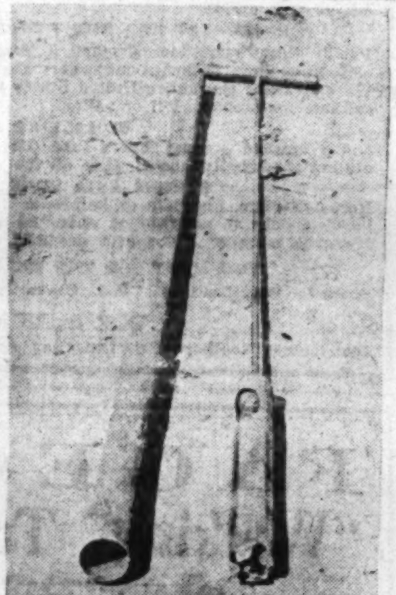
A SOIL SAMPLER.

For taking samples of soil to be used in making chemical analyses or to be tested for moisture content, the soil auger illustrated will prove of value. It is made on the order of a well drill. The pipe forms the casing through which the dirt is withdrawn. The cutting edges are so arranged that they retain in the lifting chamber practically all of the soil which is loosened by the twisting of the handle. Such an auger, judiciously used by a prospective purchaser, might prevent loss and dissatisfaction by acquainting him with the character of the soil and subsoil in each field or part of the farm which he had in view. The tool may be made by any handy-man or metal worker from odds and ends of pipe.



Handy soil-auger.

MORE ABOUT CATS.

That Puss has more than one champion is indicated by the following letter, recently received by the Farm and Tractor editor, following the publication of a discussion as to the merits and demerits of the cat on the farm:

To the Editor, Farm and Tractor Sec-

about cats on the farm. Mr. E. R. Parsons, in his book on farming, says: "Have only black cats; never feed them; never allow them in the house, if you want them to kill gophers."

Over twenty-five years ago I bought some land in the Antelope Valley. For a few months I was on it alone. One day a cat came and made a home in my barn. She never entered the house and I never fed her. One morning as I stepped out of my cabin I nearly trod upon a dead gopher. After that, every second or third morning, as long as I had the cat, I found a dead gopher on the doorstep. We had then, as we still have, birds of all kinds, with trees and running water on the land. The cats never trouble the birds. They sleep most of the day.

PATRIOTIC IDEALS FOR STOCK SHOWS.

That the Federal Food Administration indorses and approves all live-stock exhibits and features of any kind that tend to educate and promote the breeding and conservation of the best in live stock throughout the country has been repeatedly demonstrated. The letter quoted below, which has been received by Mr. Edgar J. de Pue, president of the California International Live-stock Show Corporation of San Francisco, from Federal Food Administrator Herbert C. Hoover, sets forth clearly his encouraging attitude.

"United States Food Administration,
Washington, July, 1918.

"E. J. de Pue, Esq.,
"San Francisco, Cal.

"Dear Mr. de Pue: I hear with great pleasure that a group of representative men has formed the California Live-stock Show Corporation. I am a firm believer that such enterprises not only further production in this country, but greatly improve the quality of production and have the utmost educational value in placing before producers national necessities and methods in their attainment. I wish you every success.

"Yours faithfully,
"[Signed] HERBERT HOOVER."

There is no doubt but that the breeding standards of California and the West can be improved, and it is the aim of the show corporation to impress this upon the breeders and stockmen of the State. During the present world conflagration the demand for meat-producing animals will continue to be relentless. The United States must also be ready to supply at the close of the war not only meat for domestic consumption and for export, but the foreign demand for breeding animals as well.

To this end all live-stock shows and exhibits will do their utmost to assist in the conservation of animals and food, and will include such educational features as lectures on the cuts of meat and economical buying, calculated to interest not only the stockmen and breeders, but the housewife. At the San Francisco show in November there will be many such interesting features and the housewife, who today does not know how to buy economically or cannot tell which cuts of meat are the best for certain purposes, will have an opportunity to acquire a valuable fund of knowledge.

In average value per head horses increased during the past year, $1.39; mules, $10.59; milk cows, $10.95; other cattle, $4.96; sheep, $4.69, and swine, $7.76, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

NEW INDUSTRY.

The dehydrating plant of the California Products Company, a firm of Japanese growers and business men, which has just begun operating on Channing street, between Eighth and Ninth, represents the initial step in a great future industry, according to the belief of those who have realized the tremendous waste in fresh vegetables and fruits. The agricultural department of the Japanese Association of Southern California, with headquarters at rooms 304-6 Equitable Bank Building, Los Angeles, estimates this waste at 40 per cent. of the $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 vegetable crop which, as their figures show, is annually raised in this district. Some 80 per cent. of the vegetable growers are said to be Japanese. The officers of the new company are: President, K. Sakamoto; secretary, S. Miura; treasurer, H. Aoto.

Solution of Problems of Small Farmer.

horse power, such as a churn, washing machine, cream separator or pump.

It goes without saying that a small tractor such as this or any other farm machinery for such purposes must be simple, not liable to get out of order, and economical to run. It should require few adjustments, be dust and dirt proof and of a design easily understood. For these reasons a single-cylinder gasoline engine is used, with a three-and-one-half-inch bore and a four-and-one-half-inch stroke; removable cylinder-head to give easy access to valves and for cleaning carbon; high-tension magneto; water cooling system with fan, and cellular radiator. All parts are dust proof and the moving parts run in oil. A gallon of gasoline is consumed during five hours' operation in the field or seven hours' use in driving machinery.

This is only one of many pieces of machinery that is being used by the small farmer to make his work easier, cut down his expense and help him to acquire greater efficiency. It will probably never be possible entirely to supplant the horse, but there is a tendency in that direction through the introduction of mechanical equipment.

A sheep-shearing contest will be an event at the State Fair this year.

BEANS, POTATOES, TOMATOES. TIMELY HINTS TO GROWERS.

By R. E. NEBELUNG, Assistant Farm Adviser, Los Angeles County.

DO YOUR tomato plants shed their blossoms? The editor has had a number of inquiries as to the cause of this annoying and costly garden difficulty. In this article Mr. Nebelung explains the mystery in an authoritative manner and gives some equally valuable "tips" on the management of beans during the period before the harvest. He also drops some hints concerning the second crop of potatoes, which no gardener or truck farmer should miss. Are you making the best use of the Farm and Tractor Section by clipping and filing for future reference such useful information as this?

The bean crop is now quite generally reaching the stage where further cultivation is impossible, due to the fact that the vines have grown together so that a cultivator cannot pass between the rows without doing considerable damage. The grower must use his own judgment as to whether another irrigation is advisable, realizing that he will not be able again to cultivate. If the soil has dried out considerably and it is his opinion that the beans will suffer for lack of moisture before maturing, it is advisable to irrigate again, even though there can be no cultivation following. If the beans are irrigated and cultivated just before the vines grow together they will have enough moisture to mature the crop. No water should be applied just at the time of bloom, as this tends to cause the blossoms to drop, but irrigation should be practiced just before or just after the bloom. For varieties which do not become so matted cultivation should be kept up practically until maturity, but should be rather shallow. All that can be done with dry-farmed beans at present is to keep up the cultivation as long as possible without injury to the plants.

POTATOES.

The potato crop which is of most concern now is the fall or second crop, which is being put in at the present time and will be planted until about August 20. Many growers have been debating whether or not to plant this crop, and no doubt the acreage will be somewhat reduced, which should be an added incentive for those who have the land to plant potatoes. The fall crop is much more difficult to grow than the spring crop, and several precautions should be taken before the grower puts his potatoes in the ground.

The first of these is to know if his soil is adapted to potatoes. The soil should be mellow and rich, and in texture should be a fine sand-and-silt loam. The heavier soils, with a tendency to bake, are not well adapted and should be avoided. The second precaution is to see that the soil is sufficiently cool. Planting "spuds" in a hot soil is sure to result in failure. As July and August are our hottest months, it can readily be seen that it is no easy matter to get the soil at the proper temperature.

The only way that this can be done is by sufficient irrigation before planting. A double irrigation is recommended—the first a week or ten days before planting time, amounting to a heavy soaking of the soil. The ground may then be plowed and worked into condition, and several days before planting should be irrigated lightly in furrows to cool the soil again. The potatoes should then be planted about seven inches deep. A slightly different procedure is to let the field alone after the first irrigation, and three or four days before planting time, depending on the kind of soil, again to irrigate, lightly; then plow and plant as quickly as possible. Dip all seed before planting for one and one-half hours in corrosive sublimate solution (one ounce to seven and one-half gallons of water.) It will be seen that the principal factor in planting is to have the soil sufficiently cool. Lack of this condition is undoubtedly the chief cause for complete or partial failure of the fall crop. The following of these directions, if the soil is kept sufficiently moist and is cultivated after planting, should result in a crop equal to the average spring crop and better than the one just harvested.

TOMATOES.

Owing to the fact that an unusually high price is being offered by the canners this season, the acreage of tomatoes has increased in Southern California. Tomato plants can now be found in nearly all stages of development—from those planted a few weeks ago to those bearing mature fruit.

Cultivation should be sufficient to keep weed growth down and to conserve the moisture supply, and should not be too close to the vines. Hoeing will have to be resorted to where weeds start close to the vines. Irrigation should be sufficient so that the plants will at no time suffer from lack of moisture, but it is very important that there be no over-irrigation at the time of blossoming, as a general dropping of the blossoms will be the result. If the soil becomes dry during the blossoming period a very light irrigation should be given, but great precaution should be used in applying water at this time. At all other times irrigation should be heavy, to a depth of three to five feet, to encourage deep rooting. Irrigation too late in the growth of the plant will result in a poorer quality fruit, watery, and in poor shipping condition.

In some sections tomatoes are grown without irrigation, especially when planted early in the season. Frequent cultivations and several hoeings are necessary with the dry-farmed crop, and by strict adherence to these methods of conserving moisture excellent yields may be obtained.

USING ROLLER BEARINGS.

One threshing machine manufacturer is now supplying, at an extra cost, high-grade roller bearings on the cylinder shaft and the blower shaft of the separator. No doubt many buyers will gladly pay for this improvement in separator design and will create a demand which will result eventually in the universal use of better bearings, not only in grain machinery, but in all farm machinery.

A prominent traction-engineer has made the statement that two-thirds of all the farm tractors now in use were made by one-fourth of the total number of manufacturers.

WHICH TRACTOR SALESMAN LIED? PERHAPS BOTH WERE RIGHT!

IT IS striking to note that two schools of automotive engineers are working in exactly opposite directions with almost equally good results on a tractor accessory which is now considered indispensable, but which, two or three years ago, was regarded as almost a curiosity. This is the air-clarifier, used to remove dust and grit from the air which is drawn into the carburetor.

Recent developments in design have been rapid, with the result that highly efficient cleaners of both types are now in use. One form of cleaner is known as the centrifugal type, which gives the air a swirling motion as it is sucked in and, operating on the same principle as a Babcock tester or cream separator, throws the heavy matter to the outside of the container. The air, being drawn from the center, is taken into the engine, dirt-free.

The other distinct form is the water-clarifier, or "air washer," by means of which the dust-laden air is forced or sucked through water and relieved of its grit.

Probably no single problem in tractor design has aroused such strong and varied opinion as that of protecting bearings and cylinders from the dust. It is now generally agreed that an air-clarifier of some sort is absolutely essential on the tractor, which works in dust a large share of the time. Early type tractors, not equipped with clarifiers, often used up two or three sets of bearings in a year. While the bearings then employed were probably not up to the standard of the high-grade type now incorporated in most standard tractors, still this excessive wear could be attributed only to dust and grit.

The prospective tractor buyer, already convinced that he must have a machine equipped with an air cleaner, notes with interest the arguments of the salesmen for the different makes, each of whom champions the type used on his machine, and seemingly proves the other kind far inferior.

The dealer who sells a machine regularly equipped with a centrifugal cleaner points out, as a disadvantage of the water type, that the latter forces the air through the water in bubbles which, even though quite small, are washed only on the outside and contain particles of dust which reach the engine. He also shows that if the air is thrown against baffle plates to break up these bubbles, a loss of power results and the object is not accomplished, anyway, because the bubbles will bound like rubber balls and will not be broken by the pounding they receive. He also points out that the water evaporates, and that the operator sometimes forgets to fill the reservoir, with the result that dust is sucked in and the motor damaged, whereas the centrifugal device is always effective, requiring little attention.

Seemingly convinced, the buyer then listens to the arguments of the other salesman and finds that "the centrifugal device cannot take out all of the grit and, although the heavy grit is removed, leaves the fine dust, which is just as injurious to the motor." This contention, however, is not admitted by champions of the centrifugal cleaner; they cite official tests, carried out with as many as twenty-five makes of clarifiers, the result of which demonstrated that a dry cleaner was the most efficient of all. One interesting experiment was conducted by a California manufacturer, with flour, which was chosen because of its palpable fineness. The centrifugal machine is said to have removed over 96 per cent. of the flour from the air. As a final shot at the "other fellow," the dry-air advocate points out not only that the water cleaner cannot operate efficiently if the air goes through in bubbles, but that no means can be devised for breaking them up entirely.

To this the opposing salesman immediately replies that several of the newer water cleaners actually do break up the bubbles to such a degree of fineness that an efficiency of over 95 per cent. is attained. One of the latest devices for accomplishing this result is a series of fine mesh screens through which, the air is forced with no loss of power to the engine. In fact, it is pointed out that the power is increased, because of the increased efficiency of moist air, as exemplified by the smooth running of a motor on a foggy day.

And when each salesman has proved that the other's device is "impossible," the bewildered prospect sees but one course; i. e., to conclude that both are wrong. On the other hand, when he recalls the arguments "for," he must confess that both were undoubtedly right. And his final determination is that there are decidedly two sides to the question.

The Homecrofter and Old Hi Cost.

moving them under trees. He plants the giant sunflower on the southeast, south and southwest sides of his apiary, leaving room for work on the other sides. The sunflower is a good honey pasture also, and, after getting started, makes an excellent climbing pole for Jersey pole lima or Kentucky Wonder beans. And, remember, the Captain is a poet!

Aside from the honey problem, the old Captain has dug himself in for the winter against the legions of want. As he says, he could build a stone wall around his acre and look over the top and tell the Kaiser to go to Jerusalem, if it wasn't for the sugar restrictions or his lack of honey. The Captain keeps house by the year. He knows now what he will need next March, "exactly, sir, exactly." He has a sunshine evaporator that even dries potatoes delightfully, not to mention raspberries, blackberries, figs and all kinds of fruits. It is a ten-dollar affair, and I must illustrate it here in the Farm and Tractor Section just as soon as I can have a picture made.

The Captain says we must bring up our food reserves to a high point against any emergency, just as Foch brings up his reserves and holds them against any turn in the tide of battle. These are the days when we need to "dig in" against the enemy, Want, and particularly must we learn how to do it now as against a possible serious time in our own land.

He builds upon sand who establishes a home in this land of marvelous soil and sunshine and then depends for his daily meal upon a telephone order to the grocery. A quake and fire in San Francisco broke that system down into a common bread line in ten hours. That disturbance was local. A social disturbance more general than that would intensify a thousandfold the broken system of living. And America is not old nor experienced in her social problems as yet! But most important of all is our duty to the boys at the front, that we feed ourselves and not buy foods which require the labor and transportation that should be applied to the greater efficiency of our war programme.

AUGUST PROGRAMME.

The first thing in August is to get ready for the great September planting of the garden that will likely grow by natural rainfall. Get the soil manured, plowed or spaded and thoroughly irrigated for the September planting of the all-winter-outdoor pantry. That means lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, onions galore, peas, turnips, beets, kohlrabi, spinach, celery and the like. If you get these planted the first week in September you will be the gainer. You can plant them any month after that, even in January, but you will not hit the right climatic combinations. Your main problem will be to get the ground soaked deep just as it is in the spring after a series of liberal rains. Then an important incident will be to sprout the seed successfully in September, because the top crust of the earth will get hot at that time and the tender sprout just coming through will get a bad jolt unless you are skillful. The safest thing is the burlap cover, of course, and that applies for August. We will probably take up this September garden planting more elaborately later, but have your ground ready on Labor Day and select your seed of the hardy winter staples.

For middle of August planting you might try some more wax beans if you like. Ventura wax is the surest variety as they will stand the cooler nights of October and November better than anything except the Canadian Wonders. But it is permissible to gamble with stringless greenpod in August, although it is a more tender variety and beans do not like chilly nights, which they may strike before they mature from a mid-August planting.

Now is the hour for starting the seed to make the main onion crop; and this likewise applies to cabbage, cauliflower and celery.

EXCHANGING SEEDS.

If you have a homecrofting club in your neighborhood you are doubtless exchanging seeds and plants. One person in a small neighborhood can grow all of these plants you all desire, including lettuce, but the lettuce and onions can both successfully be seeded in the row if you give them the right care in sprouting and cover them with burlap.

Among the August possibilities are tender plants such as sweet corn, egg plant, tomatoes and cucumbers. Their outcome will depend upon whether you have a protected foothill or a low valley climate to deal with. Some market gardeners make their first planting of Yorkshire Hero peas in August. I think September is better for peas. If you do not grow cabbage and cauliflower plants yourself you can get them from the seedsman in September.

If you have made up your mind that you are going to have a heavy outpouring of onions next spring, August is the time to get the seed rows started; sow thickly in the row and then transplant the green sets when they are about as large as a slate pencil. Sprinkle your lima beans while in bloom to take the place of ocean fog under which they thrive best.

The drying season will wind up in September with muscat grapes on your trays for raisins. You can spread these grapes in the sun at any point in California and they will cure into beautiful raisins with only the labor of turning the clusters once; but if you are near the coast, the fogs will injure your curing of raisins and of figs unless you cover the trays every night with newspapers, held in place against the wind by small stones.

Try "digging in" against the possible coming of Want. If you had gone in for two hives of honey bees this time one year ago, the sugar restrictions would have meant nothing to you now. If you start gardening the first week in September in the right way, with deeply soaked soil, you can get beyond Want in seventy days.

PTOMAINE POISONING OF HENS.

A. G. Goodacre of Compton, a licensed American Poultry Association judge and a member of the firm of Goodacre Brothers, says that ptomaine poisoning is quite frequent with poultry (under present feed conditions, especially,) and that he, as well as his neighbors at a loss to know what remedy to use, finally effected a cure with "Earth Salts."

Hens affected with ptomaine poisoning, he says, frequently lie on the side with the head stretched out, and are unable to stand up. Hens in his possession have been poisoned by the feeding of dry mash with decayed animal matter, such as fish meal.

Crowding of tomato plants, lack of sunshine and improper irrigation tend to dwarf the size of the fruit.

A Sawtelle Machinist who Rides a Peculiar Hobby.

Stunts with Beans.

PERHAPS it is because he is six feet four inches tall and dislikes stooping that Henry Stenerson of Sawtelle grows beans of the kinds made famous by the fairy story of "Jack and the Beanstalk." Whatever his motive, he has succeeded in producing a tremendous growth of vines giving an enormous yield of beans. From fourteen stalks of the Monstrous Lima variety, he recently harvested, over thirty pounds of beans. These beans have been producing continuously for more than a year, he asserts, having been planted in March, 1917.

"Some of my vines," said Mr. Stenerson as he exhibited sample runners, "have produced over 100 feet of suckers, and have broken down two-by-four supports set solidly in the ground." He pointed out one runner containing thirteen pods, all over four inches long and some more than six inches in length. Every pod was filled with beans. In spite of their size the beans are tender and palatable.

In order to produce yields of this kind, he points out, it is necessary to observe special care in irrigating. "I do not attribute my success to soil conditions nor seed selection but to the handling of the crop after the vines were above the ground," said Mr. Stenerson. His soil consists of medium heavy loam, about half way between sandy loam and adobe, and no fertilizer has been applied, the Sawtelle man says. He outlines his cultural methods as follows:

HOW HE DOES IT.

The beans are planted about three inches deep in a carefully prepared seedbed, not worked down to dust-mulch, but of medium fineness. As soon as they are about three inches high, the earth is pressed firmly down around each vine. The plants are not irrigated until the leaves assume a dark green color; as long as they are yellowish or light green no water is applied. Subsequent irrigations are given according to the leafcolor entirely. Whenever the leaves become dark, which, on Mr. Stenerson's land, is about once a month, a gentle, but thorough application of water is made. No weeds or leaves are allowed to remain under the plants, which are trimmed as they grow over the supports, so that the air can circulate freely underneath the vines.

His beans were sprayed twice for aphids with rosin soap solution (one pound of soap to five gallons of water.) He asserts that this treatment completely destroyed the pests.

HIS FREAK WALNUT.

In addition to his freak beans, the Sawtelle experimenter, who is a machinist by trade and follows gardening as a hobby, claims to have produced nine-pound parsnips, four feet long. He also has a black walnut tree, which although only walnut tree, he says, which although only four years old, has a diameter of five inches at the bottom and is twenty feet high, having grown six feet each year for the past three years. As the black walnut is known to be ordinarily a slowgrowing tree, the methods used to force this quick development are worthy of note.

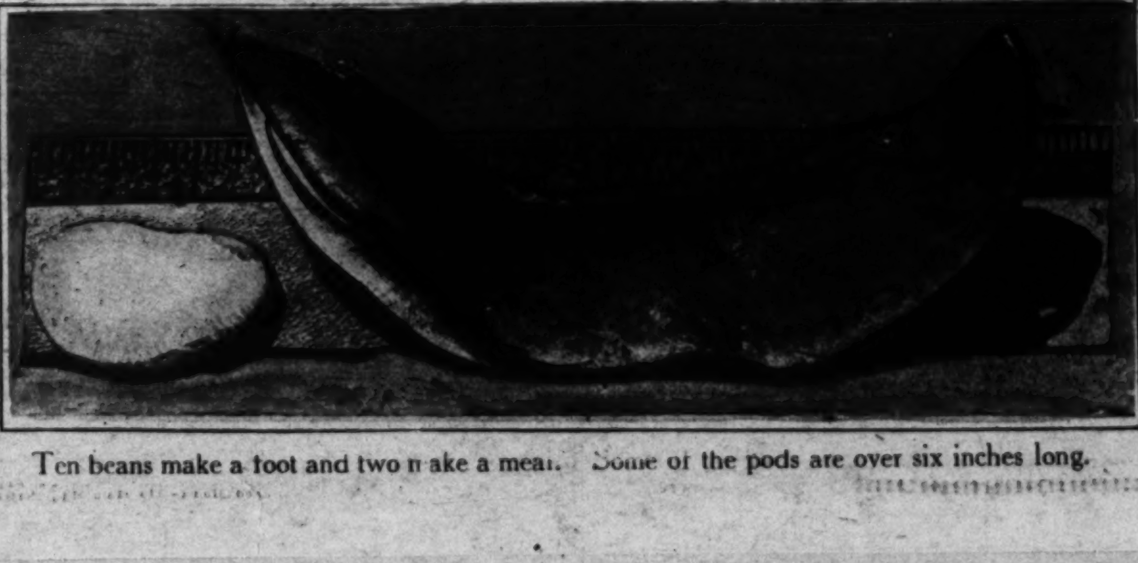
The tree was grown from a seed, planted by himself four years ago, Mr. Stenerson says, and he asserts that the tree was forced merely by giving it great quantities of water, not applied near the base of the trunk, but from six to eight feet away from the tree. The limbs, however, developed in a peculiar manner, growing downward instead of upward or straight out as is usually the case. Although this habit of growth did not affect the bearing qualities of the tree, which, he asserts, has already produced a large quantity of nuts, it marked the tree as a "freak." Whether it is naturally so, or whether the excessive watering caused it to grow in this manner Mr. Stenerson is not prepared to say.

The trunk of this black walnut tree grew so rapidly that the limbs inclined downward instead of upward. Although only four years old, this seedling tree is over twenty feet high and now bearing.

The beans grew so large the second year that it was necessary to brace the two-by-four supports, two of which were broken by the weight of the foliage.

Everything grows fast in Sawtelle.

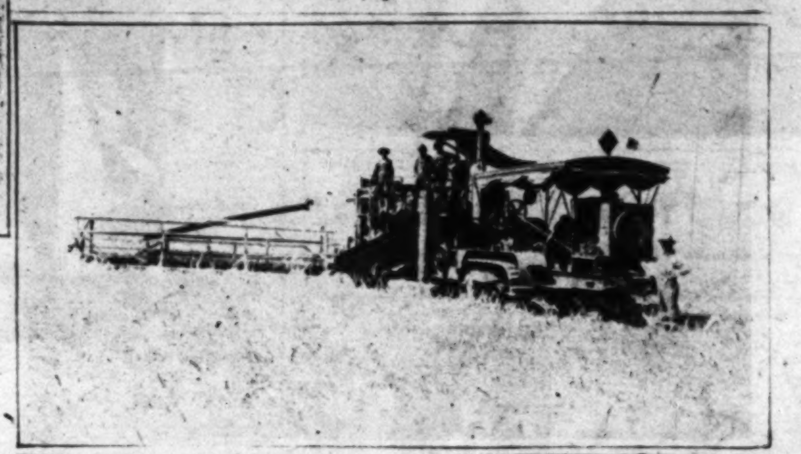
The man [illegible] four, and the beans are enormous, and the story is a whopper.



Ten beans make a foot and two make a meal. Some of the pods are over six inches long.

War-Time Saving. Field to Sack in One Operation.

The picturesque mule team, "herded" by a California "skinner," than whom there is none more expert, is rapidly giving way to the tractor-drawn or self-propelled combine. The ten mules here illustrated were displaced by the tractor shown at the foot of the page.



This Holt combine belongs to a "Country Gentlewoman," Mrs. G. W. Mathers of Beaumont, who assumes the active management of her 1500-acre ranch

In addition to the above type, the Holt company now manufactures the self-propelled harvester and thresher which is here illustrated working on a side hill. This machine sells for but a small sum more than the regular tractor

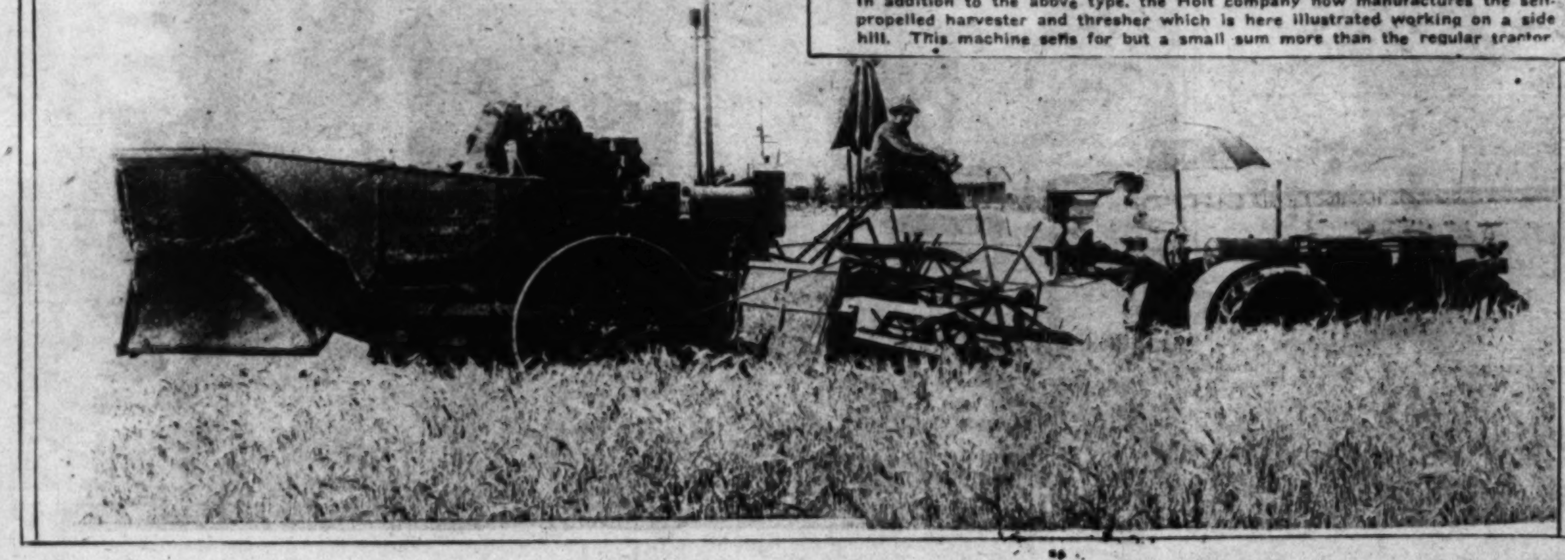
Everyman's "Combine" a Realization.

IN MARKED contrast to the staccato barking of machine guns in No Man's Land, sometimes marking a ghastly path for the grim reaper, is the rattle of hundreds of engines and harvesters in America's great grain fields, where the peaceful reapers are busily at work helping to supply Pershing's crusaders and their brothers-in-arms with necessary food.

The rapid increase in individual ownership of tractors, together with the labor shortage and the stress of war demands, has hastened the culmination of the plans of several manufacturers to place upon the market combined harvesting and threshing machines of handy size, requiring but a small crew and capable of being operated with a tractor or with a self-contained power unit.

Near Redondo, on the 800 acre barley ranch operated by R. E. Haslam, one of the new Holt self-propelled "Combines" is in daily operation, cutting and threshing thirty to forty acres a day. This remarkable machine, representing a new type sold generally for the first time last year, requires a crew of only three or four men and has been known to effect a saving of from $5 to $6 an acre in threshing and harvesting expense. It sells for but a small sum more than a regular "Caterpillar" tractor of the same power. It is adapted to both bulk and sack methods of handling the grain. The straw is dumped in piles and the chaff may be separated and distributed evenly along the ground behind the machine.

Another type of machine, of especial interest to owners of tractors, is now made by the International Harvester Company. A "McCormick" Combine, manufactured by this concern has been in successful operation in the Hemet Valley, where a Samson tractor displaced ten mules as the motive power and is now cutting twenty-five acres of barley a day. This machine is very compact and of big capacity, making it possible for the tractor and a crew of three or four men to do work formerly requiring a big string of horses and twelve or fifteen men, and to do it better and much more rapidly.



This outfit has been harvesting and threshing twenty-five acres of barley a day in the Hemet Valley, doing nearly 50 per cent. more work than when drawn by mules. Only a small crew of men is required.

HARRY CARR, EDITOR.

Twentieth Year. Volume XVI. No. 32.

What's Over Yonder?

THERE are really only a comparatively few among the people of the world who do not believe that there is another life beyond the grave. For the man who has given the subject deep thought and who still holds to the belief that the grave ends all, we have a certain respect. But for the man who has given no time to an investigation of either the facts or the traditions that go to support the belief that we live again, we have little patience. He is merely an opinionated ass.

There was a time—and it was not long ago—when almost the whole noisy school of scientists jeered at the idea of the immortality of the soul. But this is not true now. There is no scientist of repute who will any more positively deny that the spirit of man lives on after his earthly body returns to the dust from whence it came.

It being now the general belief of people, as it has been through all the ages, that when we die we enter upon another life, unseen yet of actual existence, surely there is no one who does not sometimes pause to wonder what that other life will be like.

The very thought of it makes of death the greatest of all adventures. To go upon any other journey, to go forth to the wars, to make a try at anything else hitherto untried—all this is tame and tawdry compared to the journey that takes us out of our earth-worn bodies into the infinite land of the spirit.

So, notwithstanding the activities of this life, its cares, its worries and its ambitions, we find ourselves awed with the wonder of what that life is like that waits for us over yonder beyond the shadows of the night.

Among the poets and the sages who have striven to pierce the twilight with anxious eyes, none of them has, perhaps, expressed his feeling with more expressive words than William Winter:

"One pang—and I shall rend the thrall
  Where grief abides,
And generous death will show me all
  That now he hides;
And, lucid in that second birth,
  I shall discern
What all the sages of the earth
  Have died to learn."

It is the orthodox Christian belief, as it is also the belief of other creeds and faiths, that we shall be reunited with those who have gone before us—the loved and lost who were torn from us in the mystery of what we call death.

If a man holds a belief like that, how can the grave have any terrors for him?

There is, too, the fascination of the thought that we shall behold the great figures of history when we awake in the shadow land. Socrates, Shakespeare, Noah, Moses, Dante and Don Quixote riding his faithful charger.

Will it be like returning home after long absence? Will old friends and old companions be waiting for us there with the handclasp and the embrace of other days?

It is a consuming thought. Dull, indeed, and made of clay, is he who does not search the stars for answer to it all.

Baths and Bathers.

WE KNOW a man who is making a good deal of fuss because he has invented a splashless bathtub. We think he should be taken in hand by the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noises.

It is nothing, this splashless bathtub. If he had invented, say, for instance, a slipless bathtub, he might be entitled to some attention. The accident insurance companies have a perfectly appalling list of persons who have come to their deaths or who have sustained severe injuries by slipping in bathtubs. One can easily break his neck that way, particularly if one soaps the bottom of one's feet before stepping in.

In Shakespeare's time, baths were rarely resorted to. And that was the real high-brow era. Which has led an observer to say that in those days of glittering intellectuality folks let their bodies go dirty, but they kept their minds clean. While now we keep our bodies clean, but we have dirty minds.

The iconoclasts of history have proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that King James, in whose honor a popular edition of the Bible was named, washed his face only once a year. And it is equally as well established that Queen Elizabeth took a bath only twice a year, and then screamed and had to have a doctor. In this connection it may also be recalled that Elizabeth was referred to as "the virgin queen."

It may well be that we have carried this bathing fad too far in these days. You know, there is a good deal of rheumatism and bronchitis and all that sort of thing. Anyway, the safest way to bathe is to stand out in the back yard on level, solid ground and spray yourself with the garden hose.

The Way to Play on It.

THAT dear, old, impossible pagan whose ebullitions come out the Arroyo Seco somewhere between the mountains and the sea, in a lame attempt at grouch, sends out the pronouncement that "We have California, but we don't know how to play on it."

Now, it seems that different people have different notions as to how to make the most of California, just as they have different notions about heaven.

But, let us tell you what our idea of California is.

Our idea of California is a $100 house and a $1000 automobile. That kind of a house is sufficient, because you don't need much of a house, if any, in California.

With the auto, everything else is yours from Pelican Lake, zigzag, all the way down to Calexico. The big trees, the waterfalls, the tules, the orchards and the meadows, rich men's gardens and desert wild flowers, white sea reaches and mountain peaks of snow, sun, moon and stars.

That's the way to play on it.

REQUIEM.

When I have had my little day,
My chance at toil, my fling at play,
  And in the starry silence fall
  With broken staff against the wall,
May someone pass, God grant, that way,
And, as he bends above me, say:

"Good night, dear comrade, sleep you well,
Deep are the daisies where you fell;
  I fold your empty hands that shared
  Your little all with them that fared
Beside you in the rain and sun—
Good night, your little day is done."

Or, when my little hour has sped,
When night comes, and 'tis time for bed,
  The window closed, and locked the door,
  And I lie down to wake no more,
May some one, at the break of day,
That comes to rouse me, wait to say:

"Farewell, dear comrade, mine no more:
A bird is singing at your door,
  And all the highways are athrong
  With steps you lightened with your song;
They come to call you from your bed
Farewell, your little hour is sped."

JOHN S. McGROARTY.

Run for Office.

WE ARE glad to note that so many men are running for office this year. We wish there were more. Every man should run for office at least once in his lifetime.

The reason every man should run for office, at least once, is that he will then find out a lot about himself that he never knew before, and also because he will know at last who his friends are.

Robert Louis Stevenson said that if a man can say that he has six true friends he may congratulate himself. Perhaps R. L. S. overstated the number. Nor is this an expression of pessimism. It is a big thing to count that many people who will go the limit for you, and a friend is no friend unless he will do just that. All others are acquaintances, more or less well disposed toward you

Now, if you run for office, you will discover the six and the others.

Moreover, your life history will be dug up and paraded before your face. You will be surprised to learn that it is a matter of general history that you threw your grandmother down a well, and that you once secretly had two pairs of suspenders at the same time.

You will experience all the pleasant sensations that beggars must experience, as you go from door to door in the mendicancy of appealing for votes.

And last, but not least of the things that will happen to you, between your start and your finish, you will have spent more money than the office will bring you, even if you shall have the misfortune to be elected.

For, nowadays, a man must run twice for office—at the primaries and again at the regular election.

No poor man can afford to do it.

Good-by Romance.

MORE men have become suddenly rich in this country in late years than ever before, especially in California, which has been pre-eminently the land of fortune since the days of the Argonauts when the gods made bonanza kings out of beggars over night.

Men are making fortunes out of just beans in California, not to speak of oranges and other fruits of the soil.

Then when you go over the list and come to "striking oil" in the literal sense, you come across one man after another whose story reads like the tales of Aladdin's lamp.

Take, for instance, that man So-and-So who lived in Such-a-Place. You remember that two or three years ago he actually had to count the frijoles at night in order that he might be sure there would be enough for breakfast. Now, his income is $25,000 a month; and there is another man whose income is actually that much a day.

But, do you hear of these men doing the "Coal Oil Johnny" act? You do not. Do you see them throwing their money around like drunken sailors and buying out barrooms for the mere pleasure of discharging the bartenders? Positively no.

Instead of that, these darlings of the gods are investing their magically accumulating funds in Liberty Bonds, business blocks and first mortgages. They are blossoming out into bank directorships.

It seems, alas, that the age of romance is past. We have settled down in the safe and sane prosaic age of making the most of today and getting a cinch on tomorrow.

The Road to Yesterday.

IT IS a good road to travel, now and then—the road to Yesterday. It will lead to many a rusty wine bush where life's happiest hours were spent.

Sometimes there is no other place for the heart to find balm for the wounds and scars that the years have thrust upon it. If the road be lost, it were well to search around and find it again.

It may be that we shall stumble upon the memory of tears there. But, even so, is it not sweeter to remember than it can be to forget? Still there will be more of laughter than of tears to wait for us when we take the road to Yesterday.

We shall find there the dreams that came true, and the still brighter dreams that faded and never came true at all. We shall warm ourselves at old firesides and meet again the souls of lost sweethearts. We shall feel again old handclasps; we shall hear the winds in the pines and the music of running waters.

This gold that is in our hands today, or that we shall clutch at tomorrow, what is it compared to the gold of the heart that we left behind us on the road to Yesterday?

Sister France.

IT IS AT great cost, of course—hundreds of thousands of her sons slain in battle—but France will be a very prosperous and wealthy country, after this war.

She will have Alsace and Lorraine back. She will have new harbors equipped with miles of warehouses, new and first-class railroads, all of which America built and will doubtless leave behind as a present to her, not to speak of the possible cancellation of her financial indebtedness to us. Germany will have to pay her a huge indemnity. She will be the tourist mecca of Europe with millions of that kind of easy money fairly showered upon her.

God knows it is not to be begrudged her. She has suffered unspeakably. And she has borne her sufferings with a bravery and nobility beyond the expression of all words. She has covered herself with immortal glory.

Also, she will be the boon companion of this, the greatest of the nations, with all that means, for there is evidence that the traditional friendship between France and America will be tremendously strengthened in an unlooked for way, which is that a lot of our boys "over there" are coming home with French wives.

You Are an Heir.

WE LIKE to preach the doctrine of contentment. Now, there is no man so content as the man who is heir to a great estate, and you are heir to the greatest estate that ever was, namely, the whole earth. Once the earth was owned in common by all the people. Well, are you not an heir of the original owners? It is nothing at all to own just a little corner of the world and no more. All of it is yours if you have eyes to see, ears to hear and the heart to feel.

God Help Us.

SOME one has said that "Art is the measure of civilization." If that be true, God help us here in America, just now, at least as far as one particular form of art is concerned.

The art of the drama is what we have reference to. It is in danger of being pounded into pulp by brutal thugs. Here and there, it is true, a faithful votary is found blowing a wearied breath upon smoldering embers in the effort to keep alive the drama's divine flame. But, against that, stand the mercenary commercialists who know a theater only as an institution whose main feature is the box office built into the entrance, and as near the sidewalk as possible.

SOME OF THE FRIENDLY SUBMARINES.

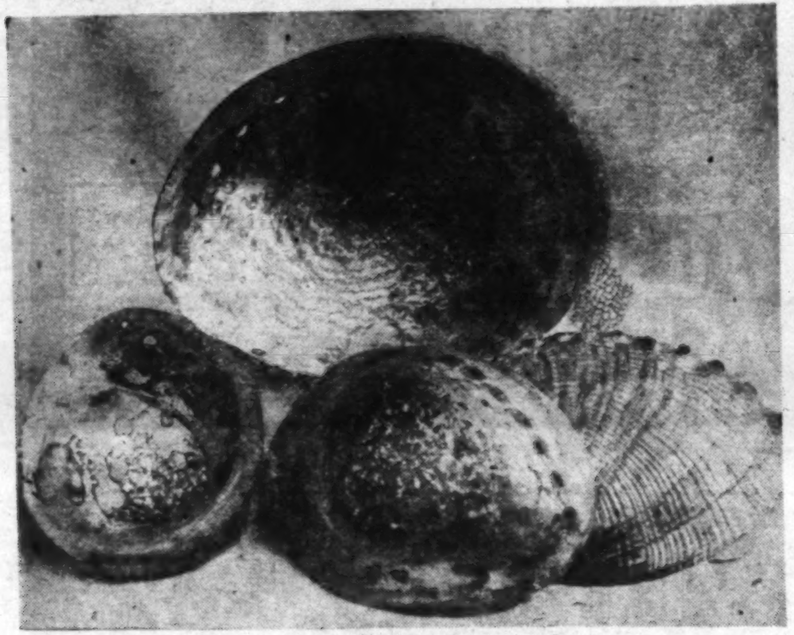
BY CHRISTINE F. SCOTT.

THE first shell we pick up on the summer beach is almost sure to be a wave-washed scallop.

"The tiny shell is forlorn,
Void of the little living will
That made it stir on the shore."

Empty, broken-hinged and mateless, the little derelict drifts in with the kelp-filled tide. Caught in its tangled ropes and meshes of seaweed it has sailed with wind and surge on the narrow rim of the sea until a crashing billow has flung it free and unfettered upon the low sands. Half-pathetic it seems, lying like an anchorless craft, with pilot and captain at the bottom of the great blind sea. Gray gulls, with the salt spray on their white bosoms, peck disdainfully at its fluted lip bare of its one-time delicate morsel.

The perfect contour and beauty of the escallop shell and the untaught knowledgo of the simple architect who builds and tenants it is a part of the eternal mystery of the sea, at once so wildly full of exhilaration and exulting and anon so jewel-blue the level universe is sapphire tinted.



Abalones, California's rainbow jewels.

The scallop (Pecten) belongs to the large class of headless bivalve (two-piece shell) mollusks called Polecypods. In this order are about 200 species of scallops beside oysters, clams, mussels and cockles, etc.

The principal features of the mollusca are that their bodies are not broken into separate parts, and that they are supplied with a fibrous foot which is their pilot, compass and log on every perilous voyage. Some of the species have eyes, many or few, a mouth with sharp teeth, organs of digestion and of sense.

The scallop is abundant upon almost every sea beach and in his dispersement is known to all the world, which recognizes him in his mansion of three inches in diameter as well as when domiciled in a gauzy tent of less than an eighth of an inch. Near-shore waters or shallow banks are the favorite abodes of the scallop, but some are found, totally blind, in the darkness of deep abysses. Being socially inclined, the scallop not infrequently makes excursions to neighboring resorts.

By the use of the strong adductor muscle and resilient ligament which at the beak holds the two shell valves together, the scallop is enabled to open and close the valves of his shell, drawing in and expelling the water as he paddles along. As the muscle contracts a stream of water is forced out from under the ear. This motion throws the dauntless swimmer forward in a straight course of three feet or more.

About the edge of the body is a bright colored fringe, or mantle, as it is called, which hangs loosely and unattached to the valve. This mantle secretes from the water the line with which it constructs the little bungalow, building it steadily from the outer edge as the growing form demands more space. Thus the young builder protects its boneless body from the turbulence and the mineral deposits of the water and makes an impervious mask for his own defense.

Along the edge of the mantle is a row of red or green metallic eyes and numbers of thread-like feelers. The eyes are supplied with an optic nerve and are the most perfect eyes of any bivalve mollusk.

On the inner part of the shell at the beak, is a small notch through which the foot passes; it is also the passageway of the byssus thread or cord which the scallop spins in youth to attach itself to sea grasses and even to the bottom of the sea itself.

The fingerlike foot picks up the secretions of the byssus gland and with them weaves the byssus cord at pleasure. The adductor or working muscle is used extensively in many places for food. When cooked it is tender and white and far superior in flavor to the oyster. In turn the scallop fills the bill of fare for bass and cod and other fishes. His own eating consists mostly in the animacula the sea washes through his open valves.

The scallop eggs are dispersed upon the water where they are quickly developed into a hungry living swarm fully at the mercy of a hungrier throng of larger mariners.

There does not seem to be anything lacking when we critically analyze the scallop and note its beauty points. As early as the fifteenth century its artistic values were recognized in historic ornamentation; emblems and ensigns and armorial bearings were then embellished with its graceful lines.

An incomparably handsome shell is the "ear" or "Aurora" shell, known on the Pacific Coast by the name abalone and belonging to the marine gastropods of the family Haliotidae. When cleared of its outside limey coat the whole shell is of mother-of-pearl, reflecting every light and shadow of the iridescent glory of sky and wave; their moods of gray melancholy, of misty tenderness, their effervescence of fire and rose are all inwrought in the nacre of its casement.

Could the small master-builder wielding his ungainly trowel in the trough of the sea have ever thrilled with the foreshadowing delight his labor was to bring to the whole world? His sculpturing does not come under the ban of the poet's rhyme because the luster of his shell remains.

"I brought sea-born treasures home,
But the poor, unsightly, noisome things
Had left their beauty on the shore,
With the sun and the wind and the wild uproar."

The abalone is a univalve, or one-piece shell, ear-shaped and shallow with the left side perforated with a circling row of holes.

The muscle scar is large and is indicated by the pearly appearance of the inner lining where the active foot muscle is attached. It also has a mantle whose fringe is broken into parts along the row of openings, and through the openings, or holes, passes out long feelers which carry off the water that has poured over the gills. In young shells the open holes are not found; they gradually appear as the shell grows but the holes do not tell the number of his years.

The abalone is supplied with two tentacles which are placed near his two eyes gleaming at the ends of short stalks, upon the head which is located at the shell's edge where the holes end.

Most at home on rocky shores the abalone feeds ravenously upon seaweeds or any vegetable life he can find. He has a long slender tongue oulined with strong teeth with which he rasps and tears his food to pieces. His unusually heavy broad foot is under the spiral. This foot is his rudder of locomotion and by its aid he flounders along the shore or over the rocks in grotesque imitation of some prehistoric monster.

Large sea birds and ocean rats are his sworn enemies and to escape them his dust-colored coat is a good protection and his one foot is another; with a tiger-grip he clutches the rocks in times of danger and fortifies himself against the fiercest assaults. These enemies are not his only ones or his worst foes, for the toothsomeness of his edible foot has long excited the cupidity of the Orientals from across the Pacific who have had to be legislated against for their wholesale slaughter of him. The foot they salted and dried and canned and shipped by the tons, and from the shells they made numberless beautiful things, inlaid work, buttons, etc. Green pearls they found, too, embedded in the abalone mantles.

The abalone is widely distributed among the waters of the globe and the mother-of-pearl of its shell is an article of commerce. The largest and finest shells are gathered on our western coast, while in Australian seas are found a large number of different species, each in its way a work divine.

"The Red Slayer."

No Man's Land. He picked out prone abjects and compressed his lips as he saw them galvanize into life and then fall to death.

The few raiders who escaped back through the German barbed-wire lanes had abandoned their prisoners and their booty. They gave the position of the machine gun and its hellish fire to the commander. Spotting shots of high caliber crashed close to the culvert. Red Slayer drew back like an animal in its den. He was satisfied with the turn of affairs. He remembered thinking about Stockbridge and Flannagan and Goodwin, when a shell better aimed than the others struck squarely overhead and exploded within the concrete. A roar was followed by a rack and a convulsion. He rolled over, spread out his hands and slept with the blood pouring from his ears.

His awakening was a nightmare of aching limbs and whirling senses. The dawn was breaking over No Man's Land. The barrage fire had ceased. The crumpled heaps of men where the machine gun had struck still lay with their faces up to the sky.

Red Slayer wormed his way out of the shattered culvert, then crawled back over the trail he had taken to reach the snipers. He reached the first of the American barbed wire. A lane showed there which had been blasted by the German shells. Down this he went, reached upward and lifted himself to the parapet of new-laid sandbags. He fell over in a heap.

A muttered challenge greeted him. A score of forms hurled themselves upon him. He called the password as a bayonet pressed to his chest.

"It's Red Slayer!" went along the line of alert Americans behind the wall. Stockbridge, badly battered but game, came forward. He stooped, wiped Red Slayer's face with his handkerchief, then called for stretcher-bearers.

Red Slayer rose at this, steadied himself on one knee and then stood erect and saluted.

"Good boy!" said Stockbridge. "The general's been asking about you—wants you back in the field headquarters. Wouldn't be surprised if he had something waiting for you."

Red Slayer stumbled along the dusk of the communicating trench. He turned at Stockbridge's dugout.

"I'll fix up a bit before I go to the general's," he said with a glance at the waiting flivver and the grinning driver.

Stockbridge nodded. We watched Red Slayer stride to the shelters under the first trenches. He did not see that the Indian had reached in his shirt, taken out a bundle of matted blond hair and dried scalps and pushed this deep within the soft earth at the back of the shelter.

THE FAT MONS. LAFARGE—HERO.

BY HUGO AMIDA.

NOTE: This is the first of a series of three true war stories written for The Times by a British officer who has seen service in various armies as a soldier of fortune, in China, South Africa and the Great Sahara Desert and who was already a war-worn veteran in point of experience if not in years when Europe burst into flames in 1914. He was invalided after two or three years service in France and is now in Los Angeles recovering his health. Another story by Mr. Amida will be printed in an early number of this magazine.—[Ed.

I LAY on a couch in a palace. This was unwonted luxury to me, who have fared rough during my entire life. Fared rough by choice as the back parts of the earth and the life of an adventurer seemed to draw me out of any settled or permanent occupation almost before I knew I had entered such.

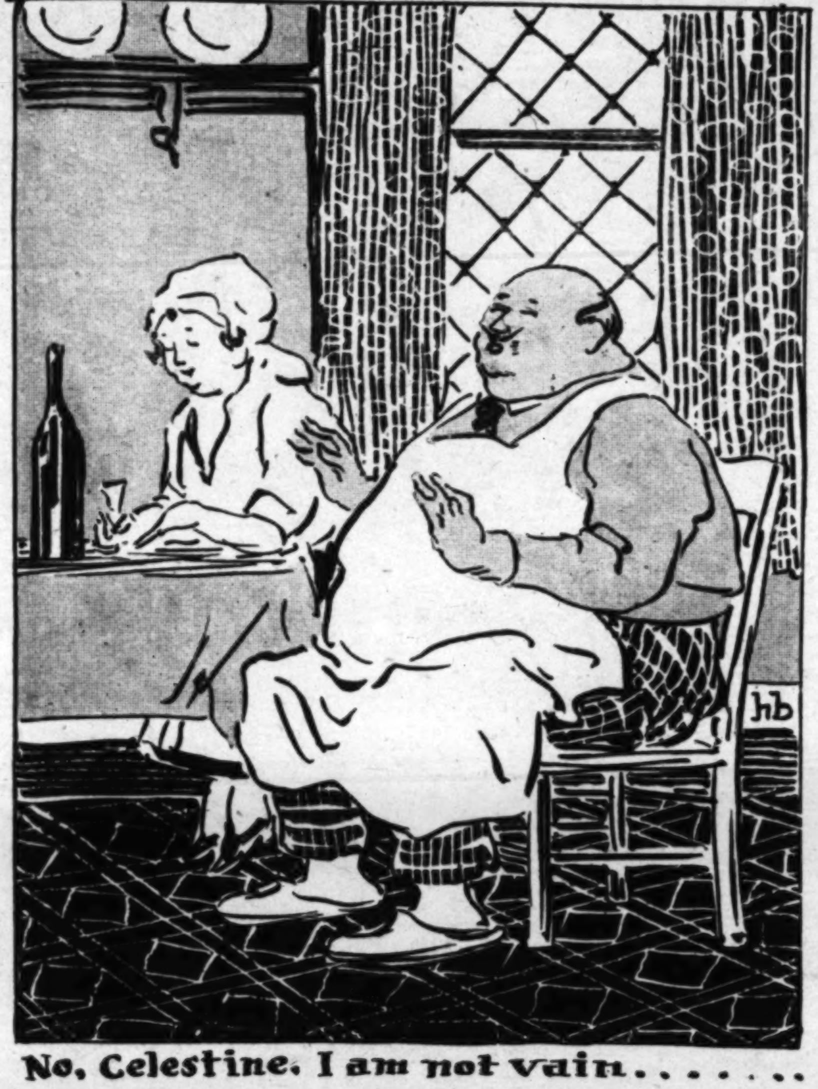
This palace dwelling, however, was not a matter of choice. My previous recollection was of a particularly hot corner at Festubert where I had rejoined my old Canadian friends and after several days and nights of continuous fighting had reached the third German trench. But for the fatal shortage of munitions it seemed as if we could have kept going to Berlin. I was coming out of one of the German concrete dugouts (which were then so new to us and which were the cause of much mirth to the Canadians, who dubbed them rat-holes, and took an unholy joy in rooting out the human rats who had treated the captured Canadians so inhumanly but six weeks before at the battle of Second Ypres,) when in a second everything went black. A roaring commenced in my ears like one of the big circular saws in the Vancouver lumber mill which I had so often watched while guiding the carriage with its six foot Douglas fir aboard.

Was the battle finally over and where were the rest? These problems were solved, and my weary head replaced on a pillow, a real pillow, ye gods, by a lady who came from behind me, a lady in the uniform of a French sister, the touch of whose hand alone was healing. I lay there in absolute content, content to watch her straighten white sheets over me, and not caring to know anything, only that I was not mad.

One day, after I had been about six weeks in the hospital and was then able to sit up though wrapped in plastered bands like old Rameses himself, I noticed from the window a Ford motor car with a covered hood and the Geneva Red Cross painted on it. The driver was waiting while a blesse was being received and from a familiar sight of a linen packet of tobacco (then only used by Americans) I thought I might hail him in English. To my "Hello, Yank," his face lit up and he jumped the five foot iron railing round the garden. "Where are you from?" was of course his query. "Los Angeles," my rejoinder. "I'm from Santa Barbara, over here to finish an arts course and now I'm piloting a flivver round the shell holes." I had heard a great deal of the American Ambulance Corps at Neuilly and their fine work in driving right out into the thick of the fight and picking up their loads direct from the field ambulances. Jerry was certainly a fine type of American boy and the following Sunday saw him by my cot with a big bunch of flowers and a roll of California papers.

I did not expect to see him after this until the next Sunday when he had a few hours off duty, but on Tuesday he showed up with his right arm bandaged and in a sling. "Stopped one of Fritz's slivers with my mitt," was his explanation, "so now I've come to take you for an outing." Jerry had dug up somewhere a chaise roulant, formerly used by lazy sightseers at the Grand Palais Salon, and in a short time had jollied Dr. Le Mesurier into allowing me to see Paris in a fiacre particulier, under Jerry's guidance. The chaise was brought in and, after a lot of wrapping up and adjustment of pillows under broken parts, we set out on our voyage of discovery, my heart alive with excitement after the long confinement indoors.

"Where would you like to go," asked Jerry, "to the Bois?" "Oh no, not to the Bois," said I, as there was a certain chance of meeting some of the nurses from the hospital and I was simply aching for a cigarette and so sought a safer locale. "We'll explore some of the side streets," and when half way down the Rue de Ville Just I told Jerry to stop in a little alcove at the apex of two lanes, just in front of a small butcher's shop. Here Jerry produced his bag of Durham, which I had dreamed of for two nights, rolled a cigarette, lit it and stuck it in his mouth. "Come on, Jerry, roll another and give me that one." "Nothing doing," said Jerry, and in the midst of the friendly altercation out of the shop came the patron, in the friendly way of the Frenchman, to see if he could aid in the dispute. Wow, but he was a fat fellow! He fairly filled the door of his shop and the only comparison I can make is to say that Fatty Arbuckle, whom I saw at a cinema some time later, would look like a boy beside him. When the matter of the tobacco dispute was explained to our fat friend he dived under his blue apron and hauling out a packet of caporal, lit one and handed it to me. "I know the need of a blesse for tobacco, in spite of what the doctors say, as I could not smoke for two months after my own wound," was his remark. I looked at his tremendous bulk, and said, "Well, it has been a long time since you soldiered, and fate has been kind to you since then."



No, Celestine. I am not vain. . . . . .

"No, no," said he, "I got hit in this war and my service is completed."

"Got hit fighting in this war," said I. "Holy heaven, man, what on earth were you doing to get in the zone? But perhaps you were hit in the Zeppelin raid last winter?"

"No, I was at the front as a private."

"Now, look here, mon brave, you can't kid us that way," broke in Jerry, "we can swallow a certain amount but we cannot swallow a whale."

"Well, look at this," said the butcher, and undoing his blue apron and his waistband he showed us what was certainly the track of a bullet through the stomach.

"Now, tell the truth," said Jerry, "didn't you get that making love to one of your neighbor's wives, for you can't make that soldier story go down with us."

"Celestine, Celestine," bellowed our friend, and madame came out on the street to inquire what was the matter.

"Celestine, these messieurs make pleasanteries at the idea of my doing service in this war against the Boche. Tell them if it is not so."

"Oui, oui, c'est vrai et c'est tres drole," said madame.

"What do you mean, drole? It was no fun to me."

"Nor to me when you were called away so suddenly, though through my tears there was always a smile at the manner of your departure," said madame. "But the sun is strong at this corner, and if messieurs will please enter, Jean can tell you the story better than in the hot sun, which also is not good for a blesse, and I have a tonic wine which ma mere in Bain-de-Bretagne sent us for Noel, and which puts new life in the sick. A little of it will not do any of us any harm and will be especially good for monsieur the blesse. Doctor's medicine is good enough to kill disease, but a man to regain his strength again needs good food and good wine, and we Bretons have some secrets of herbs that will almost bring the dead to life. Myself, since I came to live in Paris, have almost forgotten but my mother has a cunning hand in distilling and her remedies are sought by all my neighbors. Now, how does that taste?"

"Delicious," said Jerry and I and we settled ourselves to listen to the butcher who had sunk into a huge oak chair, the only thing in the room big enough and strong enough to support him.

"Alors, mes amis, you remember the dark days of last August, when Von Kluck's army was drawing nearer Paris every day until finally the government packed up and went to Bordeaux? Paris was prepared for a siege, and those civilians who remembered 1870 got as many of their belongings together as they could, and went south into the country. Ma foi, civilians are not wanted when a town is besieged. Food is necessary for the soldiers and not for noncombatants. Well, September opened with houses around Paris being knocked down so as to clear the field for artillery fire, the beautiful trees in the Bois de Boulogne were cut down and trenches dug around the city. I did not leave Paris like so many others, as I had done my military service and thought perhaps that I might be of use in the victualling department. Yes, when I was conscripted I was not the mountain I am now, but a beau sabreur, who caught the girls' eye. Reach down that photograph, Celestine, and show it to monsieur. Now, mon brave, was I not a proper enough man? No, no, Celestine, I am not vain, but monsieur has laughed at the idea of my being a soldier and I wish to show him that things were not always with me as they are now.

"Now, in those days news of the armies was scarce and we waited daily to hear of Pere Joffre's master stroke, and the annihilation of the sacre Boche. But to our dismay one after another told us of the advance of the Hun until we heard with horror that he was at Gonesse, eight miles from Paris, and that some reports had come in of his cavalry patrols at St. Denis just outside the gates. My nephew, who drove a staff car in this period, has drawn me a map of the advance of Von Kluck, who at this time thought that the French armies were in his hand, and that in a week's time his big guns would grind Paris to powder. The brave British, who were outnumbered six to one, had retired from the Marne to the Seine Valley on orders from Pere Joffre, much to their disgust, as they had fought till they were as dogged and as ugly as one of their bouledogues. Von Kluck, wishing to annihilate the contemptible little army, and then gobble up Paris, changed the direction of his march to southeasterly so as to destroy the British, then join forces with Von Buelow and masticate Paris as he would one of my filets-mignons. Hein, my friends, you thought the butcher was no soldier, but my military training did not come amiss for me to understand the aim of the Hun. This step of Von Kluck's was to be his undoing and the cause of the loss of Paris, which he had promised the Kaiser to have ready for his triumphal entry and dinner in a few days' time.

"Now, you understand, that in this change of plan the lines of communication lay behind Von Kluck, and in making a diagonal march the danger lay in an attack being made on his right marching flank, when his retirement would have to be round a corner, so to speak, as the ground to his left was unprepared with supplies, etc., in case of a retreat. But Von Kluck in his arrogance thought with the French armies on the Alsace border, and the British just fallen back another twelve miles, that there was no opponent within dangerous distance to make any such flank attack and, accordingly, the Huns marched from Senlis, where many civilians were murdered in cold blood by them before departure, to Meaux. The news of the murder of the innocent noncombatants at Senlis inflamed us, and so far from terrifying us, as was the intention of Von Kluck by these murders, made the citizens of our quarter hold a meeting and resolve to defend Paris to the last man, and shoot any women before allowing them to fall into the hands of the dirty degenerates under the Crown Prince."

"And you are certainly right," broke in Jerry, "as when I was first with the Croix Rouge in the early days of the war the French were bayonetted while lying wounded and had their heads smashed in like eggshells by the Crown Prince's armies."

"Well, on the night of the fifth of September, I finally put up my shutters and went to bed with a heavy heart. Sleep did not come and I was glad when the first beam of day appeared. More for want of something to do than anything else I went out and commenced to take down the shutters. At the door was a taxi-auto, one of many with which the street was filled, also several camions laden with piles of clothing and rifles. An army officer, a captain, and a chief of the gendarmerie with several gendarmes were also consulting long lists.

"'Comment-appelez-vous,' said the captain.

"Lafarge, monsieur, Jean Lafarge."

"'Well, Lafarge, your name is on the special mobilization roll. Go to that wagon and get a cap, tunic and breeches and rifle.'

"'Good Lord,' said the gendarme officer what will you do with him?'

"'Heaven only knows, but his name is on the list so off he goes.'

"'Pardon, gentlemen,' said I, 'but where do I go after?'

"'To the front.'

"'To the front.' Well, I went to the auto-truck and received from the sergeant in charge, a tunic, cap and breeches and from another truck a rifle, with belt pouches and a supply of ammunition.

"When I emerged from my shop, into which I had gone to dress, I was a sight for

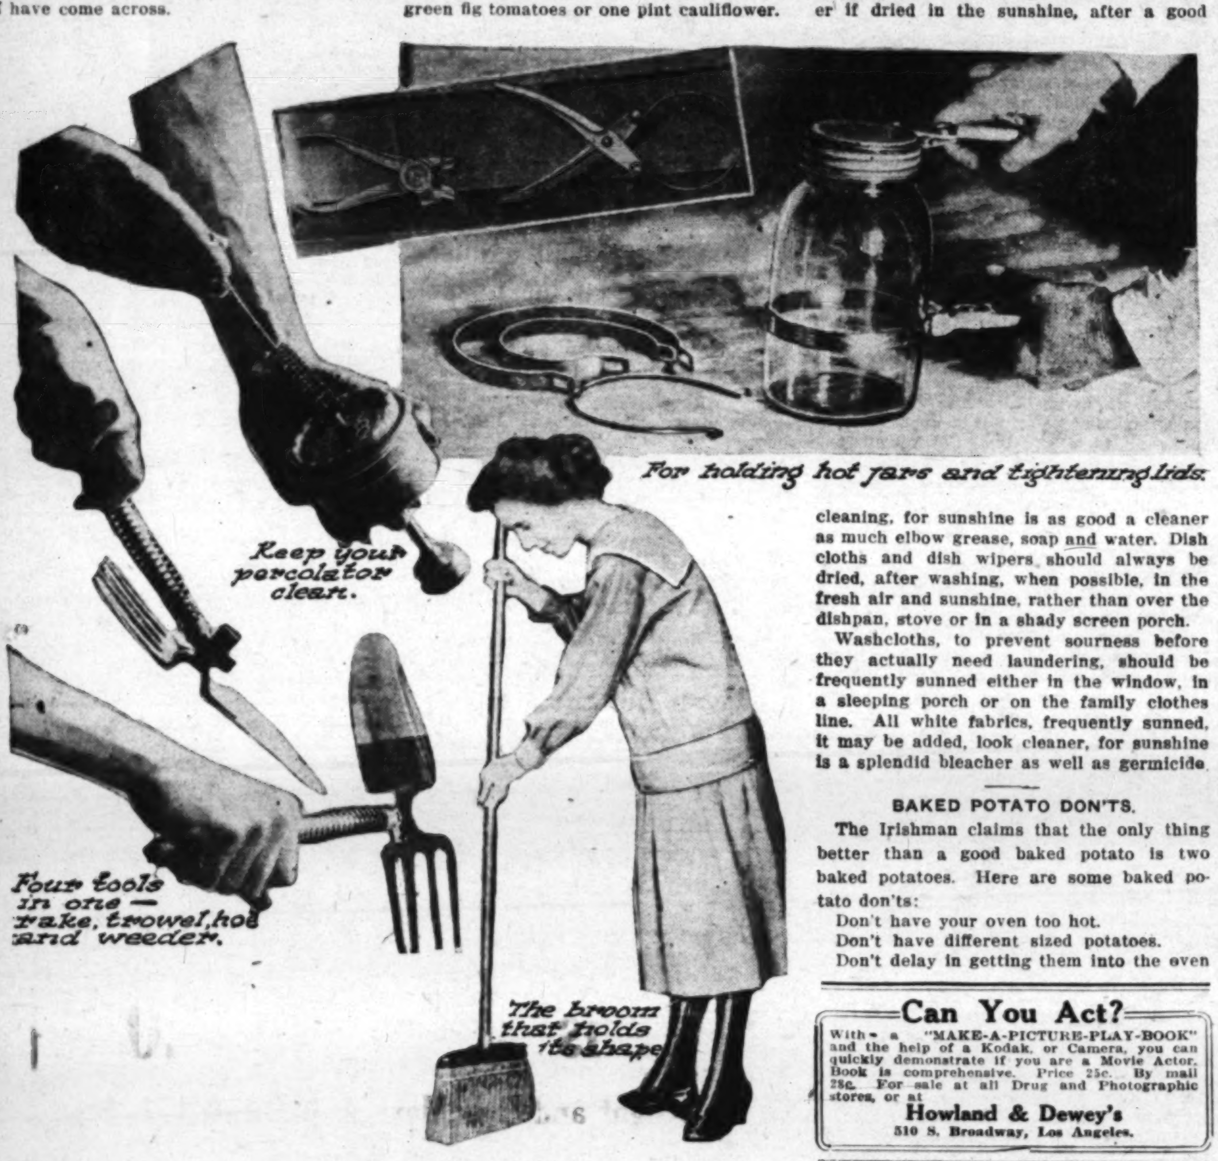
THERE have been a good many contrivances for tightening jar tops, but none better, I think, than the one in the illustration. Two handles of the pincer variety are fitted with adjustable metal bands and rings. These bands and rings come in different sizes to fit the different sized jars. They are fastened very easily to the handles so that to change to a different size is a simple matter. The band slips over the hot jar of fruit and is held tight with the pincer handle, as in the illustration, while the ring fits over the top of the jar and is tightened with the same sort of a handle. The tightened band holds the jar steady while you screw on the top with the other handle and ring. It is quite the most satisfactory set of kitchen tools I have come across.



For holding hot jars and tightening lids.

Keep your percolator clean.
Four tools in one — rake, trowel, hoe and weeder.
The broom that holds its shape

Keep the Percolator Clean.

THE percolator is a nasty thing to wash The fine little holes and the long narrow tube are hard to get absolutely clean. For this very purpose there is a little brush, like that used for bottles, only much smaller. It can be purchased for the small sum of 10 cents, and that is mighty small pay for the big amount of work the little thing accomplishes.

The Straight Broom.

THERE is such a thing and I have seen it, the broom that will stay straight for a long time. It is stoutly made and is of a different shape from the ordinary broom, in that the straw is shorter than that in the ordinary or common variety. This makes it less liable to become crooked and does not affect its pliability as might be supposed. Of course it has to be properly cared for, as does anything to make it last long.

Four Tools in One.

BY A simple spring and hinge on the handle, four garden tools are made of one and much labor saved thereby. By this arrangement you need take only one thing with you when you go out to work in your garden and you will never have the trouble of laying one of your tools down at one end of a row and having to walk back after it, for you will have them all in your hand all the time. A little snap of the spring and you have a hoe, a rake, a trowel or a weeder as you need it.

MUSTARD PICKLE.

One pint whole small cucumbers, one pint sliced cucumbers, one pint small whole onions, one cup beans, three green sweet peppers, three red sweet peppers, one pint green fig tomatoes or one pint cauliflower.

Dressing.

One quart vinegar, four tablespoons flour, one cup sugar, three tablespoons powdered mustard, one-half tablespoon turmeric, one tablespoon celery seed.

Cut all vegetables before measuring—tomatoes into halves, cucumbers into slices, string beans into one and one-half-inch lengths, diagonally or on the bias, and chop peppers. All vegetables should be tender, and the whole cucumbers not longer than two and one-half inches.

Put all vegetables into a 45 per cent brine (one cup salt to one gallon water) over night, then freshen in clear water for two hours. Let these vegetables stand in liquor of one-half vinegar and one-half water for fifteen minutes, then scald in same liquor.

To make mustard dressing, rub all the dry ingredients together until smooth, then add the hot vinegar slowly, stirring to make smooth paste, cook over pan of water, stirring carefully, until the sauce thickens. Then drain the vegetables thoroughly and pour the mustard dressing over them while hot. Mix well and pack in sterilized jars. Boil (process) ten-ounce jars for twenty minutes at 180 deg. F. (simmering.)

CLEANING WITH SUNSHINE.

Sunshine will not only give the cleanliness that spells sanitation and health, but will give most articles exposed to it a delightful fresh air odor. As most germs that cause rot, mildew, fermentation or molds in the household flourish in dampness, dark and warmth, summer days is the time to look out. While sunshine means warmth, the bright light and dryness that it brings will prevent or arrest these unpleasant growths.

Tin or enamel bread and cake boxes, cooler shelves and refrigerator shelves all should have frequent sunnings. Even the dripping pan from the gas stoves is cleaner if dried in the sunshine, after a good cleaning, for sunshine is as good a cleaner as much elbow grease, soap and water. Dish cloths and dish wipers should always be dried, after washing, when possible, in the fresh air and sunshine, rather than over the dishpan, stove or in a shady screen porch.

Washcloths, to prevent sourness before they actually need laundering, should be frequently sunned either in the window, in a sleeping porch or on the family clothes line. All white fabrics, frequently sunned, it may be added, look cleaner, for sunshine is a splendid bleacher as well as germicide.

BAKED POTATO DON'TS.

The Irishman claims that the only thing better than a good baked potato is two baked potatoes. Here are some baked potato don'ts:

Don't have your oven too hot.

Don't have different sized potatoes.

Don't delay in getting them into the oven—they will not hurry when the time is short.

Don't fail to allow from forty-five minutes to an hour for a medium-sized (six ounce) potato.

Don't select potatoes that are too big.

Don't plan to serve them as a second course in a dinner, it is difficult to time them just right—use them with the first course in a lunch or supper.

POTATOES TO SAVE WHEAT.

Use mashed potatoes in place of a third or a half of your flour in making biscuits and rolls and you will be doing your country a real service.

Our boys may dread to take their first Hun; after that they put the dread behind and take their Hun-dread (100.)

TRAINING FOR MERCHANT MARINE.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

BOSTON (Mass.)—This letter is written from the headquarters of Uncle Sam's great sea-training bureau in the twelfth story of Boston's white customhouse tower. It is addressed to the young men of the United States and relates to a new profession, for which the government has opened schools all over the country. At this writing thousands of men from 20 to 30 years old have entered these schools and they are undergoing the training that will fit them for a healthy, respectable, profitable and pleasant life work. Tens of thousands more are needed and by the time the war closes the number of men engaged in the business will probably be 250,000. The profession I refer to is known as "following the sea." The men in it are to be the officers and sailors of our new merchant marine.

According to a speech made by Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, our present plans call for 13,000,000 tons of new shipping. Exclusive of tugs and barges they include more than 2000 new vessels, and these are only the beginning of what is bound to be the greatest merchant fleet of the world. Mr. Hurley says that within the next three years we shall spend about $5,000,000,000 for ships, and that in 1920 we shall have a merchant fleet aggregating 25,000,000 tons. At the time the war in Europe broke out Great Britain led the commerce of the world. It then had less than 20,000,000 tons of shipping, and there were only seven nations which were credited with more than 1,000,000 tons each. The United States had less than 8,000,000 tons and this included both the vessels of the ocean and of our interior waterways. Only 10 per cent. of our foreign commerce was then carried in American vessels.

At that time Germany had less than 5,000,000 and France not much over 2,000,000 tons. Norway had but little more than France, and Sweden and Japan each were just rising above the 1,000,000 mark. Austria had less than any of the countries above mentioned, and today the combined shipping of Germany and Austria-Hungary is considerably less than one-fifth the amount we shall have in 1920. Both of these nations have lost a great deal of shipping. The United States took over the 118 enemy ships in our harbors, and they have lost many vessels interned in other parts of the world. So far Austria has not been able to build more, and although the Germans have been pushing the work of making cargo vessels at the Vulcan shipyards, the end of the war will find them handicapped by the lack of their merchant marine of every description.

We Will be Ahead of The World in Shipping.

GREAT BRITAIN has been trying to replace her losses as fast as possible, but she will come out of the struggle crippled by the submarines and the wear and tear of her army transportation; so that the probability is that we shall be far ahead of the rest of the world in all kinds of shipping when the war closes. The amount predicted for 1920 is equal to half of all the tonnage of the world in 1916-17. This means that the world's commerce of the future is to be largely carried in American bottoms. It means also that our own foreign commerce will grow beyond the wildest conceptions of the past. Our war industrial plants will be turned to making goods for shipment abroad, and the seas will be peppered by American vessels carrying goods to and from all parts of the world.

This vast fleet has to be officered and manned by Americans, and it is estimated that every one of its fabricated vessels of 8000 tons will require a crew of eighty men. This is an average of ten seamen for each 1000 tons, and at that rate, if we are to have a fleet of 25,000,000 tons, we shall need 250,000 officers and sailors. This means that the business will create that many good jobs and that they will be better than any sea-going job of the past. The men not only get their education free of charge, but they are paid during the learning. They start into the schools at $30 a month, and they have free food and quarters on the sea-training ships where the schools are. Each man receives a uniform free of charge. After the school training, which lasts six weeks, he gets the regular rates of sea pay fixed for the emergency fleet, and this increases as he rises in line. Every sailor has a chance to rise. He can study navigation and become an officer, and, in time, may command his own ship with the pay of a captain.

The present pay of the men ranges from $40 to $75 per month, according to their position, and these wages are increased by a bonus of 50 per cent. for voyages through the war zone, so that the pay rises from $60 to $112.50 per month. If they become officers they will receive from $120 to $275 per month, according to their rank and the class of ship upon which they serve, and to this is added the above bonus. On the twin-screw ships of the emergency fleet the regular pay of the captain is $275, that of the first officer $150, second officer $140 and third officer $130. On these ships the chief engineer gets $225 a month, the first assistant engineer $150 and the third assistant $130. For all trips through the war zone must be added the bonus of 50 per cent.

The common sailors are rated likewise according to position, and the places carry different kinds of work. The common seaman receives $40, the able seaman $60 and the fireman gets $60 per month. The boatswain receives $70, the carpenter $75 and the chief cook the same. There are lower wages for the cook's helpers. The oiler gets $65 and the mess boy and deck boy $30 each. All of these wages are increased by one-half while in the war zone.

Training Schools are Found on All the Coasts.

THESE sea-training schools of Uncle Sam are to be found along all the coasts of the United States. They are divided into three departments. First those teaching navigational training, which are for the making of officers out of men who have had more or less experience at sea. Second, are the schools for training engineers, and third, those for the schooling of the sailors and the rank and file of men who man the vessels. Navigational schools have been established on the Atlantic, the Gulf and Pacific coast, and also on the Great Lakes. They are forty-one in all, and the largest is carried on here at Boston in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The dean of this branch of instruction is Prof. Alfred E. Burton, a practical navigator of wide scientific knowledge, who was formerly connected with the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. Prof. Burton has selected as his instructors men of practical training, including astronomers, explorers and former sea captains, many of whom stand high as teachers. The students are given a six-week course in the theory and practice of navigation, and if they pass they are entitled to a license as second or third mate. Before they are licensed they go to sea for two months to learn the ropes, and during this time receive $75 a month. After that they get the usual pay for their grade in the merchant service. These schools have many applications. From the beginning of the war until April 1 they had graduated 1500 men.

The engineering schools are under Prof. Edward F. Miller of the Boston Tech. They are open to men who have had service as firemen, oilers, water tenders or assistant engineers on ocean, lake or river steamers; and also to locomotive engineers who have have had six months' sea service, as well as to stationary engineers, expert machinists and others who have had six months' sea service and to the graduates of nautical school ships. About 1200 such engineers had been graduated within ten months after the war opened, and we have now over 5000 licensed engineers in the service. Some of the principal engineering schools are at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the Seaman's Church Institute, New York; the Johns Hopkins Institute, Baltimore, and the University of Washington at Seattle. There are schools also connected with the Tulane University, New Orleans; the Armour Institute, Chicago; the Case School of Science, Cleveland, and the Bourse building, Philadelphia. The course at these schools lasts one month, and the students must have had six months' sea training before they receive their licenses.

The most interesting schools of all are those for training the crews for the merchant marine. Crews include all sorts of sailors below the officers, and tens of thousands of students are needed to enter them. The plans for the schools were approved only last December, when an announcement was made that the recruiting service was prepared to receive applications from young Americans between 21 and 30 years of age who wished to be trained for service on merchant ships as sailors, firemen, coal passers, oilers, water tenders, stewards and cooks. Within three months after that applications had been received for more than 7500 young men, and many thousands are now undergoing instruction.

Mr. Henry Howard—Director. Salary $1 per Year.

THE recruiting of men for these schools has been carried on at practically no expense to the government and that in a most efficient way. The originator of the idea is Mr. Henry Howard, who has organized the merchant marine sea training service, and who is now its director, at the usual patriotic pay of $1 a year. Mr. Howard is not a professional seaman in the practical sense of the word, but he comes of a long line of sea captains, his great-grandfather having been on a privateer in the War of the Revolution, and his grandfather having owned ships and sailed them. His sea training has been largely on his own yacht and as a student of the merchant marine. He has long been interested in the building up of our commerce, and his work is a labor of love. By profession Mr. Howard is a chemist, being at the head of one of the largest chemical institutes of the United States, and as such largely connected with the druggists of the country. After his plans for organizing these schools had been approved at Washington he concluded to enlist a trade organization, to which many of the druggists belong, to recruit students for them.

In connection with Mr. Louis K. Liggett, another dollar-a-year man, he persuaded the druggists all over the United States to make their stores individual recruiting offices for the merchant marine. The matter was submitted to the drug men, and over 6900 of them consented to act and have been enrolled in the employ of the government for this purpose at $1 per year. These druggists have stores in forty-eight different States, including more than 6300 cities and towns. The number all told is three times as many as that of the recruiting stations of the army and navy, and every station is given to the government rent free and with clerk hire for nothing. The druggist distributes the posters and literature of the service to the young men as they come in with their sweethearts for soda water, and he almost might be said to enlist them while they wait. Each druggist knows his own community and tries to get the most likely boys for the places. After enrollment he has them examined by a local doctor, another dollar-a-year man, and then starts them off to one of the government sea training schools. The men have to pay their passageway from their homes to the school, but if they are accepted the money is returned, and if the physical examinations show that they are unfit, they are sent back and the fares and expenses both ways are paid.

I have just returned from East Boston, where I visited one of the largest of these sea training stations. There are four ships now at anchor in that part of the harbor and hundreds of the young sailors of the future are living upon them and doing all sorts of work. The training ships are coasters of from 3000 to 5000 or more tons, which have been running to Portland and Halifax. During my stay I went from vessel to vessel, watching the sailors at school and at work, and talking with the captain-teachers and men concerning their jobs. The students are fine looking rosy-checked, clear-eyed fellows. They are mostly American born, and many of them have come from the families of fishermen along the coast.

I saw some painting the hulls, others working at the engines and others learning to splice ropes and tie the many knots which the sailor must know. This training also extends to working in wire rope, which is now so largely used on our ships. The boys have to learn to box the compass and all about its points and directions; also the names of the spars, sails and rigging, and all parts of the ship. Each branch of the work has its own special course, which is given by able seamen who have the ability to teach and command. Every ten men have an instructor. Each of the ships has an old sea captain at its head, and the boys learn, not only from the "Manual of Sea Training," a little book which has been prepared for the schools of the merchant marine, but by actual work of every kind on the ship. The most of the schoolships go out to sea for five days of each week, and a single ship will often take 500 boys on a cruise.

A Full Day's Work For Ship-deck Department.

HERE, for instance, is a sample day's work of the men in the ship-deck department:

6 a.m.—All hands, tidy room.
7 a.m.—Breakfast.
8 a.m.—General work.
9:30 a.m.—Discipline and instruction.
10 a.m.—Inspection.
10:30 a.m.—Boat drill.
11:45 a.m.—Clean up.
12 noon—Dinner.
1 p.m.—Fire drill.
2 p.m.—Seamanship.
3 p.m.—Boat drill.
4 p.m.—General work.
5 p.m.—Supper.
6 p.m.—Muster and liberty.
6 to 9 p.m.—Recreation and bathing, etc.
9 p.m.—Turn out all lights.

The training ships are kept clean spick-and-span. They are large and well equipped and the boys have comfortable quarters. They sleep in wire spring hammocks or bunks in large rooms that have many portholes. The rooms run the width of the ship. The boys are proud of their vessels and of the record which each has made of one kind or another. The Calvin Austin, for instance, of 3800 tons, was the first to come to the rescue of Halifax after the great exin nature to put the patient on the right lines."

Fifty years ago, when I was at a nature cure establishment in Switzerland, a young man came to take treatment for asthma. After a few weeks of hydropathy, sun and air baths, and eliminative diet, to his astonishment he developed plain symptoms of venereal disease. He had been infected seven years before, but after a drug treatment had been told he was cured. On the contrary the symptoms had merely been suppressed, the poison being driven back into the blood. After a couple of months of rational treatment he was really cured.

Doubtless, before long, the government will establish sanatoria, where these natural methods of treating the disease, that have proved so effective in Europe, will be given a thorough trial. The more so because of the widespread dissatisfaction manifested by the medical profession with the results of present drug methods.

Meantime, let us have an end of the conspiracy of silence in regard to this widely prevalent disease.

Perambulating Still.

FOLLOWING is from "The Triangle of Health" by Dr. Alma C. Arnold:

"The person who does not touch alcohol, beer and wine generally sets himself up as a "better than thou," because he does not understand that just because he leaves liquors out of his dietary, he is most likely to take even stronger stimulants. That is because he does not understand the method by which alcohol is made.

"Alcohol is made through fermentation and distillation, and both these processes would be impossible without sugar. When we understand this, we find that we can make alcohol by simply eating sugar, because this alkaline substance, coming in contact with the hydrochloric acid of our stomach, ferments quickly and causes as much stimulation to our nerves as though we partook of the prefermented article in the shape of light beers or wines.

"The average teetotaler clothes himself with the "mantle of righteousness" because he doesn't drink alcoholic stimulants! Then he turns into the next drug store to have some soft drink or candies, by which he injures himself tenfold as much as by drinking any of the light liquors.

"Most soft drinks are flavored with syrups, and I have already shown that we manufacture alcohol in our stomachs when we eat sweets. All sweets turn into an acid, causing fermentation. These set up diseases more quickly than were we to partake of the already manufactured alcoholic beverages, such as light beer and wine."

Bright's Disease.

BRIGHT'S disease is usually declared by "regular" physicians to be incurable. So it is, by drugging methods. R. L. Alsaker, M.D., writes:

"It is necessary for me to differ radically from accepted medical teachings, for chronic Bright's disease is incurable, we are told. This is true, if you believe it and act accordingly. I have not seen a physician who 'practices medicine' who is able to restore permanent health in such cases. The belief is that within a few years the disease will end life. Under ordinary medical treatment, that is the usual outcome.

"But under rational treatment it is often easier to overcome chronic Bright's disease than an obstinate case of constipation. Rational physicians are bringing about cures right along. When the patients co-operate, we do not look for many failures and the failures are the exception. Even some of the cases that seem beyond human and natural aid recover. Where degeneration has extended so far that it has sapped the body's recuperative power completely, there will be no recovery. But the vast majority of those suffering from Bright's disease can recover, and do recover, when properly treated.

"Even in some cases of extensive degeneration a great deal can be done. The kidneys may not be entirely regenerated, but if the patient will be prudent and live properly, the albumin will be decreased very much, sometimes disappearing almost entirely, and the individual can live for years in comfort and good health."

Physical Morality.

HERBERT SPENCER writes:

"Few seem conscious that there is such a thing as physical morality. Men's habitual words and actions imply the idea that they are at liberty to treat their bodies as they please. Disorder entailed by disobedience to nature's dictates they regard simply as grievances; not as effects of a conduct more or less flagitious. Though the evil consequences inflicted on their dependents and on future generations are often as great as those caused by crime, yet they do not think themselves in any degree criminal. It is true that in the case of drunkenness the viciousness of a bodily transgression is recognized; but none appears to infer that if this bodily transgression is vicious so too is every bodily transgression. The fact is that all breaches of the laws of health are physical sins.

"Just because we do not place life on a physical basis this should appeal to us; we are all the more bound to accept it, because life has a moral basis.

"Mental vigor and spiritual insight are not got through despising the physical side of life."

Cure Versus Suppression.

MANY of my consultants report that they are suffering from the effects of attacks of measles, typhoid or other diseases, which they experienced years ago.

They are not suffering from the effects of these diseases, but from their suppression, so that waste matter that caused these diseases still lurks in their blood.

These efforts of nature to purify the system, when encouraged, not suppressed, purify the blood and leave it clean and sweet, after which the patient can remain so, if he does not at once proceed to fill himself up with more waste, as he usually does

The difference between "regular" treatment and natural treatment is that the one suppresses symptoms, while the other removes the cause. In other words, permanent cure versus temporary relief.

Doctors and Diet.

JUDGING from statements made to me by consultants, quite a few M.D.'s hereabouts, in giving advice to patients, are adopting some of my suggestions on diet.

I am glad to hear this. My knowledge is not patented. I want to do as much good as I can. The wider the spread of good advice on health the more it pleases me.

Slow Suicide.

THERE died suddenly near Los Angeles, at the early age of 43, a business man who had contributed largely to the growth of this city, a successful and popular member of the community, a good husband and father, prominent in society, president of an athletic club, a man who would generally be described as a "picture of health."

The cause of his sudden death was variously given as apoplexy, with gas pressure on the heart, and acute indigestion.

This was really a case of slow suicide, by what is commonly called "good living."

Millions of other good men are going the same way, men who are adepts in their various lines of business, but who are absolutely ignorant in regard to the care of their bodies.

Strange and pitiful, is it not?

Salt.

EDWARD PERCY ROBINSON, M.D., of New York has published in pamphlet form an article that appeared in the Medical Record of September 1, 1917, on "Salt as a Cause of Cancer." In it he sets forth that salt is a peril to the human race, all the salt we need being contained in natural food. He shows that the North American Indians used salt only on ceremonial occasions, that non-salt eaters are free from cancer and that salt overtaxes the kidneys.

The use of salt does not cause cancer, although it may contribute thereto, like any other harmful habit. The cause of cancer is the consumption of more proteid food than the system can assimilate. At a recent meeting of the American Medical Association one of the Mayo brothers, who conduct a large slaughterhouse in Rochester, Minn., admitted that diet is the chief factor in cancer, especially overconsumption of meat.

All these other statements about salt have been made for many years, by me and other students of the laws of health.

As I have heretofore said, table salt is a slow poison, an inorganic mineral that cannot be utilized by the body and is rejected at great expense to the kidneys. There is no more reason for using the mineral chloride of sodium than there is in using on our food potassium, or calcium, or phosphorus, or sulphur, or any other of the twelve mineral elements found in the body. The consumption of salt is an acquired habit, like the use of whisky, or tobacco, or coffee, or refined cane sugar. Get your salt from chlorine and sodium as they are found in natural foods, especially in raw green stuff, nature's medicine.

Now that Edward Percy Robinson, M.D., of New York has said these things in the Medical Record they will probably create more interest than when Harry Ellington Brook, N.D., of Los Angeles says the same things in the Los Angeles Times, although I was studying the care of the body when Robinson was in the nursery, or in the cradle.

Baby Shows.

AS MOST people judge fruit by size and appearance, so are babies judged at baby shows.

The fat baby is not the healthy baby. On the contrary, that baby is burdened with waste matter, and will fall an easy prey to what are known as "children's ailments," all avoidable, when children are fed right.

When you see a physician chronically sick, or a teacher of "success" who is unable to pay his bills, you have the right to doubt the efficacy of their methods.

Andrew Carnegie in his book, "Triumphant Democracy," boldly declares, "The state has as much relation to medicine as to religion, and no more."

MARRIED LIFE OF HELEN AND WARREN

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

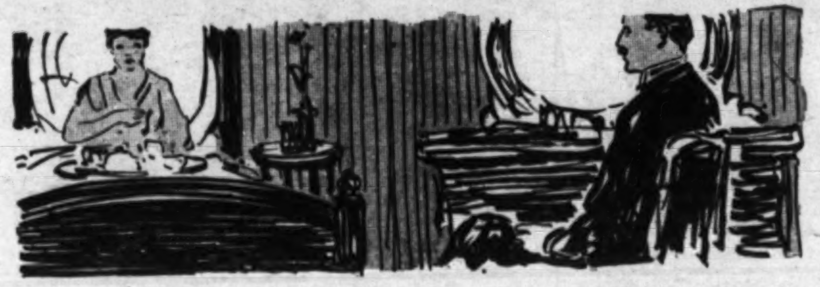
A PERSISTENT shrilling of the library telephone. With fretful restlessness Helen turned her heated pillow, ignoring the clamorous call.

Where was Nora that she did not answer? Probably across the hall gossiping with the Gordons' maid.

Helen's resentment smoldered deeper as the bell shrilled on to a sullen defeated silence. Nora knew that she was lying down with a sick headache—yet the girl had gone off unmindful of the telephone and door bell.

No one else would put up with it! She was too lenient—she spoilt every maid she had. That was why they gave her so little consideration.

"No, I don't want you—it's too warm," pushing away Pussy Purr-mew who had leapt up beside her with purring overtures.



A sick irritability possessed her. The heat and a number of small exasperations had contributed to her headache and edged nerves.

She had not been well or slept well for over a week—and today it had culminated in an attack of "nerves." Not a tempestuous outburst, that would have been a relief—but a smoldering repression.

The sound of coal pouring down a chute on the pavement below was a further outrage to her rasped nerves. It was too hot to close the window, but she had lowered the awning and drawn down the shades to subdue the street sounds and the glaring afternoon sun.

A bell—the kitchen bell! But as it did not ring again her expectant indignation was somewhat mollified. Evidently Nora had returned.

The next moment Nora appeared at the door with a pair of tan oxfords on which grinned new rubber heels.

"Sixty cents," was her economic announcement.

"Hand me my purse—there in the top drawer." Then sharply, "Nora where were you a few minutes ago? Didn't you hear the phone?"

"I was up on the roof, drying my hair," defiantly. "There ain't no sun in my room."

"Well, any other time that's all right, but when I'm ill and lying down—I wish you'd stay where you can answer the bells."

Without deigning a reply Nora flounced out. The superior, almost insolent silence with which she combatted criticism always exasperated Helen.

Her sick brooding was now concentrated on the girl's shortcomings—her impertinence, extravagance and growing carelessness about her work.

Was that dust on the molding over the door? She sat up for a better view. Yes, the ledge of the white woodwork was gray with dust. And that mirror—how smeary and cloudy it looked.

She longed to get up and have it "out" with Nora now, but that would only aggravate her headache. Instead she must bathe, dress, and try to force some semblance of cheerfulness before Warren came.

He always resented her headaches. He took the attitude that she brought them on by giving way to her "nerves" or fretting over some triviality.

That morning, though she had had a sleepless night and barely touched her breakfast, his parting admonition had been a brusque:

"Now get out and take some exercise! Don't mope around the house all day."

He seemed never to understand that there were times when she was really ill, when she feverishly craved his love and sympathy. And those were the very times that he withheld them, that he was most coldly unresponsive.

From the library came a single vibrant chime—half-past five. With an effort she forced herself out of bed and into the bathroom under a cold shower. But it left her tremulously weak and dizzy.

She was too sick, she could not dress. Getting into a fresh negligee she smoothed the hot rumpled bed and again lay down.

The banging door announced Warren. She heard his stride to the front room and library. Not finding her there he appeared at the bedroom door.

"Hello! Not in bed?"

"Oh, dear, I've felt wretched all day."

It's the heat. Felt rotten myself—but didn't give way to it. Buck up, you'll feel better when you've had some dinner."

"Dear, I'm really sick—I'm feverish and—"

But Warren had slammed into the bathroom

When he reappeared. aglow with his vigorous wash-up, Helen turned to the wall in strained, aggrieved silence.

She could hear the strenuous plying of his military brushes over his rebellious hair. Then the opening of a drawer as he took out a fresh collar.

"Dinner's served," announced Nora from the doorway, managing to convey in those two words her sullen resentmeht at things in general.

"Come along now," urged Warren. "What you need is stoking up! Can't expect to feel very zippy on an empty tumtum."

"I couldn't eat a thing," the words half smothered in the pillow.

"Rats! What if we all threw up the sponge when we felt a little rocky!"

"Warren, I tell you I'm sick!" hysterically.

"Oh, all right," out of patience. "Stay there and sulk."

As he stalked into dinner alone, the lump that had been in Helen's throat all day now swelled to choking proportions. He did not care! He had not even felt her head to see if she was feverish. Her temperature might be 105 for all he knew!

The sounds from the dining-room told the progress of the dinner. Nora had removed his soup plate and was now bringing in the roast and vegetables.

There was no evidence of haste. He was not hurrying through to get back to her. He was enjoying his dinner with his usual deliberateness.

Helen's glance fell on the evening paper he had thrown on the bed.

HUSBAND, INSANELY JEALOUS, KILLS PROMINENT LAWYER.

J. R. Stewart's Attentions to Walker Harding's Wife Culminates in a Double Tragedy.

With morbid interest Helen scanned the article. So there were men who loved their wives enough to be "insanely jealous."

Warren was never jealous. He would never be incited to any act of desperation because of her. Could some other woman have inspired him with a more ardent love? Had he married Flo Arnold, to whom he had once been attentive, would he have been more devoted?

Again the creak of the swinging pantry door and the clink of dishes. Nora was bringing in the dessert and coffee. How much longer would he be?

At length came the sound of his pushed-back chair. Then his vigorous step down the hall—and the closing of the front door!

Dazed, Helen started up. He had gone out without a word! She had expected indifference, unresponsiveness—but not this! Then leaped the thought—he was only going down to mail a forgotten letter!

Darting to the window, she was in time to see him striding briskly up the street. She held her breath as he passed the letter box—and turned the corner.

Stumbling back to bed, for the next hour Helen's thoughts were black and distorted. If only she could go away and stay away—until he really needed her. Other women had the courage to leave their husbands when they found that they were no longer loved—why not she?

Possibly best sellers and five-reel features contributed to her now harrowing plans. She would go away, leaving no address. She would search the "Help Wanted" column for work. Then she would work and wait—until he found her.

Even through her wretchedness came a thrilled glow as she pictured the meeting. After months of searching he would find the dingy boarding-house. He would brush past the frowzy landlady and dash up to the hall room. She could even feel the dear roughness of his coat as he held her close, murmuring, "I never knew how much I cared!"

At heart every woman is maudlinly melodramatic. The scenes which she mentally rehearses with the man she loves would out-slush even the stage carpenter by whom most of the screen dramas are evidently written.

Helen was still rehearsing amended variations of this final poignant scene, when the half-closed door swung wide, revealing Warren with a triumphant grin and a napkined tray.

"Feel better? Well, you will when you get outside of this!"

Clearing the bedside table, he drew it nearer.

"Everything closed around here—had to go way down town for that squab. Looks pretty good? Broiled it myself. Hold on. I forgot the salt."

Dazedly Helen stared at the tray. A squab delicately browned, a slender glass of sherry and an alligator pear.

"There now, get busy!" as he reappeared with the saltcellar.

But Helen had dropped back on the pillow, her face hidden, and her shoulders quivering with suppressed sobs.

"For the love of Lulu! What's turned on the tear spigot now?"

"Oh, I—I thought you'd gone off for the evening—deliberately—just to show me you didn't care!" deserting the pillow for the shelter of his shoulder as he sat on the edge of the bed. "Oh, I couldn't bear it! I was going away—I couldn't have stayed here if you—"

"Fairly wallowing in it, eh?" with a grin. "Jove you can cook up more tommy-rot! There," as he deftly dismembered the tender squab. "Now I've cut it up for you—go to it!"

Helen's emotionalism relieved, her appetite returned. And when a little later only the tiny, closely nibbled bones were left, she lay back, her headache better and her viewpoint normal.

"Got some color now," grunted Warren with satisfaction. "Ingrowing nerves—that's all that's ever wrong with you. A good square meal will pull you 'round every time," failing to grasp the real cause of her swift reaction. "Stoke up—that's my prescription. Don't want to throw bouquets, but if I hung out my shingle—your nerve specialists wouldn't make enough to pay for the labels on their pill boxes!"

Training for Merchant Marine.

plosion. It has a mascot, a cat, that left the ruins and adopted the ship. She was brought back to Boston and the sailors have entered her in the cat shows here. So far she has won three first prizes over the aristocratic tabbies of this city. The medals and ribbons she has won are in the dining-room above the captain's table.

The transport Meade, another of the training vessels, was once a greyhound of the Atlantic, and a generation ago had the record of being the fastest ship on the seas. It was used as a transport in the Spanish War, then in the quartermaster's service, and to train boys to manage the ships which carry supplies to our soldiers in France.

The captains and teachers tell me the boys are enthusiastic as to their work and that many of them study and practice outside of the regular hours. There is a library on each of the vessels and a Y.M.C.A. man is connected with each crew and does what he can for the men along the lines of social morality. The men have plenty to do but there is ample time for recreation; sports and games upon shore and boxing and athletics on ship. There are usually movies, lectures or songs in the evening. Every vessel has a piano, and sailor songs or chanteys are taught every Wednesday. The old chantey singing wh[illegible] was universal upon the sailing vessels [illegible] the past is being revived and the boys do teamwork in pulling ropes and reefing the sails to these old sailor airs. I close the letter with extracts from several of the most popular songs from among the many which have been resurrected from the chanteys of the past. The first has a score or more of two-line verses with the refrain "Blow the man down!" Among these are:

"Come all you young fellows that follow the sea,
Now pay attention and listen to me!

O blow the man down, bullies, blow the man down!
Way-ay, blow the man down!
O blow the man down in Liverpool town!
Give me some time to blow the man down!
'Twas on a 'Black Baller' I first served my time,
And in that 'Black Baller' I wasted my prime.

O blow the man down, etc."

Another chantey which is fifty years old at least originated, I am told, with Mark Twain. It relates to an old skipper who was always singing about the trials of a certain Lorenzo whom he spoke of as Ranzo.

"O Ranzo was no sailor,
He skipped on board a whaler.

Oh, pity poor Reuben Ranzo!
Ranzo, boys, Ranzo!
Oh, poor old Reuben Ranzo!
Ranzo, boys, Ranzo!

And he could not do his duty,
So they took him to the gangway.

Oh, pity poor Reuben Ranzo!
Ranzo, boys, Ranzo!
Oh, poor old Reuben Ranzo!
Ranzo, boys, Ranzo!

And they gave him lashes thirty,
Yes, lashes nine and thirty,

Oh, pity poor Reuben Ranzo! etc."

Later on Ranzo does better. He is taught "navigation to fit him for his station" and the captain approves of him as follows:

"And he gave him wine and water, Reuben kissed the captain's daughter," ending with

"Now Ranzo he's a sailor,
He's chief mate of that whaler.

Oh, happy old Reuben Ranzo," etc.

These songs can only be appreciated when they are sung by a hundred or more of these young American boys every one of whom joins in the chorus.

THE TIPPING TONGUE.

A lady had been looking for a friend for a long time without success. Finally she came upon her in an unexpected place.

"Well," she exclaimed, "I've been on a perfect wild goose chase all day long, but thank goodness I've found you at last."

CARE OF THE BODY.

CONDUCTED BY
HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D

NOT long ago a Massachusetts youth jumped to his death from a transport, into the harbor of a French port, rather than be sent back home to face his family and friends, because he was suffering from syphilis.

This young soldier was a martyr to two errors—first, the exaggerated horrors depicted by conscienceless quacks; second, the false modesty that makes the very name of this prevalent disease taboo in polite society.

It is less blameworthy to suffer from syphilis, as a result of a sexual indiscretion, than to be afflicted with Bright's disease as a result of many years of persistent gluttony.

The War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities has widened its method of combatting syphilis so as to include industrial plants, to whose proprietors a circular has been sent, describing a plan, of which the following outline is given:

"(1.) Distribution of literature, posting of bulletins, placards, etc.

"(2.) Confidential interviews between employees and superintendent, foreman or other individual entrusted with the execution of the plan.

"(3.) Examination by competent doctors of all employees who have or think they have a venereal disease.

"(4.) Investigation of health conditions in the families of infected married men, and provision for care of wives and children.

"(5.) Disposition of cases for treatment, either by individual physicians specially engaged, or at a hospital clinic, or plant clinic.

"(6.) Provision of leave of absence with pay for employees who are in the infectious stages of a venereal disease, with the requirement that they report daily to the superintendent or foreman.

"(7.) A certificate of each treatment, signed by the treating physician, should be required of every patient.

"(8.) Patients who have been pronounced cured of gonorrhea should be required to undergo examination at least once a month for three months, after having been discharged from the doctor's care.

"(9.) Few cases of syphilis can be cured in less than several years' time, but they will cease to be infectious and dangerous to others, as soon as all lesions and sores on the skin and mucous membrane have been healed."

Patients may, of course, take treatment from their own physicians, to whatever school they may belong.

Some claim that syphilis is a comparatively modern disease, while others say that it is as old as history. The latter view is probably correct. There is a passage in the Old Testament that describes syphilis almost exactly. About the time America was discovered an epidemic swept over Europe and for this reason America has obtained the unenviable reputation, in some quarters, of giving syphilis to the Old World. The people in the south of Europe blamed the French and called it the "French disease." In other countries the name of some other nation was given to it. In one thing all nations agreed, namely, that they themselves were not to blame—that it was due to foreigners.

During the Middle Ages people were extremely filthy, and their morals were in keeping, for immorality and filth are synonymous. Hence, it is not surprising that syphilis flourished. There were, history says, 19,000 to 20,000 leper houses scattered over Europe, for the accommodation of those who were afflicted with leprosy, but on account of the loose methods of description, it is hard to tell whether they harbored lepers or syphilis.

Unfortunately, the Wassermann method, usually employed as a test for syphilis, is not always reliable. As I mentioned recently, a report of 331 autopsies, presented by Dr. Douglas Symmers, assistant director of the Bellevue Hospital Laboratories, and two other physicians, and published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, showed that the Wassermann test was correct only in from 31 to 56 per cent. of cases in which characteristic anatomic signs of the disease were shown in autopsy. The report added: "It is not a specific action, but occurs in conditions other than syphilis, and it does not always occur in syphilis." Methods of diagnosticians who depend chiefly on the Wassermann reaction for their judgment as to whether the patient is or is not afflicted with syphilis were criticised in the report.

Syphilis is a blood disease, and as easy to cure as other blood diseases, before it is uncomplicated with mercury. The later and more repulsive forms of the disease are due mainly to the action of this drug. Those who are most susceptible to the disease are starch poisoned—their blood is loaded up with mucus, and rendered acid, by over-consumption of starch foods. When they are in this condition, mercury salivates the body. Over-consumption of meat also favors progress of the disease.

Wthen the body is enervated, and its resistance lowered, from the presence of waste matter in the blood, or from sexual excesses, or from mental overwork, or from starvation, or from drugs, or from other causes, a person becomes especially liable to this, or any other disease, and the patient lacks vitality to throw it off. This is why epidemics are prevalent in Germany. This is why, when an epidemic is raging, some will get sick severely, others slightly, while some will be affected not at all. All doctors know this, but they do not always attribute it to the true cause.

Mercury has been used in this disease for 400 years, and is still used by many physicians. Mercury was first introduced by Paracelsus—Aureolus Philippus Theophrastus Bombastus de Hohenheim, as he delighted to style himself—who was born in 1493, at Einseidlen, a monastery and place of pilgrimage in Switzerland, that I visited over fifty years ago. He was denounced by the whole medical world as a base, impudent and unprincipled charlatan, yet to him the medical world has been more indebted for the system of allopathic drugging—now going out of fashion—than to all other physicians who have ever lived.

Recognizing the evils of mercury, the medical profession readily welcomed the introduction of a new remedy by Paul Ehrlich, a German scientist of world-wide fame. He called it "606," being his 606th medical discovery, and latter "salvarsan." It is a compound of arsenic. Of late, medical journals have not been so enthusiastic over the results obtained from the administration of this drug.

As I have said, syphilis is a blood disease that is comparatively easy to cure, if taken in the early stage, when uncomplicated by drugs. Unfortunately, a great majority of those afflicted in this way, influenced by the false attitude of society, defer rational treatment, and fall victims to harmful methods.

It is impossible to get rid of this, or any other disease, as long as the blood is burdened with waste matter. Nor can a poison be eradicated from the blood by putting another poison in. That is contrary to reason.

Following are suggestions by J. H. Tilden, M.D., in his book "Gonorrhea and Syphilis." Dr. Tilden was a "regular" practitioner for thirty years before he, like so many others, began to see the fallacy of drugging methods:

"In the first place, stop the expenditure of nerve energy; secure rest; feed the proper foods in proper quantities, and in proper combinations, which gives necessary physiological rest; give the body care in bathing, rubbing and clothing, and then poise the mind. The whole of therapeutics is contained in that short outline.

"The worst forms of syphilitic skin diseases are a compound of ignorance, bedrooms without ventilation, dirty beds, filthy underwear, no bathing, and harsh eating, mixed with physical degeneration from sexual debauchery.

"Dirty beds, overindulgence in meat, bread, potatoes, coffee, tobacco and alcoholics, with neglect of body-bathing, can generate a disease that will equal the worst pictures of syphilis or bubonic plague. The cure, of course, means education and regeneration.

"The treatment of any form of syphilis is to secure rest for the nervous system; fast when in pain or discomfort; stop all stimulants; give the simplest foods and have foods properly combined, fruit for the first meal, bread and milk, or bread and vegetable soup for the second, meat and salads for the third."

Here is a case reported by Dr. R. L. Alsaker of St. Louis another M.D., who has achieved great success with rational methods of treatment:

"In November 11, 1916, a young man of 23 O.R. came to me. He had been suffering from the trouble [illegible] one year or fourteen months. When [illegible] came to me his condition was as follows: Skin pasty, with eruptions, enlarged gland in the groins, enlarged tonsils and swollen throat (fauces,) and the throat was so bad that he would have to stay in bed from time to time. He had been treating with 'specialists' who had given him seven injections of salvarsan. They told him that three injections would cure him, but he was growing worse, in spite of all. He had received about sixty intravenous injections of mercury, and about thirty intramuscular injections into the buttock (gluteal muscles.)

"And with all that curing the poor fellow was worse. He was badly infected. In fact, the Wassermann test showed him to be 'four plus' which is a bad syphilitic infection.

"On November 11, 1916, he put himself under my care, I gave him absolutely no treatment, but I put him on a diet of fruits and succulent vegetables in generous amounts; baked Irish potatoes and dark bread in moderation; milk and buttermilk in moderation; meat, eggs and fish not at all; raw salad vegetables once a day. I had him take exercise, fresh air and water, and asked him to apply friction to the skin the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night. With minor variations this was the 'treatment.'

"His coated tongue cleared up; his swollen throat became normal; his eruptions disappeared; his swollen glands grew smaller and smaller. In three months he had nice, smooth, velvety, pink skin from head to foot.

"On March 3, 1917, he returned to the laboratory and had another Wassermann test taken. It was negative, indicating that the syphilitic infection had disappeared.

"And that leads me to the conclusion: In syphilis as in other diseases, if one feeds the patient and gets him to give himself such hygienic care that the body manufactures good blood, the disease will disappear. There is no special specific treatment for syphilis. A healthy body will not tolerate the trouble, and it simply vanishes.

"Of course when one gets a case with big sores and ulcers local cleanliness, correct feeding and good hygiene make the treatment.

"Very simple and very effective. And so far as I am concerned I have no desire to keep the knowledge to myself. I have met many doctors who one-tenth believe that rational treatment will cure syphilis, but they lack the moral stamina and the faith

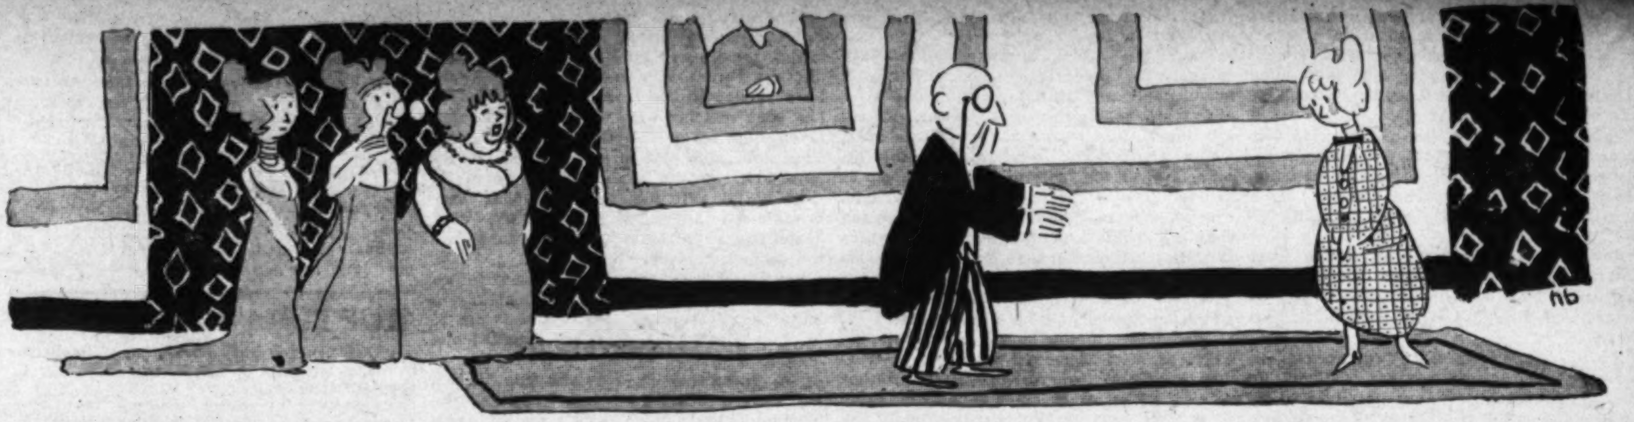
A CELEBRATED BACHELOR DE LUXE.



CONFESSIONS OF A WIDOW.

JUST a year after my husband's death, I went to England. This was pure vanity on my part. I had made a sufficient success of my newspaper work to warrant the little trip—and longed to pose as the prosperous American to my British family. I had about $1500 and decided to blow the lot—to live at the rate of $500 a month for three dizzy months, and take the boy home to show him to the family. You could make quite a nice little splurge on $500 a month in London before the war.

My paper gave me one assignment—to see the secretary of the Panama Exposition in London and get a story on probable British participation. That's how I came to meet the wealthy British-American baronet, who happened to be in the secretary's office when I called.

And I certainly kept my nice middle-class English family on the qui vive while I was at home. The baronet found me most piquant. Invited me to take tea with him the next day on the promise of a good story. Expecting a tete a tete affair, and the weather being quite aggressively English, I wore a plain little rain suit and hied me thither on a motor bus. I only took taxis to impress the family when I took them out. Imagine my concern when I found the baronet was entertaining for me with a stylish tea at which two countesses, a marquis and scores of lesser nobility were on the scene, all arrayed in properly fashionable attire. Dismally I remembered that stunning American dress I had at home. But the baronet was a thoroughbred. He hastened forward to meet me and whispered how much he admired plain tailored suits. He made an extra fuss of me, to soothe my possible consternation. And the countesses and fashionables jumped to their own conclusion. For the baronet is a bachelor of gossipful standing—rumor had married him off a score of times. I was not long in appreciating the amusing state of affairs—and played the game. Insisted upon whispering to him confidentially every now and then—even if it was only to ask the postage to Australia.

The next issue of the naughty society rag which is supposed to be exclusive to the servant's hall in England, but which everybody reads, bore a pregnant question:

"Who is the California widow that is stalking Sir T—?"

Now the wealthy baronet, who had been a princely friend of King Edward's, evidently had a sense of humor, too. He took me and my small son to lunch at the Ritz two days later—alone—and paid us impressive attention.. Ye Towne Gossip duly noted the fact in the society column. Which promptly brought me two invitations from the two countesses asking permission to entertain for me—and Sir T. Regal carriages appeared at my mother's modest home and excited the neighborhood. Beliveried flunkeys knocked at our door.

At the first sumptuous dinner party I was seated between an earl and a marquis—and everyone was most impressively attentive. Sir T. winked at me naughtily on the sly—and we quite understood each other. After the social paragraphs of the affair had appeared, my family had me married to that wicked old roue of a baronet and were quite delightfully resigned about it.

The second party evidently settled the baronet's fate as far as gossip was concerned. Insinuating little paragraphs about a pending announcement hovered in the newspapers. So I frankly told the baronet I was enjoying the joke as much as he was. He sent flowers almost daily to my home—giving my family the flutter of their life. He gave an opera party and exhibited me to the fashionable world. Oh, he certainly gave me a good time. He sent my small son a model of his yacht. He took him to the horse show—without me—and asked people how they liked "his boy." In fact, he did everything in the world except make love to me, which, considering he was 63, was rather nice of him.

And when he came to the train to see me off, bringing a huge bunch of rare orchids with him, winning my family's heart with his obvious amiability and thoughtful little attentions to the older ladies, he pressed my hand and said I should see him in California very soon.

He wrote me one jolly letter after I reached home, saying he hoped I would be his guest at a yachting party in San Francisco when the exposition opened. The next time I heard was a neat little type written letter from his secretary explaining that the yachting party had been called off on account of the war and regretting, etc. So I just wrote a polite little answer—and I wonder whom he is marrying now?

But my family was very concerned about me. Why, oh, why did I not marry the bounteous Sir T.

My California friends were also inquisitive. But remembering my role of "a woman of the world" I have so far been content to smile a sphinx-like smile and sigh gently.

The cold fact that he never asked me sounds so bald. And that other fact that he never even made love to me, but banked quite joyously on my intelligence and sense of humor is too true to be interesting. Now I come to think of it, it is hardly a suitable affair to include in "The Confessions of a Widow."

But then you see the gentleman certainly has a reputation for improper gallantry in five countries—so this is quite an original sort of story about him.

The Fat Mons. Lafarge—Hero.

around me and pretended to take cover behind me. They also asked me if I had not come to the infantry by mistake as they judged me to be a traveling fortification for a 75. After about twenty minutes of this I felt as if some one had kicked me in the stomach, and on looking back sideways to see who had perpetrated this last and crowning indignity, I saw the blood streaming from my open pantaloons. Shortly after the doctor came up, and after a rough treatment said I must be evacuated immediately from the front zone, and passed the word for the brancardiers. Two of these last came up with a stretcher but made an appeal to the doctor as in their opinion a steam crane was necessary. Finally with a door, which was taken from a near-by farmhouse, four stretcher-bearers carried me back with many oaths and at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon I was in the Hospital Majestic, Avenue Kleber, just five minutes away, with Celestine sitting there petting me and using names which I had not heard since the days of our courtship."

"Well, by heaven," said Jerry, "if that doesn't beat the band! But time's up and we will have to trot back with the patient or Dr. Le Mesurier will not allow us to have any more rambles. Good-by Mons. Lafarge, and I am mighty glad to shake hands with you. Paris certainly looked as if it was in for a bad time, and though I have often heard of the taxicab army which Gen. Gallieni mobilized in a few hours and dispatched to Gen. Manoury I have never met any of its members before."

"But Messieurs must take a parting drink of my mother's wine before leaving."

"So we will and with pleasure and here is a toast to the rag-time army that saved Paris and probably civilization."

"Au revoir, monsieur et madame."

"Au revoir et au plaisir, messieurs."

"Au plaisir, monsieur et madame."

On our way back to the hospital I said to Jerry that it was almost unbelievable that such had happened, but he assured me that the story was absolutely true, and that this army was the one thing which Von Kluck had not counted on and which had put a crimp in his ambitious plans. The German Staff, with its perfect spy system, thought that it had tab on every French and British soldier, and this attack on Von Kluck's flank evidently puzzled him and his staff so much that the retreat to the Aisne commenced. That was the time when the British got back at the Huns and made them pay up for their bad times coming south. Gen. Foch also got to camping on their trail and captured their good clothes.

"What do you mean by good clothes, Jerry?"

"Why as friend Lafarge said, there was a programme for a triumphal march through Paris and a dinner at one of the swagger hotels. For this purpose all the Hussars, Uhlans and other crack pets of the Kaiser had their fine blue serge clothes, with gold and silver lace and all the trimmings, coming behind them in trucks ready to gratify the Kaiser's eye when marching down the Champs Elysees, and these trucks were captured by Gen. Foch when the Germans beat it back to the holes they had dug on the north bank of the Aisne.

"I'll take you round to the Invalides one of these days, and show you these and the other trophies which were captured in the several days following the one on which Lafarge was mobilized.

"Well, doctor, here's your patient, back safe and sound."

Why She Couldn't See Him.

THE young lawyer was defending a man accused of burglary, and the woman whose house had been entered was under examination.

"Madame," asked he, "what time of night was it when you saw the prisoner in your room?"

"Close to 2 o'clock in the morning," came the reply.

"Was there a light in the room?"

"No."

"Could you see your husband at your side?"

"No."

The lawyer frowned impressively and shot a side glance at the jury as he fairly thundered: "Then please, madame, explain how it was you could see the prisoner and yet not see your husband?"

"My husband," was the quiet answer, "was at the club."

Saved by His Wit.

LITTLE JOHNNY was hungry and the potatoes were very hot. He discovered the fact after he had taken a big mouthful, and quickly spat it out.

Looking up quickly to see how his performance would be taken, he found his father's hand uplifted and about to descend. Before the blow fell, however, the little fellow got in his word:

"A fool would have swallowed it and got burnt," and in the gale of laughter that followed, punishment was forgotten.

Too Risky.

SPEAKING at a dinner, Congressman Houston of Tennessee referred to the charming fads and foibles of the fair sex and smilingly recalled the following incident:

At a social function one evening one of the male guests began a remark with the words, "I bet she will," when an older gentleman interposed.

"Young man," he added with a positive air, "don't ever bet that 'she' will do anything. You can never tell what a woman will do."

"You headed me off too soon," smiled the young man. "I was going to say that I would bet that she would do the unexpected."

"Don't do it," cautioned the other. "Even that is not a safe bet."

Too Literal.

"SOME people take things too literally," complained Senator Knox during a discussion of the packing-house scandal. They remind me of little Willie, who was discovered by his mother industriously smashing all the eggs in the house.

"Why Willie," she cried aghast. "What do you mean by breaking all those eggs!" and Willie answered:

"I heard papa say there was money in eggs, and I'm tryin' to find it."

Wide Awake.

SENATOR HARDING of Ohio, was speaking about patriotism. "We hear a great deal of talk about it, but I'm afraid in a great many cases these so-called patriots are very much like the young lady who was entertaining her beau, back home on furlough.

He was relating some of his thrilling experiences and remarked, "We were having a terrible time until the French brought up their 75's."

"Isn't it splendid," she cried, "that men of that age should be in the fight."

Born for the Job.

"SOME men seem to have been born for the jobs they hold," remarked Senator Underwood. "There's Hoover running the food, Crowder handling the draft, and Schwab building the ships, and they fit these important positions as aptly as the old farmer who was driving along the lane that chanced to pass by a golf course.

"What's that?" he demanded.

"Golf," replied his city-bred nephew. "Do you want to try your hand uncle?"

"Don't mind if I do," declared the farmer

The nephew pointed to a flag on a hill 250 yards away. "At the foot of that pole," he said, "is a little hole. The object of the game is to put the ball in the hole with the smallest number of strokes."

The farmer took the club, sighted for some time, and then let go a whale of a swat. The ball sped unerringly towards the flag. It fell short, bounced, rolled, and wound up a hair's breadth from the hole—a phenomenal shot that made the experienced players gasp with astonishment.

"Hang it all, I missed it," the farmer exclaimed.

Too Much So.

"A POLICE court isn't all grim and sordid," remarked Judge White the other day. "Sometimes something really funny happens. Not so very long ago a chauffeur was brought in after having run down a man.

"Didn't you know that if you struck this pedestrian he would be seriously injured?" I asked.

"Yes, sir," replied the chauffeur.

"Then why didn't you zigzag your car and miss him?"

"He was zigzagging himself, and outguessed me, Your Honor," was the answer.

* * *

Being Spoilt.

THEY were discussing Christy Mathewson, and one fan remarked:

"I'm afraid he won't be able to pitch much longer."

"What's the matter—pitcher's lameness?"

"No! Writer's cramp!"

Swift Pace.

PREMIER LLOYD GEORGE, speaking at a dinner, was explaining that while war was a horrible thing, it developed nations faster than any other one thing. He pointed out that war brought about more inventions, more medical discoveries, and developed more poets and writers than did peace. It has even extended to private families.

"A friend of mine recently became the proud father of a lusty boy. For three nights he bravely walked the floor, but on the fourth, when he came home from the office, he brought with him a bottle of soothing syrup.

"Oh, James," exclaimed his wife when she saw the label. "What did you buy that for? Don't you know it is dangerous to give to a child of this age."

"Don't worry," retorted her husband, "I am going to take it myself."

* * *

Getting Even.

"THERE is a limit, even to war economies," declared Representative Romjue.

A certain selfish man came home the other evening with an enormous bundle.

"Matilda," he said, "You know those wonderful 40 cent shirts and 15 cent neckties that you bought me last week, so that I could put more money into the war loan?"

"Yes."

"Well," the man went on, "I stepped into the same shop today and bought something for you. It's a beautiful red and green checked dress material, and I got you eighty yards at 6 cents a yard. The clerk said it would make enough dresses to see you through the war."

* * *

Those Short Skirts Again.

CHARLES BELMONT DAVIS, the writer, was talking about the American Labor Mission's tour of the Allied countries.

"The young ladies' fashions amazed me, especially in London," he said. "The shortness of the London young lady's skirt was—was a revelation."

"Yes, they were what you might call ultra. Indeed, you might say they were knee plus ultra."

* * *

Losing a Ticket Was Easy.

DIRECTOR-GENERAL CHARLES M. SCHWAB told this one when he was in Los Angeles:

"Every year I take my brass band from the Bethlehem works to New York for a week, and give them a good time. The members of the band were coming home from one of these trips. The train conductor came along. He poked one of the sleeping bandsmen and asked him for his ticket. The bandsman looked through all of his pockets many times, and finally said, sleepily:

"I guess I must have lost it." And then started to go back to sleep again, for he was tired and had had rather a busy time in New York, I'll admit.

"Come, come," said the conductor. "It must be somewhere. You couldn't have lost it."

"Couldn't?" said the bandsman. "I'd like to know why not? I lost my bass drum yesterday."

* * *

Defending His Own.

A BROTHER Senator was twitting Senator Jones of New Mexico on the illiteracy of the vast majority of his constituents.

"It's all a matter of the point of view," retorted Senator Jones. "When it comes to breeding and education, I am reminded of the self-sufficient young matron in the Pullman car.

"'Mary,' she said, to her 8-year-old daughter. 'Don't you see the people looking at you. Stop stretching your gum out into a string. Chew it like a lady.'"

* * *

Taking no Chances.

KATHERINE STINSON, the famous aviatrix, who is doing her best to win a commission in the Flying Squadron and go to France, gave her idea of the Germans at a dinner the other day. She said:

"Nobody believes them—take Switzerland for example.

"Germany, not long ago, solemnly swore to Switzerland that its neutrality would not be violated. Switzerland's answer was to send out a hurry-up order for 350,000 gas masks."

* * *

Couldn't Understand.

"THE problems which confront Uncle Sam in the present crisis are beyond the understanding of a great many people," declares Dr. Frank Bohm, the author and lecturer. "Many of them remind me of a little story that I heard the other day."

"Pop."

"Yes, my son."

"Why does a cow chew at night?"

"Well, my son, a cow takes food during the day, and then chews her cud at night."

"But, say pop, isn't that hoarding food?"

* * *

Bound to be Unlucky.

REPRESENTATIVE BOOKER said the other day, "Sarcasm has wrecked many a marriage. A lady said to her husband at an east side resort one moonlight night:

"Darling, when you proposed to me, did you think I'd accept you?"

The man who had the gift of sarcasm replied:

"Yes, love, I did, for on my way to your father's house that night, I saw the new moon over my left shoulder, walked under a ladder, and heard a dog howl."

* * *

His Bit.

CHAIRMAN DENNIS of the local draft board was berating a would-be slacker. "It won't be much of a story, will it?" he said.

"What?"

"When your grandchildren ask you what you did in the Great War, all you will have to tell them is that once a week you went without meat."

* * *

Sinister.

THE latest German defense of hospital bombing led Representative Tague to remark:

"That defense is as sinister, and it shows conditions as rotten, as the speech of the rich business man, who chuckled:

"I ought to get myself a new typewriter. The paint is all coming off this one. Just look here on my coat."

* * *

The Bright Side.

MAJ. TURBELL, recently awarded the Distinguished Service Cross by Gen. Pershing, remarked, after receiving the decoration:

"What I did was nothing. For real bravery and spirit go to the hospital camps. The other day I visited one, and stopped for a moment to chat with a Tommy who was trying to master the task of navigating on a wooden leg.

"I must have looked my sympathy, for the Tommy smiled and said:

"'I don't mind at all. In fact, this here limb's got a lot of advantages. Just think, instead of being bothered with garters all the time, all I need to hold up my socks is a couple of carpet tacks.'"

Some Exceptions.

SECRETARY McADOO, in commenting on the sales of War Savings Stamps, took occasion to remark upon the splendid work done by the pretty motion-picture actresses.

"It's a funny thing," he remarked, "but I know of hundreds of cases where men had refused to buy stamps from other men, but later bought them from the screen beauties. I heard of one, however, who was an exception:

"'Why didn't you buy your War Stamps from me,' asked the girl, and added, 'some other girl was prettier, I suppose.'

"On the contrary, I bought mine of a girl who was plain enough so that I could get a little credit for being a patriot."

After Forty.

"HAS gray hair disappeared?"

The speaker was Vanderbilt Allen, who was addressing a fashionable woman's club. Handsome matrons were to be seen on every side, but not one of them had gray hair. All were golden blondes.

"After 40," said Mr. Allen, "women keep their hair light and their age dark."

Praise Indeed.

GEN. MARCH tells a story on a certain army bootmaker who received a call one day from an officer whom he had not seen for a long time.

"Well, captain," said the bootmaker, "I was afraid I wasn't going to see you again. Weren't the last boots I made for you satisfactory?"

"Excellent," replied the captain, who had just escaped from a German prison. "I think they were the best I ever tasted."

A Just Rebuke.

SINCE the tragic death of ex-Mayor Mitchel of New York his friends are telling all manner of stories about him. One of the best concerns an office seeker, who hastened to the Mayor within an hour after the death of a certain official had been reported.

The man hadn't even been buried when the office seeker reached the Mayor and said breathlessly:

"Mr. Mayor, do you see any objection to my being put in poor Tom Smith's place?"

"Why, no," replied Mitchel, "I don't see any objection, if the undertaker doesn't."

A Foolish Question.

TWO army officers, while ballooning, lost trace of their whereabouts, and wishing to ascertain what part of the country they were passing over, descended, until they came within hailing distance of a couple of farmers. When nearly overhead, one of the officers called out:

"Hie there, Johnny, can you tell us where we are?"

The rustic gazed up at them in much amazement. Thinking he had not heard, one of the officers shouted again, louder than before:

"Where are we?"

"Why you're in a balloon, ain't ye?"

What the officers said when they heard this would probably spoil the story.

Pig-headed.

EX-AMBASSADOR GERARD was discussing Germany.

"When a German gets to talking about Germany's supremacy there is no reasoning with him. He is as unreasonable and pig-headed as the drug clerk.

"A customer asked the drug clerk one hot morning for a plain seltzer.

"What flavor?" asked the clerk, vanilla, chocolate, or what?"

"No flavor," said the customer, "a plain one. Without flavor. Don't you understand?"

"Yah, I understand," said the clerk. "But what flavor you want him mitout—mitout vanilla, or mitout chocolate?"

FILLING UNCLE SAM'S WAR CHEST.

BY A SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

WASHINGTON (D. C.)—War chests of one kind or another have existed since wars began and have been filled in various ways; but today there is a way in vogue unique in the history of war chests and surrounded with human interest, romance and actual sacrifice. It is found in the voluntary offerings made to Uncle Sam's war chest during the present war.

These offerings, now amounting to $19,018.54, have come to the treasurer of the United States from citizens in all walks of life, largely from persons of small incomes, to whom the gift means doing without some comfort or even necessity.

Old soldiers who fought valiantly in the war between the States in some cases are sending a large per cent., if not all of their pensions for the quarter; they can appreciate the horrors of war and express themselves as anxious to see the boys in France provided with all that will keep them in good fighting trim.

Those who do not come under the income tax are sending amounts in lieu of it. Elderly men who have assisted in the taking of the draft as clerks or in some other capacity have sent the pay received for their services. Many of these men write that they are too old to fight, but must do some actual work in the war. Women send their pin money. Those receiving pensions send a generous per cent. of the amount.

A number of thrift stamps have been bought and sent to this fund; coupons cut from Liberty bonds help swell the donations, and little children in various ways make small amounts and send them in.

Donates a Shell to Send "Kiser" to His Reward.

A PATRIOTIC citizen beyond the draft age sends a check to the "Gentlemen of the Treasury; please turn this check over to Uncle Sam; it will buy a shell; it may help to win the war. I hope it will be shell that will send Kiser to his happy hunting ground."

A Norwegian superannuated preacher sends $5, stating that he sends at the same time a copy of his letter to the Kaiser. An English clergyman sends half a guinea to the President, care of the "United States House of Representatives," with the wish that it may purchase a cup of cold water for some soldier, and mentions that when they celebrated the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria in his parish in England the Stars and Stripes were hung behind his pulpit with the royal standard and the Union Jack. There are several other letters in this collection from Englishmen, and they almost invariably end with "And may God bless the King."

A seaman living in Buffalo, N. Y., who seems at some time in his career to have struck the Kaiser on the nose, sends some money with a letter stating that the episode took place on Queen Victoria's yacht, the Victoria and Albert, when he was a small boy. He gives a glowing description of the encounter, also of John Brown, the giant Scotchman and faithful friend of the late Queen, whom he described in "Hiland costume."

Another letter showing a good deal of spirit is from a Californian at San Francisco, who sends $15.58, with the hope that "it might swell to the degree of the Kaiser's egotism, and produce funds sufficient for a wreath of thistles to bridge the Atlantic, over which the good, misguided Germans would no doubt walk, barefooted, in sufficient numbers to depopulate the city, to see the bier of the Kaiser deposited at the bottom of the briny deep to be caressed by the octopus and stomached by the whale."

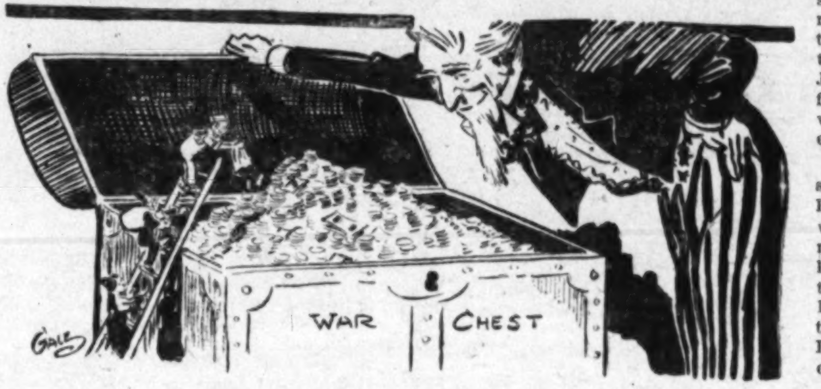
At another time this Californian sends a much larger offering to the war fund, saying, "I would like to ask that this check be accepted in payment of my income tax returns, but if inconsistent with your rules, may I suggest that the surplus be applied toward creating a fund for the purpose of supplying a floral design for the Kaiser's funeral, made principally of poison ivy and bull thisles with the inscription, 'To hell with the Kaiser by the shortest route.'"

Even the Conscientious Objectors Help Fill the Chest.

A CONSCIENTIOUS objector taken to Camp Meade and later discharged for physical defects sends $155.27, the amount of his pay and carfare while at camp, from Sepember 20 to February 20; having done no military duty he wishes this to go as a donation to the war chest. He later sent $200, as he has not a taxable income.

One of the most charming letters is from a Frenchman, born in France, and who spoke only French until he was 20 years old; he served in the war between the States as a private in Company K, Massachusetts Volunteers, Twelfth Regiment, writes that he lost a leg at Antietam and wishes to send 25 per cent. of pension allowed every three months. He closes his letter with, "Dieu protege la Republique."

Sums amounting to $100 are sent by many people who prefer giving an outright gift to their country instead of buying a Liberty bond. A working man sends $5, and several others send $1 with the promise to send $1 a month until the end of the war. Five hundred dollars is sent by an attorney at Boston, the amount having been left in a will by a client as a donation. A little girl sends $1.40, made at a doll show; a little boy sends 10 cents to the President; and a man sends a gold dollar, found when cleaning out an old well. His neighbors thought the find so remarkable that it could only bring good luck to the possessor, so he sends it to Uncle Sam with the wish that "our boys will down the Kaiser and come safely marching home."



Some Quaint Letters From a Quaker Family.

THESE are only a few of the letters; the most interesting bit of correspondence in the lot is one that took place between Gov. Burke, Mr. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, and a gentleman of Long Island, a Quaker, who sent $2000 as his donation to the war fund, and $2000 to the orphans of France. His wife, also a Quaker, not having been consulted about the gift and doubtless feeling somewhat piqued by the neglect, wrote to Gov. Burke an interesting letter setting forth her religious convictions, and stating that the money sent was the result of the joint industry and savings of herself and husband, and that she was averse to its being used for ammunition, arms, or other weapons of war. She also expressed some uneasiness about her foster son being forced to fight despite his religion.

On receipt of this letter Gov. Burke, treasurer of the United States, wrote to her husband, saying that since acknowledging the gift he had received information to the effect that, Mrs. Blank, while very generous and charitable, did not wholly agree with him in the disposition of his gift. He wrote: "I understand that you both have been very hard-working, industrious, frugal, good citizens, and that on account of your frugality and industry, you have been able to save this money, that you both are charitably disposed, but do not quite agree on the disposition of the money.

"I sent the check for $2000, payable to the republic of France, to the French Ambassador before I received this information, and immediately on receipt of the information I put the check for $2000, payable to the United States, in the suspense account, awaiting further instructions from you. I thought it would be so much more acceptable, and so much more satisfactory if you and Mrs. Blank might agree on the disposition of this money. On receipt of this information, I felt as though the matter ought to be held for further instructions, and, if possible joint instructions; for husband and wife, as you know, are 'one,' and especially ought to be 'one' in such matters."

Mr. Burke asked them to talk it all over quietly and stated that whatever disposition they jointly agreed on would be faithfully discharged by the office of the treasurer. Referring to the wife's fear that her foster son might not be exempt, Mr. Burke said: "I understand from your letter that you are Quakers, and Quakers are exempt, because it is against their religious principles to fight; so there is no necessity of worrying over the possibility of the young man being drafted. All that will be necessary for him to do is to claim his exemption on that ground.

"You are now both past middle life. You have lived happily together all these years, and it will be very sad, indeed, if anything should come between you after you have reached the summit and are going down the other side. How well and how beautifully Burns's 'John Anderson My jo, John' applies to your journey together as far as you have gone, and how beautiful it will be to continue the journey until the end."

This letter of the treasurer seemed to smooth the troubled waters ,and while Mr. Blank did not altogether accede to the wishes of his wife in making hard and fast rules as to the disposition of the money. he expressed a wish that it might be used toward building ships or constructive work. However, he writes to Mr. Burke: "If used to overthrow autocracy anywhere, and some Boches get in the way, do not deflect the engine from its course to save them."

A copy of M. Jusserand's graceful letter of acceptance of the amount sent for the benefit of French orphans is in this collection.

the gods. I would not have had the courage to come out, but for the insistence of the captain that he could not wait for me all day. My tunic, the largest size on the wagon, did not go around me within fifteen inches; the sleeves only reached to my elbows; the cap perched on my head like a saucy sparrow; the trousers, well better draw a veil over the trousers as they were far from decent.

"'Mon Dieu,' said madame, 'if only the Messieurs had seen him it would have been a sight for them never to forget. Hearing the noise in our ordinarily so quiet street, I looked out and saw Jean in his costume. On descending and asking the officer in charge, I was told that the Huns were at the gates of Paris, and that a special mobilization order had been issued during the night calling up every available reservist, and they were being dispatched to the front by taxi-auto as soon as they were equipped. With these words the captain turned to Jean and said: "Make your adieus to your wife and get into that taxi." Poor Jean, who hardly expected so speedy a summons to the colors, looked at me for an instant, kissed me on both cheeks and said, "Cheer up, I shall soon be back," words whose truth he did not know. Then he turned to enter the taxi. But Jean, as you see, messieurs, was not built by the good God to travel in taxis, and although he tried to squeeze through the door with the aid of several gendarmes pushing behind it was of no use and the last I saw was the taxi bumping over the cobbles with Jean standing on the running board, holding on with one hand, and holding up his trousers with the other, the taxi driver having insisted that Jean constituted a load and that if he got to the front with him he had done all he possibly could.'

"Celeste, there is no need to dwell on that," said Jean; "that does not interest the gentlemen, who wish to hear of the action, not of these insignificant details."

"Mon Dieu, he calls himself an insignificant detail," said madame.

"To continue, Messieurs, while the account of my departure as told you by Celestine is more or less accurate, I arrived finally after many bumps and much profanity on the part of the chauffeur. We could not drive fast on account of our lobsided condition and so many taxis kept whizzing past us on the road to Meaux, each one with a load of reservists mobilized that morning as I had been. I, a respectable bourgeois, was the butt of many a witticism and, in the unguarded position in which I stood on the side of the machine, also received from canaille strokes from their cleaning rods as they passed, the entire line being convulsed with laughter.

"About 9 o'clock we reached the place of assembly, where we fell in by companies. Roughly, promotions of noncommissioned rank were made on the spot, the chevrons of rank being in some cases chalked on the sleeve, and about 11 o'clock we were marched forward. On our left in the distance I could see the burnouses of the Algerian Spahis and the Moors. Shortly after 12 o'clock we were deployed and sent forward in skirmishing order. Then at a whistle we lay down, and firing by volleys was ordered at a low hedge about 900 yards away. You may be sure I was glad to lie down, and I would have been entirely happy at being found worthy to fire a shot for La Patrie but for the rascality of some canaille from the rive gauche, who threw up earth

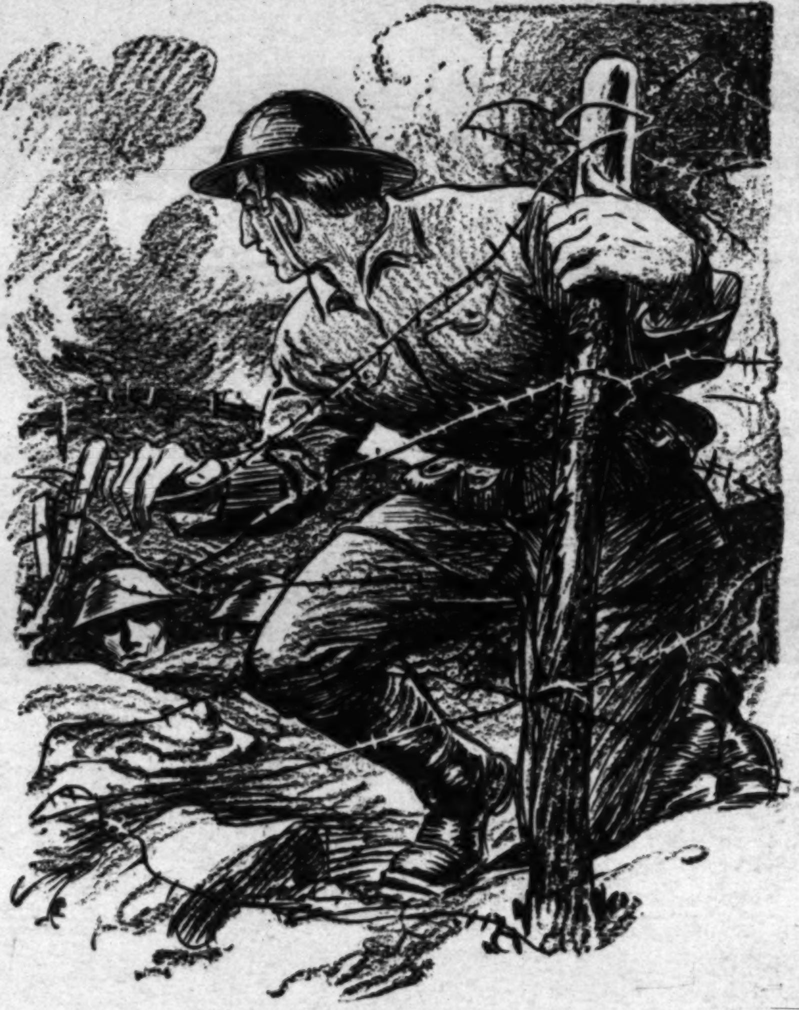
"THE RED SLAYER," ALL-AMERICAN.

BY HENRY LEVERAGE.



He reached the first American barbed wire.

THE road to the dugout back of the first line trenches where the American Expeditionary Forces were stationed was winding and shell-pitted. Down this road a badly banged flivver flew as if the range was short and life was sweet. It rocked and pitched in the new-made crump-holes, it took the ditch at times, but it came on gamely and with speed like a skater over rough ice that might give way at any moment.

The driver of this flivver had cut his teeth with an American ambulance in the Somme sector. He knew that he was within range of the German heavies. This fact was brought home when a Jack Johnson, or a coal-box, woofed over the fringe of his service cap, flattened him with its wind and exploded a hundred meters behind the flivver with a shock that racked the earth and filled the sky with descending dust and rocks.

The driver recovered his steering wheel, pulled down the throttle and advanced the spark. The flivver leaped forward. A second shell was wide and off the road. The third that arrived found the driver below the exposed shoulder of the hill and safe in the tiny valley that led to the dugout. He sprang out.

"Orders from the general!" he announced, giving the right front tire a kick. "Orders and the machine gun ammunition! You'll find it in the rear of the car, captain."

The captain of the outfit rapidly ran over the orders. They were details and conformations that had already been sent by phone from headquarters. One, however, was different. It ran:

"Capt. Stockbridge: Detail three of your men tonight for duty at the Devil's Elbow. Have them locate the German snipers who have sniped Roderick Folk, James Barker and Top Sergeant Pope. I expect you to clear this nest out.

"BRINKERHOFF, Commanding."

"Where in sin's th' Devil's Elbow?" queried Stockbridge, glancing at the driver of the flivver. "I'm new in this sector."

"Devil's Elbow's back there a piece—right this side the hill where the road dips into the valley. It's about two miles from the German flying line—maybe less. 'Suicide Corner,' they ought to call it. It's sure death and flowers to cross there with a light after dark. The other road's safer—but that's all crump-holes now and a sweet range. I thought we were going to drive the Fritzes out of this sector—they act as if they own it."

Stockbridge ran his finger alongside his stub nose. His was the face of a born fighter. His jaw was a block. His shoulders matched his jaw. His fists were the largest in his outfit.

"I'll get Red Slayer after them!" he snapped. "This is a job for him. Good thing we got one Indian in the bunch—I thought he'd come in handy." Stockbridge squinted toward the southern hillside where the road wound like a mottled serpent—the mottles being shell-holes.

"An Indian?" asked the driver.

"All-American—an Apache!"

"Where from, cap?"

"Carlisle! Football star! All-around athlete! Can take a machine gun apart in the dark. Deadshot at 1800 without a telescopic sight. Can lay out ranges as good as a commissioned officer. Knows something about telegraphy and wireless. He's a student and a soldier."

"Oh, shucks!" said the driver. "I thought he was a real Indian!"

Stockbridge lowered his heavy brows with a gesture of dismissal. "Go over to the bunch," he said sharply. "I have some men for you to take back in about an hour—two boys are laid up with shell shock. Take them to Field Hospital C. Tell the C. O. we'll tend to the Devil's Elbow."

The driver saluted with a grin and sauntered down through the communicating trench to a series of dugouts captured from the Germans in a French advance.

Stockbridge watched him, then wheeled and passed into his quarters.

"Corporal," he said to a man at the field phone, "tell Joyce to send me Red Slayer, Goodwin and Big Flannagan after they're fed. Tell him to give them an extra ration apiece—no rifles, but the rest of their outfits."

The corporal saluted, pressed the microphone receivers to his ears and plugged in on the firing trench.

"They'll be over in a few minutes, captain," he said, turning. "Anything else?"

"No! I'll wait."

Stockbridge sat down in his camp chair heavily, and tapped the field desk with the tips of his soiled fingers. There was an O.D. writing tablet there and a photo of a girl so pretty she might have served for a model of a magazine cover. Underneath this photo was "From Harriett, with love." He studied this as he waited.

The first of the trio of soldiers to enter the dugout was the Indian called Red Slayer by the American outfit.

Stockbridge glanced up and surveyed the form of a true North American. His eyes blinked in admiration.

The swarthy skin, the thick, mobile lips, the dark, steady eyes and the long black hair was the outward sign of the savage. The rest—the neat-fitting uniform, the high sloping brow, the hidden promise of muscle under the olive drab spoke of one of the finest soldiers in the outfit. Already slated for promotion, Red Slayer was head and shoulders above the two others who darkened the doorway.

Goodwin was a twisted youth with a loose mouth and a squint of humor which all the horrors of war had not downed. Flannagan was tall, loose-jointed and bent at the back from long stooping below the edge of the shallow trenches in that sector. His hands reached almost to his knees. They were not unlike a gorilla's. The strength that was in his fingers might have been found in a garroter's.

"Red Slayer," said Stockbridge, "you're to lead this squad to the Devil's Elbow, as soon as it's dark. There's been a lot of sniping done there and three men killed. The Germans have got the range with rifles—they are in No Man's Land, somewhere. They're picking off everything that moves after nightfall. We want them stopped!"

Red Slayer did not move.

"We want them killed," continued Stockbridge. "I'm going to leave it to you to figure out where these shots come from. Then you can stalk the stalkers—cheat the cheaters. The road isn't safe for man or auto."

Red Slayer saluted.

"You know where the Devil's Elbow is?"

The Indian glanced at Flannagan in the doorway.

"He knows," he said.

"All right then! That's all!"

Red Slayer moved to the door and passed through. The soldiers fell in behind him. They vanished in the gloom of the valley. Stockbridge, watching keenly, saw that the Indian had loosed a revolver at his side and had fallen into a bent stride that was a far cry from drill sergeant's specification.

Turning to the corporal at the switchboard, Stockbridge said:

"Red Slayer's a mystery to me. I wonder if he will ever revert back to his true form. His ancestors were killing your and my ancestors, and now we're fighting side by side with him. He knows the game as well as we know it. He can figure the base of a triangle if you give him one side and its altitude—he can pass with those Plattsburgers any time, but he's an Indian, and I'm waiting to see him revert. Blood will tell."

"It's his first detail—it will be worth watching," was all the careful corporal would say.

It was a long mile down the shell-pitted road before Red Slayer turned, stooped and glanced about. Flannagan laid his big hand on Goodwin's shoulder and pressed him down with a whispered word of caution.

The Indian was taking observation of the surrounding country and that section of No Man's Land that jutted into the cove of the valley where the road was that led over the Devil's Elbow. Star shells burst now and then above the criss-cross of barbed wire. Dead horses, men who had been torn by shrapnel and ruined pill boxes dotted the sector before the two firing trenches of the contending armies.

Below the brow of the hill, and almost midway between the lines, was a wrecked mill with charred outhouses that had been under fire from the American heavies. In one place the thatch of a small cow shed showed against the stone of the wall. Red Slayer eyed this keenly as a star shell drifted across the sky and shed its light down upon the ground.

He shook his head, raised his body to a standing posture and listened. A three-inch gun or a supply wagon was coming over the brow of the hill above them. He could hear the urgent commands of the mule drivers. It reached the Elbow. A star shell rose from the German lines. A rifle cracked from somewhere out in No Man's Land. Its report was followed by seven more shots in spaced succession. A driver cursed in still protest. A mule brayed. The heavy wagon was twisted from the road. A second mule was struck. The entire team broke into a gallop. It came thundering down the hill and overturned in the valley where the road reached the level stretch that led to Stockbridge's dugout.

"Sniped!" exclaimed Flannagan. "Th' Huns winged th' wagon. Now where in blazes did them shots come from?"

Red Slayer's answer was to grunt a warning, then to drop on hands and knees and crawl up the slope toward the white roadway. Flannagan booted Goodwin and followed.

"Keep below the skyline," he whispered as he saw that Red Slayer had taken this precaution. "Keep below, and follow the Indian—he's got a clew—an' may the Kaiser help th' Fritzes if he locates their sniping joint. He'll dig 'em out like old Haig dug them out of Lens."

Red Slayer led the way through the gloom till he reached the edge of the white road just below the Devil's Elbow. He rested there as the two soldiers crawled up. They all turned and watched the wicked flares of the German guns as they stabbed the velvet line back of the firing trench. Heavy reports over the brow of the hill showed where the shells had landed. The reply to these was a drum fire of British and American heavies that died to a slow tocsin, then lashed to hurricane intensity.

The Indian turned and studied the road. His dark face flushed and glowed as he made a mental note of the surroundings. He flattened himself upon the dust and peered down into No Man's Land with the steady expression of a waiting puma or cougar. He breathed slowly, his eyes holding expanding irises of super night sight.

He was a unit in the greatest fight in the history of the world. His part to play that night was simple. There were a thousand places in No Man's Land where the German snipers could be hidden. It would be impossible to find them in the good, old way. Modern science and his years of intensive training at Carlisle suggested that the matter should be taken through the agency of mathematics and applied angles.

He turned to Flannagan.

"Go back to the dugout," he said briefly, "and get a lantern and a long board with canvas frames on each side. Put the lighted lantern between the canvas and drag the board over the top of the Devil's Elbow. When the snipers fire—stop! Don't move the plank!"

"Very good, sir," said Flannagan, with a side glance at Goodwin.

Red Slayer waited as the tall American glided down through the gloom and was swallowed up by the underbrush of the valley. His eyes were fixed upon the wide shell-pitted expanse of No Man's Land. The hidden German snipers were undoubtedly equipped with rifles capped with flare-consumers so that the flash of their fire could not be seen from the road. They probably had telescopic sights as well and a perfect range of that portion of the road that crossed the shoulder of the hill.

Flannagan appeared finally. He was bent almost double. Behind him scraped an eight-foot plank with a tiny lantern set down between two walls of canvas. The light shone through, as Red Slayer had calculated. It was for all the world like an ambulance crawling up the slope of the hill. Flannagan passed the waiting Indian and Goodwin. He went on in silence. He reached the exposed bend at Devil's Elbow. He crouched lower as he dragged the plank inch by inch along the stony road. It swayed, stopped and went on to the top. Goodwin swore softly into the waiting Indian's ear. They both were watching with straining eyes the dark void that marked No Man's Land.

A shot cracked. A bullet whined upward. Another and another followed. There was a curse from Flannagan. Red Slayer dropped to his knees, wheeled and crawled up the road. He rounded the plank and came face to face with Flannagan, who was stretched upon his stomach. The lantern was out. It had been shattered by the first bullet. Red Slayer grunted with approval.

"Don't move it," he said. "We have got them—now!"

Flannagan watched as the Indian blocked the plank with stones taken from the road, then stopped and peered through the two bullet holes that had snuffed the lantern. The line through them, from canvas to canvas, and carried down to No Man's Land would mark the spot where the German snipers were.

Red Slayer sighted through the openings. He grunted, then drew out a scrap of paper and a pencil. The figures he wrote with their algebraic signs were Greek to Flannagan. The Indian held them out finally, where a tiny patch of light came from the moon that drifted through a fleece of clouds.

"Not enough," he said. "We must try again. Move the plank just twenty yards for a base and light the lantern."

"The shade broke," said Flannagan.

"Light the wick—then get out of range. I want a second reading. Afterward, we will get 'em!"

Flannagan liked the "we will get 'em!" It sounded like business. He minded the plank, waited, then touched a match to the wick. He dropped away in time. A bullet whined up from the gloom. It passed over the wick but through the canvas. Another came that struck the base of the lamp and dashed oil into Red Slayer's face. He wiped it off with his sleeve, flattened out, and crept to the canvas. The sight he took through the first bullet hole was checked with a second sight from a different base distance. He went over the figures in the pale moonlight. He stretched his hand and motioned for Flannagan to crawl up.

Flannagan followed the Indian's pointing finger and saw a white blur between two patches of broken roadway that had been pounded flat by the French and American heavies.

"They're in there!" whispered the Indian.

"What is it—Red Slayer?"

"Culvert—concrete bridge—blocked with stones." Red Slayer's English was almost perfect.

Flannagan started to draw his knife. Goodwin wormed along the dust of the roadway.

"You two stay here," said Red Slayer with a frown. "Stay right here and watch—I'll go alone."

"But," said Flannagan.

"An' me," whispered Goodwin with a half whine. "I want to get a whack at them Fritzes."

"You'll both stay here!" Red Slayer's voice was final. It contained new strength. He tapped his revolver, bent and removed his army shoes and glanced up keenly at the drifting clouds and the lighter spot that marked the moon.

"I'll be back in an hour." Red Slayer had lowered his legs over the edge of the road. "If I don't come back in an hour report to captain—that's all!"

Flannagan lay back and closed his eyes.

"So long," he said unfeelingly.

Goodwin parted a clump of bushes and tried to watch the passing of the redskin. He heard no sound. The form on the ground below the road blended into the gloom of the valley. It was like the progress of a jungle cat. The silence of No Man's Land weighed upon Goodwin's conscience. It was not right that one should go against a nest of snipers. He had scant hope of Red Slayer being able to clean it out single-handed.

A star shell rose from the German firing-line. It bathed the criss-cross of stakes and barbed wire before their battered but defiant position. Beneath the glow of the slow-dying fire Goodwin marked the position Red Slayer was advancing upon. It was almost impregnable. Blocks of concrete barred the entrance—its exit was screened by the wreck of the road that sloped off in rip stone and dirt toward the vigilant German first line, where keen-eyed watchers were evidently stationed for any surprises.

Once, only, Goodwin saw any sign of the redskin. This was upon a flat patch of light midway between the Devil's Elbow and the concrete culvert. The restless Germans had burst a star shell with abrupt suddenness over the sniper's position. Red Slayer remained rigid, then, as the light paled, he had wormed forward to the deep shelter of a smashed hedge.

Goodwin narrowed his eyes. He saw no more. He turned to Flannagan, after a long wait, and asked him the time. Flannagan dragged out a battered watch and consulted its luminous dial.

"Eleven seventeen," he yawned. "Th' Indian's been gone three-quarters of an hour."

Goodwin twisted his mouth. He spread himself flat on the road and waited for the blood-curdling yells which were to be expected. The Indian had probably crawled to the German side of the sniping post and then had entered like a serpent. The snipers would be watching at the American end of the position. There would be a swift rush, Goodwin figured, and then yells as the Indian finished his work.

He strained his eyes as a sharp volley of machine-gun fire sounded from the German first line. This fire, he concluded, after a wait, was directed at the American line where Stockbridge had posted a squad of twenty men in an advance position. This position was in danger of a raid at any time. It would be possible for the Germans to cut it off from the laterals and the salients by a high-angle barrage fire.

The machine gun stopped suddenly with a half-cough. The silence of the grave again filled No Man's Land. Goodwin nudged Flannagan, who seemed to be sleeping. He rolled over, dragged out his watch for the second time and squinted at the dial. "Thirty-one—thirty-two," he said. "His hour's up!"

Goodwin turned. The silence of the valley below the road was broken by a slight sound. A figure, blurred and menacing, rose before his straining eyes. His hand dropped to his automatic as Flannagan cursed and backed away.

"It's th' Indian," whispered Goodwin. "It's Red Slayer."

Red Slayer chuckled as he crawled over the edge and reached to the exact position he had laid his shoes. He drew these on and wound the laces. Goodwin glanced from his dark face to the revolver at the Indian's belt.

"How about it?" he asked.

"Got 'em! Two of 'em! Guns down there! No good—I broke them and threw them away."

Flannagan swore beneath his breath as he glanced at the Indian's face. The eyes of the redskin glowed with half-suppressed savagery. Red Slayer caught the glance and rose.

"We'll report," he said. "Leave the plank and lantern where it is. Perhaps we can use it some other time."

Stockbridge was half-sleeping against the doorway of the dugout when Red Slayer arrived, followed by Flannagan and Goodwin. He straightened his camp stool and stood erect as the Indian saluted, then dropped his hand to his belt.

"I've to report, sir, that the two snipers who were sniping the Devil's Elbow have been taken care of. I got 'em!"

The captain of the squad shot a keen eye over Red Slayer's figure. He closed one lid as the Indian smiled grimly.

"How'd you get them?" he asked.

"I got 'em! They were fixed up nicely, too. I don't think you will have any more trouble at Devil's Elbow, captain."

Stockbridge glanced at Flannagan and Goodwin.

"Did you go with him?" he asked.

"Nope, captain! We stayed at the road. Red Slayer said he'd play it solo—guess he did! We didn't hear nuthin' did we, Flannagan?"

The tall American shook his head.

Stockbridge turned again to Red Slayer.

"Well, if you got them, it's all right. It's two less snakes in the world."

Stockbridge paused and toyed with his mustache. He shot a quick glance toward the corporal at the field telephone. His eyes wavered and fixed upon Red Slayer.

"Report to your position in the firing trench," he said. "Tell Lieut. Armstrong to keep well under cover with all his men. The chances are the Germans will discover their snipers are out of commission and will try us with a few shells. They don't get over these things in a hurry."

The three soldiers saluted, then dropped down through the communicating trench that led to the firing line. Stockbridge turned to his corporal.

"No sign of reversion to the primitive yet. I rather thought Red Slayer would bring back a trophy or two. He's civilized."

"The war ain't over yet, captain."

"Nor the night, either. I'm expecting a few shells."

The shells came before Red Slayer and his two companions had reached the end of the communicating trench. The first to plunge in front of the American line was a "flying-pig" loaded with 100 pounds of explosive. It shattered a wide area in the barbed wire. Other flying-pigs and rum-jars hurtled across No Man's Land from the German firing trench. Back of this the Krupp-built heavies started a barrage fire upon the valley where the dugout was. It formed a fringe of bursting steel and shrapnel through which relief reinforcements could not penetrate.

Red Slayer crawled into the shelter of a bomb-proof, straightened out and looked around. Five of the squad were there with their rifles stacked against the dirt wall. Through the top of the dugout extended a periscope made out of a watering pipe and two trench mirrors.

The view through this was one of wild wonder. The blackness of the night was stabbed in a hundred places by constantly bursting shells that were directed upon the rusted field of barbed wire. Star flares, Very lights and the hidden flashes from the German guns were reflected from the sky. Somewhere out there a squad of German shock troops were waiting for the raid. They had crawled through their own backed wire. They had been assured by their officers that the barrage would cut off all communication to the American firing line in that sector. The plum was ripe and waiting to be plucked. It was suicide for any of the squad in the dugouts to man the trench line with the barrage falling.

Flannagan succeeded in dashing from the dugout to another. He returned bringing word that Stockbridge and ten of a squad had worked their way along the communicating trench to the first line. This squad had two machine guns, with ammunition.

Red Slayer, with the others in the dugout, nursed no delusions as to what was to come over the parapet of the firing trench when the German artillery officers were satisfied that the barbed wire was leveled.

They made ready by sorting out Mills bombs and rifle ammunition where it could be hastily snatched up. The fight would be at close quarters, however, and this called for bayonets and knives and revolvers.

Red Slayer drew his revolver from its holster. He slipped two clips of pistol ammunition in his breast pocket where they would be easily got at in the final scrimmage.

His dark eyes swept from white face to white face, which seemed strangely ghastly and unreal in the half light of the dugout. Flannagan rested by the doorway with his ear pressed to the crack. His gas mask was in one hand, his revolver in another. The shock of the shells as they struck about and over the trench shook the earth with a racking reverberation that half stunned the squad in the dugout. Their teeth chattered.

"Any gas?" asked Red Slayer.

"Not yet," shouted Flannagan. "I don't think they'll fire any gas shells. You see they're figuring on coming over the top pretty soon. It wouldn't do to kill their own men, would it?"

Red Slayer nodded. He bent his ear and listened. The hurricane of German projectiles had formed a steel curtain between their position and any possible reinforcement from over Devil's Elbow. The small American force in the trench would have to bear the entire brunt of the attack. They were as much isolated from the rest of the expeditionary force as if they were in the Pacific Ocean.

This hurricane fire deepened into an avalanche of falling shells that drowned out all sound. Red Slayer moved closer to Flannagan in the gloom and clutched his arm. He shouted in order to make himself heard. The din and the turmoil, the rack and roar of the tortured earth, was as of a cataclysm. Nothing could live outside the dugouts. The trenches were being leveled—the road back of Stockbridge's headquarters had been effaced from the map of that sector.

The Indian held one idea in the fore—the Germans would swarm forward at the very second of fire cessation. They, no doubt, had brought forward telephone lines. They were directing the barrage from a point close up to the outer fringe. They were crouched there with "hair-brush" bombs and long knives waiting for the moment of slaughter. Their game was to dash over the top and trap the occupants of the dugouts in the American firing line. Perhaps if this plan succeeded, there would be no prisoners.

Red Slayer loosed the catch to the door, but did not open it. He rested on the balls of his feet with every nerve straining. At his side in the gloom he knew there was a trench sack filled with Mills bombs. These bombs needed but the pulling of a tiny brass pin, a long overhand throw, when the lever would fly away and drop the plunger down upon the cap and the three-second fuse, in order to spread death and disaster to the Germans. Each bomb was loaded with ammonal. They were the last word in repelling an attack or clearing out a trench.

The barrage fire hung at a tornado's height for a full ten minutes. Then, and suddenly, it died note by note till only the outer barrage was heard. Red Slayer pressed Flannagan aside, seized the sack of Mills bombs and dashed outside to the trench—Flannagan followed with the other troops who had been in the dugout. They were in time. A red haze, filled with powder and burnt gases, shrouded the scene of a sanguinary struggle that was all too one-sided.

The Germans had dashed over the top in a score of places. They were the picked shock troops of the entire front. They had special orders to slay as many Americans as possible. More than 50,000 shells had been fired to crush the spirits of the defenders of the firing line. A barrage of shrapnel sprayed the terrain beyond Devil's Elbow. It had severed all communications.

Red Slayer mounted the rear wall of the trench, stooped and crept through the gloom to the dugout where Stockbridge and his newly arrived squad were trapped. They had waited too long after the cessation of the inner barrage. A full score of German troops, in gas masks and shrapnel helmets, armed with long sword bayonets with saw edges, had surrounded the dugout. One of their number had called for surrender as Red Slayer flattened himself on the ruined earth and reached for a Mills bomb.

Stockbridge's answer was to fire point-blank through the door of the dugout. The German went over. Another kneeled to one side of the door, loosed a hairbrush bomb and struck a match. The flame never reached the fuse. Red Slayer, with an overhand swing and a warwhoop, let drive a Mills bomb in the center of the German squad. It struck the edge of the ruined trench, rolled to the bottom, then exploded in a white flare of death and flying steel.

The Indian rose to his full height. He rained bombs down along the trench. The Germans fled over the top of the dugout. A second party had rounded by Flannagan. The work was at close quarters and in total darkness.

Flannagan's shout brought reinforcements. He and Goodwin, who had joined him, were fighting with cold steel. The German squad were joined by others who had streamed across No Man's Land. The fight became general. Stockbridge had succeeded in getting his men out of the dugout. Some were cut down by close-range revolver fire. Others charged along the trench and met the Germans with bayonets and knives.

Red Slayer held his bombs for fear of killing friends with foes. He backed to a lateral trench, searched about and found a Lewis gun that had been overturned by the German barrage fire. It still was in working condition. His fingers went over the breech mechanism and the drum in position. He spread his hand along the dirt and found two other drums almost buried. With these and the gun on his shoulder he detoured close to the German barrage till he reached the ruined road and the concrete culvert where he had killed the two snipers. It was an ideal position to rake No Man's Land fore and aft.

He set the gun across a block of stone, laid the drums at his side, stretched himself flat and squinted along the air-cooled barrel. The grin on his face was unholy.

"I'll get 'em," he said through the grime and blood of his lips. "By and by they go back—then I'll get 'em."

His wait was not long. A star-shell burst overhead with a reassuring blue flare. It was the signal that the Americans in the support trenches and billets had succeeded in penetrating the barrage. It was a call to hold on. Red Slayer blinked at it, then waited for complete darkness.

A tiny green flare from the American firing trench was the German signal that they were quitting the position. The barrage hesitated, then shortened in range. It fell close to the trench. Germans streamed back from the American line. A few had prisoners. Some carried dead—their own. Red Slayer waited with his finger on the trigger of the machine gun. The range was short—deadly. The German raiders were jubilant over their first success with the Americans.

Red Slayer sighted for the second time along the black barrel. His aim was directly upon a German sergeant who was rolling up a field-telephone line. The burst of fire that sprang from the dark mouth of the viaduct was a blast from an unexpected quarter. It sprayed the German raiders. It scattered them. It brought the most of them to their knees and then over in the dust of earth.

Red Slayer released the back-drawn trigger, reached and capped a second drum of forty-seven bullets upon the gun. He aimed with the cool precision of his race. He wasted no bullets. A Lewis gun had been known to decimate an entire regiment. Red Slayer remembered this as he drove a hail of lead and steel along the open space of
